A DAY MADE FOR RACING.

THOUGH NO FAST TIME WAS MADE AT THE OVAL YESTERDAY.

A Thousand Enthusiastic Cyclists Applaud the Efforts of the Flying Wheelmen—Elizabeth Won the County Team Race.

If all the cyclists in New Jersey had gone to Farmer Dunn and demanded perfect weather for Labor Day, they could not have had a day more suited to the wheeling fraternity than yesterday. About 1,000 of the cycling enthusiasts took advantage of this perfect September day to attend the race meet of the Crescent Wheelmen at their oval yesterday. Long pants, short pants, golf suits and bloomers were there in profusion and, although the grandstand was not filled, what the crowd lost in numbers was made up in enthusiasm. The contingent from the Harlem Wheelmen was especially noticeable in their demonstrations. There were a number of their racing men on the track and when one managed to get a place all the light blue bedecked band set up a cheer. The attendance consisted mostly of cyclists who partially filled the grandstand, while the bleachers were about covered.

The track was in perfect condition, Saturday evening's rain giving it a through and much needed wetting. A gentle breeze came from the northwest and aided the riders on the home stretch, although hindering them on the other side. The tumbles were many. R. Kissam, of Fanwood, seeming the most unlucky as he fell in every race he rode. No one was seriously hurt however.

An attempt was made to prevent loafing by placing a time limit on all the events but as most of the riders rode in several races they were allowed to set a slower pace then they would have been otherwise. The time of the races was, in consequence, rather slow, but as most of the finishes were exciting it made up for the slow time.

The management of the meet was very good and Clerk-of-the-course F. L. C. Martin and his assistants, E. I. Serrell, L. H. VanBuren and Roger Erickson, deserve great credit for the rapid manner in which they got the starters out for each race. The races were, in that respect, a great improvement over the last ones as there was no delay in starting. The other officials also performed their duties excellently.

With one exception there was no apparent foul riding during all the afternoon and that exception was in the team race for the championship of Union county and the Saltonstall Cup between the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the Crescent Wheelmen. On the last lap at the short term, one of the E. A. C. men shot out and McCutchen attempted to follow but was driven clear up on the bank by one of the other team who had been angry at him for not setting the pace. The referee did not see it, however, and the Plainfield team would not protest.

The races were for Class A riders only, but the cracks turned out and plenty of pretty riding resulted. The prettiest of which to Plainfield eyes was the two-mile handicap, which T. A. Cuming, of the Crescent Wheelmen, won through a splendid exhibition of team work and good judgement.

A detailed account of the races is as follows:

One-mile novice. First prize, gold medal, donated by J. H. McVey; second prize, silver medal, donated by George B. DeRevere; third prize, bronze medal, donated by John Rickert. The first heat was won by O. B. Mitchell, of East Orange Roadsters; H. Nichols, Jr., of the Bushwick Wheelmen, second, and F. Fellgrall, Jr., unattached, of Jersey City, third. The time was 2.34 3-5. Seven starters. C. E. Coombs, of the Crescent Wheelmen, lost his pedal at the start, but chased after the bunch. P. A. Richards, of the Nassau Wheelmen, pacing. The pace began to grow hotter and A. Garigues, of New York city, took the lead at a rattling speed. H. Nichols, Jr., of the Bushwick Wheelmen, took the lead at the far turn in the last lap, but Mitchell spurted prettily and won sitting up. Coombs finished sixth. The second heat was won by O. J. Gette, of the Bushwick Wheelmen, Brooklyn; H. H. Hirsh, unattached, of New York, second, and H. F. Ricca, of the Riverside Wheelmen, New York, third. The time was 2.59. Eight starters.

The second heat was not as exciting as the previous one, the riders remaining bunched until the last lap. The pace was slow until this lap, and then Gette won with ease in a long spurt. Hirsch took second after a fight.

Third heat was won by A. J. Forney, A. P. Jr. A. C., of Asbury Park; second, M. C. Tattan, Cyclone C. C.,

WALZ STILL HOLDS THE CUP.

RESULT OF THE LAST TENNIS TOURNAMENT OF THE HILLSIDE CLUB.

Brilliant Gathering of Society People Who Witnessed Exceptionally Fine Playing—The Scores—Those Who Entertained.

Not in a long time has there been such a briliant assemblage of Plainfield society people present at the favorite home of the Hillside Lawn Tennis Club as there was yesterday.

The wealth and beauty of this fair city was resplendent in such a beautiful opening of autumnal weather which was simply perfect.

There was an activity on the part of those present that gave life to the charming event. Some old-time tennis players, who have witnessed scores of games, were present yesterday and said that the playing was unusually fine throughout.

The first part was the tournament, and, of course, there was great interest in the results. In the first round Goddard beat Bogart, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2; Beebe beat Moore by default, and Fish drew a bye; Pfeiffer beat McClure, 6-3, 6-4. In the second round Fish beat Pfeiffer, 6-4, 7-5; Goddard beat Beebe, 6-4, 8-6, 6-3. In the final Fish beat Goddard, 7-5, 8-6, 6-4.

Then came the contest for the cup that was won by Carl Walz in 1894.

The match was between Walz and F. K. Fish, Jr. Throughout the playing was superb, and frequently the enthusiastic friends of both players were very much in evidence by their hearty applause as an excellent play was made. After much excitement Walz captured the cup, beating Fish 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

The day was complete through the efforts of the ladies, who so gallantly looked after the social portion of the event.

Mrs. J. B. Dumont received, and was assisted by Miss Marion Dumont, Mrs. Marion Ackerman, Miss Wood, Miss Margaret Yates, and Mrs. D. F. Ginna. The refreshments, which were all to be desired, were in charge of the above-named ladies, and the service was a pleasure to all who accepted the generous hospitality bestowed.

A LABOR NIGHT FESTIVAL.

Fine Weather and An Energetic Committee Make It a Grand Success.

Last evening's delightful weather brought out a large attendance at the Labor night festival of the T. A. B. Society, which was held in their hall last evening.

After two hundred guests paid the price of admission and crowded the hall to its fullest capacity. E. McCue, the floor manager, had his hands full, but being assisted by P. Harrington and C. McCarthy, he performed his duties very satisfactorily. The committee in charge consisted of M. Higging, E. McCue, P. J. Reville, P. Harrington, J. McDonough, and D. J. Keefe.

The music was furnished by Prof. O'Reilly. The festival was a complete success financially as well as socially.

A Touching Incident.

In the Trinity Reformed church on Sunday morning, just before service commenced, as the prstor Rev. Cornelius Schenck was seated on the pulpit platform, organist A. L. Titsworth softly and sweetly rendered a stanza of "Home, Sweet Home." This was followed by the choir singing, very low, a stanza of the same familiar song. The pastor and congregation were visibly affected at the tender thoughts contained in the hymn, and tears of rejoicing at the return of their beloved pastor, restored to health, were noticeable all over the church.

Death of Mrs. Ackerman.

Mrs. C. J. Ackerman, Sr., died at her home on Clinton avenue last evening, after an extended illness. She was the wife of ex Chief-of-Police Ackerman, of this city, and was a favorite among those with whom she was acquainted for her kindly disposition. She leaves several children.

Taken to the Hospital.

Henry Lodobici, of West Dunellen, while passing Rogers sea food market this morning, had a fit and fell to the sidewalk. The ambulance was called and the man was taken to the hospital. He did not remain long, however, for he soon recovered.

Plainfield Jurors Drawn.

The following jurors from this city were drawn this morning at Elizabeth by the Court of Common Pleas: Thomas McCauley, Timothy McCarty, William Ayres, Edward J. Olfsen, and Charles W. Dodd.

A Novel Entertainment.

A grandmothers' tea is to be given in the Monroe Avenue chapel, on Thursday, September 19th, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

THOMPSON WOULD NOT BUY.

COLORED MAN USES AN EXPRESSIVE TERM AND A FIGHT RESULTS.

Marshal Moore Chases One Man Who Escapes as Do the Other Two in the Meantime—After the Scrappers Now.

There was a genuine free fight on Somerset street, near Manning avenue, yesterday afternoon about one o'clock, but there were not many witnesses. Two whith men named Motley and Burke had evidently been effected by the flowing bowl and were walking along Somerset street, with a dinner pail, in which they were anxious to secure some beer. A colored man named Ede Thompson happened along, and they tried to persuade him to do this errand for them. He was willing but the money was not in evidence. The two were persistent, and wanted Thompson to put up the money. This made the latter mad and he used a term that was more expressive than elegant. Motley then told Thompson if he wished to repeat it he could come around the corner on Manning avenue and he would do him up. Marshal Moore then made his appearance and Burke seeing the officer started to run. The latter was fully a half block away from the marshal, but the latter instead of capturing the two that were fighting started after Burke. The runaway went through a yard next to Borough Clerk Arnold's residence and escaped. When the Marshal came back to get the two fighting members of the crowd he found they had skipped. Chief Van Horn was made acquainted with the affair and an attempt will be made to capture them. While Motley and Thompson were fighting the former drew a knife and cut the latter severely. Marshal Moore succeeded in capturing a hat, coat and the knife which were placed in the lockup.

THE LEAGUE GAMES.

Hope Chapel Athletes Contest at Various Sports, with Good Showings.

The athletic games of the Young Men's League of Hope Chapel took place Saturday afternoon at Maltby's track, before a good sized crowd. Owing to the shower they were obliged to postpone the one, two and five mile bicycle races, hop-step and jump, throwing the twelve pound hammer, and the three mile run, until next Saturday afternoon. Medals will be presented those winning the most points, first, second and third. The officers of the day were—Field Captain, John Case; Starter, Arthur Leland; Clerk of Course, Walter Higgins; Scorers, George Firstbrook, Samuel Howarth; Timers, M. Hillman, Andy Muir; Referee, Mr. Newell.

The summaries are as follows: 100 yards dash—Walz 1st; Shirley 2nd; Eddy 3rd. Time, twelve seconds.

Quarter mile run—Walz 1st; Eddy 2nd; Muir 3rd. Time, 61 seconds.

One mile run—Marsh 1st; Stewart 2nd; Walz 3rd. Time, 6:15.

Running High Jump—Eddy 1st, 5 ft. 3 ins.; Wharton 2nd; Walz 3rd.

Standing Broad Jump—Walz 1st, 8 ft. 10 inches; Shirley 2nd, 8 feet 8 inches; Eddy 3rd, 8 ft. 7 inches.

Pole Vault for Height—Marsh 1st, 6 ft. ½ inch; Thompson 2nd, 2 ft. 11½ inches; Meyers 3rd, 5 ft. 6½ inches.

Putting Twelve Pound Shot—Shirley 1st, 31 ft. 5 inches; Alex Muir 2nd, 29 ft.; Andy Muir 3rd, 27 ft. 9 inches.

The following points were scored, but the windup Saturday will make considerable change: Walz 17; Eddy 15; Shirley 11; Marsh 10; Alex Muir 7; Stewart 4; Thompson 3; Wharton 3; Meyers 1; Andy Muir 1.

Third Ward Inspectors.

At a meeting of the County Board of Elections this morning at Elizabeth Louis H. Timpson and Garry H. Wood were appointed to act as Democratic inspectors in the Third ward.

My boy was taken sick with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. A. BARRY, THE KING SHOOTER

SPORT OF THE GERMANS WITH GUNS AT HYDE'S GROVE.

Fourth Annual King Shoot of the Independent Gun Club—An Eagle for a Target—Women Who Have Good Aim.

One of the enjoyable events of yesterday was the fourth annual king shoot of the Independent Gun Club at Hyde's Grove. There was a good attendance of members and the shooting was excellent. There were four prizes, of which the first three were $10 gold pieces and the fourth a gold medal valued at $15.

The target shot at was an eagle. L. Kuntz was given the flag and figure, and won first prize; A. Barry was given the head of the eagle and captured second prize. He also won the king prize, which was the medal. The last shoot was by M. Weber who had the right wing and took the remaining prize.

Mrs. Henry Wedemeyer then shot for the queen prize, a silver cup. She scored thirty-five points out of a possible fifty four, and will hold the cup another year. Miss Yaeger made the presentation in a few well-chosen words.

The Gesang and Turn Verein were present as guests and pleased the audience with some choice vocal music. The balance of the afternoon was devoted to trap shooting for sweepstakes. This was in charge of Lewis VanDyke. Excellent refreshments were served during the afternoon.

THE CONCERT TONIGHT.

CAUGHT IN A SQUALL.

The Naval Reserve Have an Exciting Boat Race.

The four Plainfield young men, who went on the boating expedition of the New Jersey Naval Reserve Saturday, had quite an exciting time. The boat was caught in the squall in the afternoon and broke loose from the tug that was pulling them. Only by dint and hard bailing were the boats saved from sinking.

Sunday there was a boat race and the boat containing the Plainfield boys defeated their opponent. A game of base ball was also played and the Plainfielders were again in the victorious nine. The Plainfield representatives in the party were Edward Tomilson, Edward Mackey, William Boyd and Victor Christofferson.

The Limited Mail Tonight.

All who see this great sensational play, will witness an event surpassing anything of the kind ever seen in this city. The play bristles with thrilling sensations and interesting episodes, and is a drama that should be seen by young and old. It is a play dealing with life on the railroad, and written and dramatized by a life-long railroad man—Elmer E. Vance—for many years train dispatcher and night telegraph operator at the Union Depot, Columbus, Ohio. Consequently every detail may be counted on as absolutely correct. The "star"—if any particular one among a bright constellation of stars may be mentioned—is the wonderful Beatrice, whose artistic acting, graceful dancing and charming singing, will prove a revelation.

Christening.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McIntyre, of North avenue, was christened at St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. Father Smyth. The name given was Charlotte, and the sponsers were Miss Kate Carty, of this city, and Wm. King, of New York.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THAT TERRIFYING QUAKE.

IT WAS FELT IN PLAINFIELD IN THE MOST PERCEPTIBLE MANNER.

Frightening People Was About the Worse Damage Done—Small Bric-a-Brac Dashed to the Floor—Other Incidents.

Plainfield was startled Sunday morning by being in the seismic area. You don't know what the seismic area is? Look in the dictionary. There you will see it is pertaining to an earthquake. Ah yes, the earthquake, you did hear something about that, eh? Well, did you feel it, that is the most interesting question. Some people did and some did not.

Those that felt it assert that the vibration of this great planet on which we exist occurred at about six o'clock in the morning. It was a funny sensation, so say those who felt it. It was so funny that numerous people found that they could not stop shaking after the real shake was over. That was because they were frightened.

The earthquake reporter of The Press had fallen victim to King Morpheus by the time the disturbance came from the direction of where China is supposed to be located, and not a thing did he know of this example of Amazon life until interrogated in the morning. "Did you feel the earthquake?" So long as the reporter has no personal acquaintance with the great disturbance all that he can do is to record what he has heard.

A great many people were awakened from sound sleep to find themselves shaking as though they had the St. Vitus dance, and hearing ornaments on mantels clanking together in a truly sepulchral way. Several citizens of veracity assert that the vibration was such as to precipitate frail things from shelves and dash them to smithereens on the floor. Others proclaim that the demonstration jarred clocks so that they struck. In a number of instances men stated that they thought some one had crawled under their beds, and on the part of the brave they immediately investigated, only to become more and more perplexed. The less fearless stuck their heads under the bed clothes while their hearts went pitty-pat and they drew long breaths. A few people were heard from who claimed that the quaking was hard enough to jar them out of bed.

The queerest sensation of all was to the people on the streets, who, for the time being, seemed to move about in the most promiscuous way. And for them to see trees, big brick buildings and other substantial and immovable objects join in the unpremeditated act of a reckless dance was a terrifying sight.

This was the fourth shock that has been felt in this part of the country in the past eleven years.

Justice Newcorn was among the large number who felt the earthquake. He says he was dreaming at the time that he was being arrested by Sergeant Kiely, for fighting. He sent for one of the city officials, but before he arrived he awakened to hear the dishes railing in the closet. He also felt his bed shake.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of Plainfield real estate are recorded in the last issue of the New Jersey Contractor:

Edward T. Vail, et ux, Union Centre, Ind., to Wm. S. Thickstun, lots Fourth street, $1.

Nelson Runyon, executor, Plainfield, to John T. Sloyan, Elizabeth, lot West Third street, $300.

George F. Pickson, New York, to Frederick C. Waterman, four lots, Netherwood, $550.

Wm. Cline, et ux, Plainfield, to Lewis Cline, lots Second street, $2,500.

To Be Continued.

Four hundred baskets of peaches were on sale at Neuman Brothers this morning and they went like the wind. The sale will be continued tomorrow, with canning peaches from sixty cents to $1. Another specialty will be 100 baskets of choice canning Bartlett pears.

Borough Disturbers.

Grover Cashin, Joseph Cashin and Albert Frieze were taken before Justice Crosley this morning by Marshal Wilson for throwing stones and making a disturbance. The Justice severely reprimanded them and let them go on their promise to do better.

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed in the spring, when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. Only 50c per bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

RACING BY CALCIUM LIGHT.

ENTRIES FOR THE BICYCLE EVENTS AT THE MEET THIS EVENING.

Crack Racers From All Over New Jersey and New York Will Be Present and Contest—The Famous Benner Brothers

For the night races which will be given on the Crescent Wheelmen's track this and tomorrow evenings a big field of professional entries have been secured. The Class A riders include all the best men from New York and New Jersey.

A special feature will be the riding of the Benner Brothers, John and Lewis. The former is four years old and the latter six, and as they pedal around the track mounted on their beautiful little tandem or their tiny single wheels they attract great attention, particularly from the ladies.

There will be two five-mile handicap races each night. This evening the two heats of the professional event will be run and tomorrow night the final and the Class A five-mile handicap. The list of professionals includes Starbuck, who won a sensational race at Manhattan Beach on Saturday; Jay Eaton, the Elizabeth flier; Geo. Cutter, of Boston; Silvie, Mayo, Saunders, and all the others who have so many followers in New York and Philadelphia.

Fun at Boynton Beach.

As usual, the annual excursion yesterday of the Grocers' Association to Boynton Beach, was a success. Twenty-five well filled cars was needed to carry those who desired to go. The trip both ways was made without accident, and the day at the beach was perfect and without a mishap. They returned early in the evening, well satisfied with the day's pleasure.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale at Reynolds Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

G. W. FRAKER CAUGHT

Run Down in the Wilds of Northern Minnesota.

A Boy Was the Gigantic Insurance Swindler's Only Companion—Suddenly Pounced Upon and Handcuffed While Hunting by the Detectives—He Admits His Identity.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 3.—Living in the wilds of northern Minnesota, fifty miles from a postoffice with only a boy for a companion, Dr. George W. Fraker, who planned one of the most gigantic and successful insurance swindles of modern times, was yesterday captured by officers who have been on his track for the past two years. Up to Aug. 12 last there was a standing reward of $20,000 for his arrest offered by the insurance companies. In the latter part of 1893 Dr. Geo. W. Fraker was physician to the St. Elmo hotel, the leading hotel at Excelsior Springs, a famous health resort near Kansas City. Together with seven or eight companions the doctor went fishing on the Missouri river. One day after dark, while in the company of George Harry, James Triplet and Jake Crowley, a negro, he disappeared and was seen no more. These three parties afterwards swore positively that they witnessed his drowning while rowing in a leaky boat, but after a strict search his body could not be recovered.

Loaded Up with Life Insurance.

Some three or four months previous to this he began loading up with life insurance, taking $10,000 in the Kansas Mutual Life of Topeka; $15,000 in the Hartford Life and Annuity; $15,000 in the Providence Savings Life of New York, $10,000 in the Equitable of New York and $8,000 in the benevolent societies of that place, a total of $58,000. Immediately after his disappearance the insurance companies held a conference and discovered that while the doctor's income was only about $1,800 a year his premiums amounted to $1,000 annually. Besides this George Harry and James Triplet, who swore to having witnessed Fraker's death, were men of bad character. Before going on his fishing excursion Fraker had drawn all his money from the bank, saying he was about to leave for California to bring home the orphan children of his deceased uncle.

Full Amount Paid.

After a thorough investigation all the companies except the Equitable refused to pay the claims, whereupon James E. Lincoln, the executor of the will, brought suit in the district court at Liberty, Mo., which was afterwards transferred to the United States circuit court at Kansas City. In the latter part of 1894, after an intensely sensational trial lasting two weeks, the jury, acting under orders from the court, declared for the defense. A new trial was granted on technical points, and in February, 1895, judgment was given for the full amount and a stay of execution granted for six months until August 12, 1895. On that date the full amount was paid to the executor and the companies withdrew their offer of $20,000 reward.

The Doctor Located.

Herrick, who deserves to rank with the best detectives of modern times, obtained a clue in the latter part of 1894, which he has patiently followed ever since until about a week ago he learned the whereabouts and assumed name of the doctor. Thursday night he arrived at Tower, Minn., together with John Wilkinson, chief of police of Topeka, to assist in taking Fraker back. Herrick and Wilkinson learned that Dr. Fraker went by the name of Schnell, and lived with a young man in a woodsman's hut fifty miles from Tower on the Itasca county road. A warrant was secured in Tower and Sunday morning, accompanied by deputy sheriff Archie Philip, they started for the place. About twelve miles from Tower Deputy Philip, who was acquainted with Fraker under his alias as Schnell, saw Fraker's companion in a shanty near the wood, and on inquiring where the doctor was learned that he had moved to this place and was out hunting. The young man was handcuffed and guarded, and about two miles further on Dr. Fraker, with a gun on his shoulder was found.

Seized and Handcuffed.

Herrick engaged him in conversation, when suddenly Philip seized his arms and Wilkinson put on the handcuffs. Fraker thought he had been arrested for killing game out of season, as Philip was also game warden. When the warrant was read to him he was thunderstruck, but admitted his identity at once. He was brought to town together with his companion. Fraker readily agreed to accompany the officers to Missouri without awaiting for extradition papers. In conversation he stated that he had expected his relatives to get a portion of the insurance money and himself some also. He had been greatly benefitted, he said, by the waters of a spring where he stopped and had about made arrangements to buy the place. He would have spent $20,000, he said, in improving the place.

The Swindle Not Planned.

When he left for his fishing trip in Missouri he stated he had no intention of pretending death, but a landslide of the river bank had carried him in and he was obliged to swim the river, and then he decided to go to Chicago. While there he heard of so many ill stories circulated about him in Excelsior Springs after his disappearance that he concluded not to go back, and the temptation to swindle the insurance companies overcame him. On his person was found a charm of some kind. Only two weeks ago a telegram was received at Kansas City from Moberly saying Fraker was under arrest there, but it proved a false alarm. Fraker's hiding place was only a day's travel from Canadian boundary. He had been there about six months, coming into town occasionally only for mail and provisions. The insurance people may be able to recover a greater portion of the money, as only a small amount has been spent.

"Helena" Produced in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Robert Downing opend the Grand Opera house here last night with the first production in English of Sardou's romantic drama "Helena." Both play and players achieved an unequivocal triumph. The scenery, costumes and music were pleasing. The opinion prevailed that Mr. Downing has in "Helena" a play as strong as "Gismonda."

MAYOR STRONG AN UMPIRE.

He Calls the Mount Vernon-Yonkers Game After Four Innings.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Over 3,500 people witnessed Mayor Strong of New York city umpire four innings of a baseball game yesterday afternoon between Mayor Lewis and the board of aldermen of this city and Mayor Penne and the board of aldermen of Yonkers. New York's mayor was met at the city limits by a delegation of the city club on a tallyho. The mayor, after luncheon and a review of city firemen, was driven with a six-in-hand to the ball field of the Y. M. C. A. association. The two baseball teams, who were in uniform, formed in line and marched across the diamond with Mayor Strong leading them, while the band played "See the Conquering Hero Comes." At 2:43 Mayor Strong called out "play ball." The city fathers of Mount Vernon went first to the bat, and were having a splendid time batting the ball over the field when Umpire Strong, much to their astonishment, called Tichenor out at home plate when Alderman Keler of Yonkers had not touched him with the ball. Then came Mr. Strong's first experience in an umpire's position. The Mount Vernon team was on one side of him expostulating over his decision, while the Yonkers team told him that his decision was strictly according to Hoyle. Finally, getting out of patience, the mayor said: "the man is out anyway; the catcher does not have to touch a man at the home plate." After four innings had been finished Mayor Strong, who had to have a chair to sit on and hold an umbrella over his head to protect him from the sun and incidentally from any misjudged ball that might come his way, called the game. Mount Vernon got the worst of his decisions all the way through, and in the fourth inning he was nearly mobbed when he called Mayor Lewis out on the first strike. The score was Yonkers, 14, Mount Vernon, 10.

PEARY RELIEF EXPEDITION.

First News Received—Its Success and Early Return Expected.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 3.—The first news from the Peary relief expedition since its departure was received here last night. It came by the American schooner John E. McKenzie, returning from the Greenland halibut fishery. The McKenzie met the Kite with the expedition at Holsteinburg on July 15, where the Kite took aboard Prof. Dyche, one of the members of the expedition, and sailed again the same evening. Very little ice was reported south of Greenland waters. The McKenzie fished in latitude 68, almost as high as Disco, and saw no ice sufficient to cause the steamer inconvenience. The crew of the McKenzie think the Kite will have no difficulty in reaching Whales sound, where Peary's headquarters are located. The return of the relief party is expected about the end of this month.

GRAY CHARGES SLANDER.

He Sues Samuel Alexander of Hartford for $5,000 Damages.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 3.—William Gray, general superintendent of the Automatic Telephone Pay Station company has brought suit against Samuel Alexander for slander, claiming $5,000 damages. Gray alleges that Alexander called him a thief and used other language defamatory to his character. The suit is the outcome of Alexander's discharge from the employ of the company as general agent. It is alleged Alexander has applied for a patent on a certain part of the Gray telephone on which Gray claims priority of invention.

BOTH HIS EYES SHOT OUT.

Then a Wife Murderer Was Arrested on the Roof of His House.

Vincennes, Ind., Sept. 3.—Bill Carter, colored, yesterday shot and killed his wife. He then reloaded his gun and with his revolver climed to the roof of his house and swore he would kill any man who approached. Deputy Sheriff Bryant went to arrest him. Carter was seen lying upon the roof, and as he poked his head over to look down Bryant shot him in the head and face with a shot gun. Both of Carter's eyes were shot out and he surrendered.

LABOR MATTERS.

Settlement of the Weavers' Strike in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Thomas Develon's Sons., carpet weavers, signed the scale presented by the men, and all of their men went to work yesterday. The surrender of the firm ends the strike which began about seven weeks ago, and which kept about 8,000 workmen and a dozen big mills idle. The employes of the Fairhill Rolling mills have been granted an increase of ten per cent. in wages. This is the second advance of ten per cent. made by that concern within a year.

New World's Bicycle Record.

Denver, Sept. 3.—O. S. Hackenburger, an unattached wheelman, won the 25-mile road race yesterday, establishing a world's record. Time, 1 hour, 4 minutes and 47 seconds. The record heretofore was 1:10. Hackenburger led the 126 following entries two miles at the finish. The race was witnessed by an immense crowd.

Diphtheria at Elizabeth.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 3.—Diphtheria has prostrated several children living on Washington and Rahway avenues. Yesterday two deaths occurred. Health Inspector Putnam says that the disease was brought here from Rahway by children belonging in that city who were visiting here.

An Archduke Injured.

Budapest, Sept. 3.—Archduke Ladislas met with an accident yesterday while out shooting. The archduke, who is 20 years old, was out hunting wild cats when his gun was prematurely discharged, its contents lodging in one of his feet, inflicting a severe wound.

Barbers Fined for Sunday Violation.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 3.—Louis Welde and John Necelini, two boss barbers, were each fined $2 in the police court for working on Sunday. They were prosecuted under the statute which prohibits any secular work on Sunday other than works of necessity or mercy.

Forest Fire Near Egg Harbor.

Egg Harbor City, N. J., Sept. 3.—A large forest fire has started west of this city. It started in a dense swamp leading toward Meeke City, and is consuming many acres of cedar pine. Several houses are in its course.

LABOR'S DAY OF REST

Generally Observed in All Parts of the Country.

The Celebrations, However, Conducted in a Much More Quiet Way. Parades, Picnics and Outdoor Sports—No Red Flags in Chicago—Parade in New York Abandoned.

New York, Sept. 3.—Labor Day was pretty generally celebrated throughout the country yesterday, but in the eastern states with somewhat less demonstration than heretofore. In this city the big labor organizations contended themselves with picnics and excursions and other sports. There was more parading done in Brooklyn than in this city, where that of the victorious Kights of Labor Garment Workers was the most conspicuous feature. The Debs demonstration was the most sober event of yesterday, and brought forth the expression of considerable feeling from the socialistic orators. There was not the slightest symptom of disturbance or disorder, and although the speakers were enthusiastically received, the crowd took things in a business like way, quickly vanishing after the proceedings were finished.

Quiet Day in Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Yesterday was pretty generally observed as Labor Day in keeping with that in other stares, although the state holiday is not until Saturday next. There was a parade of the trades unions in many of the cities and town followed by a picnics and addresses and other recreations. On the whole the day was unusually quiet.

No Red Flags in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—Chicago trades unionists took their annual holiday yesterday. For the first time in the history of organized labor in this city the two elements (the socialistically inclined and the conservative unions) flocked by themselves and two separate celebrations of Labor Day were the result. Altogether there were between 30,000 and 40,000 in line, but they were a divided host. The red flag was not displayed in either procession, police being placed along the lines of march to prevent any such demonstration.

In New England.

Boston, Sept. 3.—Labor Day was generally observed in most of the cities and towns throughout New England by the cessation of business, and in many places by celebrations on the part of the working people. There was nothing unusual at any place, parades, picnics and sports composing the day's exercises.

The Day at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Sept. 3.—Unclouded skies and bracing atmosphere contributed in no small degree to the success of the Monumental city demonstrations held in honor of Labor Day and the anniversary of Sedan. There was a cessation of labor upon the part of all unions and federated societies, and in the afternoon hundreds of stores were closed to allow both employes and employers to participate in the parade and exercises at Darley park, Print Breeze and Alhambra gardens.

Female Bicycle Races.

Trenton, Sept. 3.—Two bicycle races in which females were entered were held at the Trenton Driving park yesterday. The first, a mile race between Miss Cecilia Frazier and Miss Nettie Hovan, was won by Miss Frazier. Time, 3:23. Miss Hovan won a five-mile race against four competitors. Time, 19:45.

Great Display in Quebec.

Quebec, Sept. 3.—Labor Day was celebrated here with a great display. Solemn mass was said in honor of the day and a procession composed of about forty trades unions and societies with allegorical cars and bands paraded through the principal streets. Nearly all the stores were closed.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 3.—Labor Day was celebrated here by a procession and a trip to Island park where the afternoon was spent in speeches.

BUFFALO BICYCLE RACES.

Johnson Wins the $1,000 Purse—Tom Eck Ordered Off.

Buffalo, Sept. 3.—The professional mile race between Johnson, Sanger and Tyler for a purse of $1,000 was the star event on the programme at the Ramblers' bicycle meet yesterday afternoon and nearly 15,000 persons crowded the grand stand and lawn at the Driving park where the races occurred. The big professional race proved a very interesting one, the battle for first place, in all except the second heat, created much enthusiasm and the promoters of professional bicycle racing in this city feel greatly encouraged. After the introductory scramble for novices Edward F. Leonert of the Press Cycling club broke the 25-mile road record by covering the Globe course in 1 hour, 7 minutes and 7 seconds. The three winners of time prizes all broke the previous record of 1 hour, 10 minutes and 10 seconds. The race was won by C. R. Starkweather of Westfield, N. Y., the prize being a team of horses and carriage worth $1,000.

An Exciting Finish.

The first heat of the match race was won by Johnson by a few inches after a magnificent burst of speed in the stretch. Sanger took the second heat, winning almost as he pleased. Johnson led to the head of the stretch where he stopped as if in trouble and was passed by both Sanger and Tyler. Johnson won the final heat and race in one of the most exciting finishes ever seen on the track. Tyler was second, six lengths in front of Sanger. Before the third heat Tom Eck, Johnson's trainer was ruled off the track under the L. A. W. suspension declared by Chairman Gideon some time ago, but which has not been generally observed on other tracks.

Will Not Play in Orange To-day.

New York, Sept. 3.—The New York National League baseball team, which was to have played the Orange Athletic club's team in east Orange to-day, has cancelled the game on account of having to play a postponed game with the Chicago team in New York.

Thrown from a Wagon and Killed.

Meridan, Conn., Sept. 3.—John Shevhan, an employe on Coe Brothers farm, was instantly killed yesterday by being thrown from a wagon drawn by a pair of mules, which became frightened at a locomotive.

HONORED BY EMPEROR

German-American Veterans in Sedan Fetes.

Reviewed by the Kaiser and Given the Place of Honor in the Parade. The Celebrations Continued at Berlin, Hamburg and Other Places in Germany—Several Accidents.

Berlin, Sept. 3.—The city last night presented a most beautiful sight, being everywhere illuminated. One of the features of the night celebration was a procession in which the marchers carried magnesium lights, the brilliancy of which gave a beautiful effect to the streets through which the procession passed. An exciting incident occurred at the moment the troops approached the castle square.

Dashed Through the Crowd.

An immense crowd had gathered to witness the tattoo, when suddenly a fire engine broke through that part of the assemblage in front of the window of the castle where the emperor was to appear and where, of course, the crowd was most dense. Women shrieked in terror, and confusion on all sides was very great. Those in the crowd stumbled over each other in their eagerness to escape from before the engine, but as far as known nobody was seriously hurt. During the afternoon and evening, however, there were several accidents and a number of persons were run over. The emperor drove through the city after 11 o'clock last night.

Americans Honored.

In the parade of troops and veterans on the Templehofer field yesterday the American veterans were given the place of honor in the right wing, near the Steuerhaus. As the emperor approached to review the troops great cheering and commotion occurred. His majesty rode on the ground, followed by the king of Wurtemburg, who was attired in a Red hussar uniform. He was attended by a glittering suite of generals, princes and foreign attaches. The emperor at once rode to the point where the American veterans were stationed, and addressed a few words to each of them, asking in what regiments they had served.

Hamburg Celebration.

In Hamburg the day was generally observed as a holiday. The weather was beautiful and the city was thronged with pleasure seekers. The houses and church steeples in Hamburg and its suburbs were handsomely decorated as was also the shipping in the harbor. Services were held in the churches and were attended by many people. Bells in every direction rang joy peals and patriotism was everywhere at flood tide. The fashionable promenades were thronged all day long, peasants from the country marching shoulder to shoulder with the aristocratic burghers, all intent upon showing their patriotism, while at the same time seeing all there was to be seen.

Parade of Warriors' Societies.

There was a procession of veterans that occupied an hour and a half in passing a given point. The line was made up of 101 warriors' societies, 12 bands and 14 choral societies. The paraders, accompanied by a great crowd of sightseers marched to a point in the suburbs where a field sermon was preached, after which the burgomaster delivered an address. Seven persons were prostrated by sunstroke during the parade.

Died While Offering a Toast.

The banquet last eveing of the veterans at Freiburg, Baden, was brought to a sad termination. Justice Kieser had arisen and was offering a toast to the people and the army when he was striken with apoplexy and died almost instantly. At Frankfort several persons were injured by a premature explosion of fireworks.

CRASHED INTO A TROLLEY CAR.

The Locomotive Upset and the Fireman Killed.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 3.—A train crowded with Newark excursionists crashed into a trolley car on the Greenwood Lake railroad near Singac station yesterday and the fireman of the locomotive, Ernest Preston, was killed. No one on the trolley car was hurt. They jumped when they saw the danger. The trolley car was smashed to atoms. Engineer Duffy of the train escaped by jumping. The fireman, Ernest Preston of Orange attempted to follow, but the engine left the track and fell on him. He was instantly killed. There were 450 passengers on the train, but all escaped.

SALES OF SOUTHERN LAND.

Northern and Western People Said To Have Made Big Purchases.

Baltimore, Sept. 3.—The Southern States Magazine states that recent sales of land along the Mobile & Ohio railroad to northern and western people aggregate 40,000 acres. Of this amount 22,000 acres have been sold to a colonization company organized at Sioux City, Ia., which proposes to take active steps at once to settle people from Iowa and other western states on this tract. The land will be laid out for farming purposes with a town in connection with it for such settlers as prefer town life.

"War of Flags" Ended.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 3.—The war of the flags is ended and the federal colors will be sent to the National G. A. R. encampment at Louisville. Gov. Brown has decided to allow the flags moved upon condition that two union veterans are sent to guard the flags.

Satolli in the West.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 3.—Thousands welcomed Mgr. Satolli, the papal ablegate, and his party when the steamer Northwest arrived late last evening. At the residence of Bishop McGolrick the ablegate shook hands with 5,000 people. He left later for St. Paul.

Eloped with the Minister's Wife.

Olean, N. Y., Sept. 3.—It is now known that Earl White, cashier of the Bank of Pike, who disappeared from this city August 9, eloped with the wife of the Presbyterian minister at Pike. The guilty pair are believed to be in Dakota.

Uprising in French Guiana.

London, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Barbados says that grave fears are entertained regarding an uprising among the French subjects in French Guiana.

LETTER CARRIERS' PARADE.

The Convention Opens in Philadelphia—Thousands Present.

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—Letter carriers from all parts of the country continued to arrive all day yesterday, and when the parade started yesterday afternoon fully 5,000 were in line. Postmaster-General Wilson reached the city at noon under escort of Postmaster Warfield of Baltimore and the letter carriers of that city 250 strong. The Marine band headed the big parade and arrived here shortly after 1 o'clock. It was a particular feature of the days exercises. It was four o'clock when the line of marchers reached the reviewing stand. After the parade luncheon was served to the carriers in Industrial hall, at which the Marine band played a varied programme. In the evening the banquet by the Letter Carriers' association was held at the Hotel Bellevue. It was a purely informal affair. Following the banquet a public reception was held at the Academy of Music. After Postmaster Carr and Mayor Warwick had welcomed the visitors to the city, addresses were made by Postmaster-General Wilson, First Assistant Postmaster-General Jones, C. C. Cowden of Cleveland, president of the Letter Carriers' National association; ex-Governor Pattison, Postmaster Dayton and Postmaster Sullivan.

SCIENTISTS ARE QUIET.

No Report from Them Yet Regarding the Earthquake of Sunday.

Washington, Sept. 3.—Considerable surprise is expressed here that no development in regard to the recent earthquake oscillations, so plainly perceived in other localities, have been announced from any of the scientific bureaus in Washington. When, six years ago almost to a day, the great Charleston (S. C.) earthquake occurred, a distinguished scientist of the Smithsonian institution delivered an address in which he demonstrated that there was a volcanic belt extending across the United States, of which Washington city was the very centre. Elaborate precautions, it is understood, were thereafter taken at the naval observatory and other points to register any future seismic disturbances, but without result. It is said, however, that when the photographic plate of the Washington monument, understood to have been automatically taken at the naval observatory yesterday morning, is developed to-day some indications as to whether that great column 550 high departed from the line of perpendicular during the period of the earthquake shock may be apparent.

NO FULL PARDONS.

Only Some Reductions To Be Made in Sentences of Prisoners.

Rome, Sept. 3.—Prime Minister Crispi presided at a meeting of the cabinet last evening. Among the questions considered was that of granting amnesty to political and other prisoners on the occasion of the fetes that will be held on September 20 in celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the occupation of Rome by the Italian troops under Gen. Cadorna. After the matter had been discussed in all its bearings the cabinet decided to only make some reductions in the sentences of the leaders of the socialist disturbances in Sicily and Massa de Carrara. Among the men who were convicted of inciting the people to riot and who are now suffering imprisonment are De Felice and Barbato, both of whom were returned in bye-elections Sunday as members of the chamber of deputies. The communal council of Naples, which recently decided to take no part in the celebrations in honor of the occupation of Rome, has revised its previous vote and decided to take an active part in the fetes. In consequence of this action the syndic has resigned.

PARDONED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Blueford Foreman, Now in Crow Hill, Will Be Released.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The President has granted a pardon in the case of Blueford Foreman, convicted in the United States district court for the western district of Arkansas, for assault with intent to kill and sentenced on March 30, 1894, to two years' imprisonment in Kings county penitentiary and to pay the costs of prosecution. The term of this convict will expire on September, and the pardon is granted only on the representation of the prison physician that the prisoner is completely and incurably blind.

Turkey Still Holding Off.

Constantinople, Sept. 3.—The promised imperial decree proclaiming general reforms throughout the Turkish empire did not appear yesterday, the anniversary of the sultan's accession, as was expected. The ambassadors of the powers interested are now insisting upon the appointment of a mixed committee of control.

Brooklyn Has a Good Reputation.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 3.—Mayor Frank Rader of Los Angeles, California, is in this city, the guest of Police Superintendent McKelvey. He says that he is on a tour of the east studying the social, evil and liquor problems, and he came to Brooklyn, he said, because he heard it was the most moral city in the United States.

Death of Dr. Charles Beck.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 3.—Dr. Chas. Beck, son of Dr. S. S. Beck of this city, died yesterday in West Superior, Wis., of typhoid-pneumonia, after a week's illness. Dr. Beck was a Yale oarsman and football player from 1879 to 1883, and he played three years on the University of Pennsylvania eleven.

Breckinridge To Stump.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 3.—This morning Colonel W. C. P. Breckenridge announced that he will make his first political speech in the democratic state campaign on September 21, at Williamstown, Grant county. No other dates have been arranged.

SIXTY WERE INJURED

Rear-End Collision on Coney Island Road.

Wild-Cat Engine Dashes into a Crowded Excursion Train—Men, Women and Children in the Wreckage—Cars Smashed into Kindling Wood and Burned.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 3.—An appalling railroad accident occurred late yesterday afternoon near the Woodlawn station of the Sea Beach railroad. While engine No. 3, drawing seventeen cars crowded almost to suffocation by excursionists, was standing at the Woodlawn station a "wild-cat" engine came thundering along the tracks in its wake and crashed into the rear car, telescoping it. The car was full of passengers, most of whom came from New York. Many of the people saw the engine come tearing along and jumped from the train and thus saved their lives. The great majority of the passengers were on board at the time, among them a number of women and children. A colored porter on the platform, who saw the engine coming along without fireman or engineer, yelled to the passengers to make their escape.

Smashed into Kindling Wood.

The wildcat smashed into the rear car smashing it into kindling wood and burying men, women and children beneath it. There was a mad rush of surging humanity from the doomed train. The groans of the injured filled the air, and the snorting and puffing of the imprisoned engine made a deafening noise. For some time the scene was a regular pandemonium. Scarcely half a dozen people kept their heads or were able to render assistance to the injured. Ambulances were summoned and five of them from surrounding hospitals promptly responded.

Four Cars Burned.

In the meantime the woodwork of the wrecked carriage caught fire and was rapidly in a blaze. Four cars were completely destroyed before the train hands were able to uncouple the cars. As soon as it was detached the engine drew the other cars out of danger. By this time all the passengers had disembarked and there was the wildest kind of excitement. It was thought that at least ten persons were killed outright. People rushed from the nearby houses and the telephone and telegraph wires in every direction were put in motion to call for aid to the injured. Four cars were telescoped by the force of the collision.

Became Unmanageable.

The wild-cat engine was used for shunting trains at the Sixty-fifth street and Third avenue depot of the Sea Beach railroad. It became unmanageable and dashed forward throwing the engineer and fireman from the cab. There was no obstacle then to the engine. It dashed along the track at a fearful rate of speed until the terrible crashed came.

All May Recover.

About sixty persons, including men, women and children were more or less injured. Most of the victims belonged in New York city although several were from Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and other nearby points. Of the number injured thirty-two were taken to the Norwegian hospital, four to the Seney hospital and two to St. John's hospital. At the various hospitals it was said this morning that none of the injured would die.

Engineer and Fireman Arrested.

Police Captain Burford reports that engine No. 6, in charge of engineer Frank Jansen and fireman Arthur Ross, was shunting cars at the depot when it suddenly became unmanageable. In spite of the efforts of the engineer it was backing into an empty car and he reversed the lever and the engine jumped forward without control. Both men jumped off to save their lives. Then the engine dashed along the tracks thus causing the accident. Jansen and Ross were arrested. The superintendent of the road says the lever became jammed and the only means the engineer and fireman had to save their lives was by jumping from the locomotive.

METHODISTS TO POPE LEO XIII.

They Ask Him To Aid in Securing Religious Liberty.

Chicago, Sept. 3.—The committee of Chicago Methodist clergymen appointed to ask Pope Leo XIII. to aid in securing religious liberty to the Protestants of several South American countries reported yesterday. The report states the matter has been placed before the Catholic authorities at Rome, and that they had given assurance that the petition would be carried to the pope. The committee expressed the belief that the matter would receive favorable consideration by Leo XIII. and that the agitation of the question would result in great benefit to the Protestants of Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia.

PLOT AGAINST THE CZAR.

Bombs, Arms and Revolutionary Pamphlets Seized.

London, Sept. 3.—The Chronicle to-day publishes a Vienna dispatch saying that advices received in that city from St. Petersburg are to the effect that the Russian police have discovered a widespread plot against the life of the czar and other members of the imperial family. Some of the leaders were quietly arrested. Bombs, arms and revolutionary pamphlets have been seized by the police of Moscow during domiciliary visits.

Nominated by Jersey Populists.

Trenton, Sept. 3.—The populists of New Jersey held their state convention here yesterday and nominated William B. Ellis of Trenton for governor. The convention indorsed the Omaha platform, the Swiss referendum and initiative and woman suffrage. A telegram of sympathy was sent to Eugene V. Debs.

MacVicar Probably Drowned.

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 3.—On Friday last James MacVicar, of Mont Clair, N. J., started from his camp at Mullett's Bay for Thompson's Point in a row boat. Yesterday the boat was found battered to pieces on the shore. It is probable MacVicar was drowned.

Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 3.—Hon. J. C. Patterson was sworn in as lieutenant-governor of Manitoba here yesterday.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

September 3—"The Limited Mail" at the Stillman Music Hall.
September 3—Evening races at the Crescent Oval.
September 4—Continuation of evening races at the Crescent Oval.
September 6—Smoker of Somerset Council.

Persons leaving the city for the summer can have The Daily Press mailed to their address for ten cents per week. The address will be changed as often as desired.

Jersey lightning and African earthquakes within a few hours of each other is a little more of display of the elements than is really to be desired.

The People's party met in State convention yesterday at Trenton, and nominated William B. Ellis, of Trenton, for Governor. Their platform declares for equal suffrage, without regard to sex, and sale of liquor by State itself.

Congressman John T. Dunn spoke at a big picnic in Bayonne yesterday on capital and labor, and their dependence on each other, and proclaimed that the war cry must be: "Protected plutocracy must die or it will kill the Republic."

CITY COURT BUSY.

Judge Coddington Renders Judgement in a Number of Cases.

While most of Plainfield was enjoying a day of rest and recreation yesterday, the city court had more than its usual share of work. The first to come up before Judge Coddington was Ferdinand Bader, who was arrested Saturday evening by Officer Totten, on complaint of his wife, for being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $5, and paid it.

Martin Long and Frank Buck had a gay time on Washington street Sunday morning, and each had to pay $10 for quarreling and fighting.

An individual who called himself Albert Tibbo was the next prisoner, and he was charged with trespassing on the cars. Judge Coddington suspended sentence on him.

The next examination was of Annie Staton, who James Donahue complained, had been using profane language. She called him a number of pleasing names, and pleaded not guilty. The trial was set down for next Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Both are denizens of the Dayton block on East Eront street, and it was there that the little affair took place. The trial Saturday promises to be a lively one.

Michael Watson paid $5 for being drunk and disorderly on Cottage place Saturday evening.

'TWAS THEIR FIRST GAME.

But They Laid Out The Arlingtons in Fine Style.

The Ridgewoods were a team of stars, or else they could not have defeated the heretofore victorious Arlingtons at base-ball yesterday. The game was played at Boynton Beach early in the afternoon, and resulted in a general slaughter, the Ridgewoods winning by a score of 26 to 7. They all played well, but salt air and the cool breeze seemed to disarrange the eye-sight of the Arlingtons, and they muffed flies and threw wild, while their opponents knocked the ball all over the field.

The Fair Lillian Coming.

Miss Lillian Kennedy, supported by an exceptional strong company, will play a two nights engagement at Music Hall commencing Wednesday, September 4th, in two entirely new plays, "A Midnight Frolic" and "The Little Rebel." Notwithstanding that this is a very expensive attraction the prices will remain the same as before, viz: 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents.

The Quaker's Advice.

Don't thee wed for money friend.
For money hath a sting;
Don't thee wed a pretty face,
'Tis a very foolish thing.
Don't thee wed for place or fame—
'Twill disappoint all hopes for thee;
But choose a girl who wants to see
"A Midnight Frolic" and Lillian Kennedy.

A DAY MADE FOR RACING.

of Brooklyn; third, A. S. Ellis, Century C. C., of Newark. The time was 3:08. Eight starters.

The men loafed and kept going slower until they almost stopped. R. Kissam fell in the second lap, but pluckily remounted his wheel and started after the rest of the entries, but the final spurt soon began, Ellis trying to run away from his field. Forney and Tattan caught him before he reached the tape, and took first and second by a length each.

The final of the one mile novice was won by O. B. Mitchell; second H. Nicholls, Jr.; third, O. J. Gette.

The winners in the third heat did not start in the final as they had far exceeded their time limit. Ricca paced and kept going faster all time until Mithell, Nicholls and Gette shot ahead. Nicholls led on the far turn and pushed well, but Mitchell passed him on the stretch, while Gette was only a wheel behind.

The first heat of the two-third mile scratch was won by E. C. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen, of Rahway; second, B. L. Johnson, Harlem Wheelmen Wheelmen, of Somerville; third, C. K. Granger, Riverside Wheelmen, of New York city. The time was 1:44 4-5. Nine starters.

"Pop" Granger set a hot pace while the rest followed in a bunch, with Combs well up in front. At the second lap the two Harlem Wheelmen, E. C. and B. L. Johnson shot out with Granger close behind, but was unable to catch them. They kept the same positions to the tape.

The second heat was won by W. M. McCutchen, Crescent Wheelmen; second, W. L. Darmer, N. J. A. C., of Jersey City; third, J. Johnson, of Red Bank Wheelmen. The time was 1:50. Five starters.

McCutchen refused to pace and the men loafed awhile, but coming in on the long turn Darmer jumped out and obtained a big lead. McCutchen, however, overhauled him by a magnificent spurt and crossed the tape a length ahead.

The third heat was won by Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen, of Red Bank; second, W. D. McGurn, Harlem Wheelmen, of Brooklyn; third, Joe Harrison, of Harlem Wheelmen. The time was 1.49 1-5. Nine starters.

The first part of the race was a loaf and the last a contest between the Harlem Wheelmen who had everything their own way.

The final of the two-third mile scratch was won by Joe Harrison; secood, Bert Ripley; third, C. K. Granger. The time was 1:52.

The Harlem boys did about as they pleased in this race, loafing at first and then running away from the rest of the riders. Granger refused to be run away from, however, and made the finish a close one.

One mile handicap. The first heat was won by F. F. Turner, 70 yards, of Wilmington, Delaware. Second, J. F. Beam, sixty yards, Riverside Wheelman, of New York. Third, L. R. Lefferson, eighty yards. H. W. Ocean Grove. Time, 2.13 1-5. Eleven starters. Beam, from the sixty yard mark was rear man and chased after the rest at a lively gait. Cuming led for a time but the riders bunched about him and he was unable to finish better than fifth. Beam caught the rest and took second place by a wheel.

The second heat was won J. G. Johnson, 160 yards, Harlem Wheelmen Brooklyn. Second, R. Weir of Wilmington, Delaware. Third, O. J. Walker, 100 yards, unattached, of Bayonne. Time, 2 14 3-5. Thirteen starters. Granger ran after his field from the thirty yard line and finally caught them but the effort was too much and he only finished sixth. Crane set the pace for a time but fell back and at the finish spurted up in fine form and took fourth.

The third heat was won by L. Hunter, ninety yards, N. J. A. C., Bayonne. Second, C. J. Bird, ninety yards, Elizabeth A. C. Third, C. S. Norris, 120 yards, unattached, of New Brunswick. The time was 2.16 3-5. Ten starters. Darner started from scratch but fell out after two laps. The pace was hot and the limit men bunched. Hunter left them at the finish, however, and won without trouble. Bird won second by several feet.

The final heat was won by J. T. Beam. Second, J. Lindley. Third, L. R. Lefferson. The time was 2.14 3-5. The riders bunched in the first lap while Crane and Norris paced them. On the second lap Kissam took another fall on the long stretch while Walker and Hunter tumbled over each other on the turn. Turner had his choice of running over them or off the track into the grass. He chose the last and lost his chances of wining among the weeds. Beam won by several lengths.

The two-mile team race was won by the Elizabeth Athletic Club. The teams were composed of the following men: Charles Appley, H. F. Loehrs, and C. J. Bird, of Elizabeth Athletic Club, and W. W. McCutchen, T. A. Cuming, and S. C. Crane of the Crescent Wheelmen. The men finished as follows: H. F. Loehrs, first; W. W. McCutchen, second; C. J. Bird, third; T. A. Cuming, fourth; Chas. Appley, fifth; and S. C. Crane, sixth, Elizabeth winning the championship of Union County by the score of twelve to nine.

Two-mile lap race, won by Joe Harrison, Harlem Wheelmen, eighteen points. Second, Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen, thirteen points. Third, C. K. Granger, Riverside Wheelmen, New York city, six points. Four starters. Darmer started but the continual spurt was too much and he fell out. Harrison won first in all the laps except the first.

One-mile scratch race, 2:30 class. First heat, won by A. Kluge, Bushwick Wheelmen, Brooklyn. Second, Louis Hunter, N. J. A. C., Bayonne. Third, J. T. Beam, Riverside Wheelmen. The time was 3.05. Six starters. They loafed around for two laps when Hunter shot ahead. The rest followed and caught him but Kluge was the only one able to pass.

The second heat was won by Geo. A. Robertson, unattached, New York city. Second, Bert Ripley, Harlem Wheelmen. Third, C. H. Appley, Elizabeth A. C. Time 3.11 1-5. Seven starters. A regular funeral until the last quarter when Robertson jumped the bunch and won by three lengths. There was a lively race for second and third.

The final heat was won by Burt Ripley. Second, J. T. Beam. Third, Louis Hunter. Time, 2.51 1-5. Cluge led a liely procession which remained well together to the far turn, when Ripley and Beam sailed by and Ripley took first by three quarters of a length.

Two-mile handicap. The first heat was won by R. Wier, Wilmington. Second, J. T. Beam, 110 yards, Riverside Wheelmen. Third, S. C. Crane, 260 yards, Crescent Wheelmen. Fourth, T. A. Cuming, 240 yards, Crescent Wheelmen. Fifth, A. I. Walker, 180 yards, unattached, Bayonne. The time was 4.41 4-5. Eleven starters. The limit men, under the lead of Crane and Cuming, hustled along while E. C. Johnson paced the back men. The pace was a fast one but a few of the rear bunch caught up and made a lively finish. Beam getting second by half a wheel, and Crane third by about the same distance.

The second heat was won by Sam W. Johnson, Jr., 240 yards, Bushwick Wheelmen. Second, O. B. Mitchell, 240 yards. East Orange Roadsters. Third, C. V. A. Walsh, 220 yards, Clio Wheelmen, Jersey City. Fourth, L. R. Lefferson, 150 yards, Harlem Wheelmen. Fifth, C. K. Granger, 60 yards, Riverside Wheelmen. Time, 4.59 4-5. Johnson started 40 yards in front of anyone else and had the race all to himself, finishing half a lap in advance of the rest. The back riders caught the limit men and bunched, then somebody rode too close and Joe Johnson, Cobb and Kissam tumbled in a heap. Mitchell took second place after a fine spurt, while Walsh and Lefferson fought for third down to the tape.

The final heat was won by T. A. Cuming. Second, R. Weir. Third, S. C. Crane. The time was 4.47 1-5. If Johnson expected to win this as easily as he did his heat he was much mistaken. Cuming and Crane soon caught him, passed him and started off together, pacing alternately. "Pop" Granger, who was virtually scratch man, gave up trying to catch those ahead, while the rest of the riders bunched and went after the Crescent pair. Weir was the only man to catch them which he did on the far turn in the last lap. He had been working too hard, however, for a spurt with Cuming who shot out and won by a length. Crane hugged Weir's wheel as he crossed the finish line.

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlaim's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follow its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy, Park and North avenues; T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Edward White went to Dover on his wheel Sunday.

Alexander Fillmore rode his Spalding wheel to Boynton Beach yesterday in thirty-five minutes. He went by the way of Westfield.

Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, and George VanNest, of Dunellen, started last Saturday afternoon on their wheels for Philadelphia. They returned yesterday.

Sammy Robinson, one of Pond's valued employes, had the tire of his bicycle punctured a few days ago by tacks strewn on the Springfield road back of Westfield, and that's a long ways to walk and push your wheel.

Dunellen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kinsey spent Thursday at Flemington to be present at a picnic held at Packer's Island.

P. Voorhees, the milkman of Greenbrook, owns a young calf, which was pasturing near his house one night last week, when a man and woman drove up alongside the fence and the man deliberately got over in the field and lifted the calf and put it in his buggy and drove off. No trace of the animal has been found, nor are the parties known who took it.

Master Frank Haffner and sisters, who have been visiting their aunt at Bridgeport, have returned home.

Mrs. Bolton, who has been spending a week with her daughters on Front street, has returned to her home at Glen Gardner.

Mrs. George Craig, of Mountain avenue, is entertaining her brother and wife, of East Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Bachelor, daughter Helen and a few friends, drove to Staten Island on Saturday.

Arthur Doue, of Bayonne, who has been visiting the family of W. Van-Middlesworth, has gone to Liberty Corner to visit friends.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Jones, accompanied by Miss Lewis and friends, of Elizabeth, spent Sunday up the Hudson

Mrs. Case, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Samuel VanArtsdal, has returned to her home at Flemington.

Mr. Leggett's Move.

J. H. Leggett, who has leased the handsome corner store in the Y. M. C. A. building, will probably remove his drug business to that location during the early winter. He proposes fitting the store with the most modern fixtures which will make his place of business an attraction to that part of the city. He also has in view the leasing of the adjoining store on Front street and throwing the two stores into one.

$800 in Gold Drowns a Man.

At the burning of a steamboat on the Hudson river forty years ago, many of the passengers were drowned. Among the bodies brought up from the bottom of the river by grappling was that of a man known to have been an excellent swimmer. Around his waist was a belt containing nearly $800 in gold. That told the story.

"In old and chronic cases of indigestion (dyspepsia or gastritis—it is all the same) the sufferer develops a great variety of symptoms and often dies poisoned by the products of his own torpid and inflamed stomach. His food, instead of being digested, and so furnishing strength and physical substance, ferments and putrefies within him. The chief process of life is arrested at a vital point. The more he eats the worse off he is. And yet unless he can be fed he must also perish. People do so die, daily by thousands, but we doctors seldom have the moral courage to give the cause its true name lest we should be laughed at for our inability to cure so 'simple' a thing as indigestion. Simple? Why, it is the capstone of all complaints—and the mother of most of them."—So writes a famous English physician.

The sufferer's friends often advise him to cheer up; to throw off his lethargy and eat freely. Bad advice. He knows better. "No," he answers. "I cannot; my food does me no good." He is right. Food now is gold in the spent swimmer's belt.

Take light nourishment, followed immediately by a dose of the Shaker Digestive Cordial—a new and radical remedy discovered and prepared by the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.—the essence of medicinal herbs and plants cultivated by them alone. Then continue with it. Relieves at once and soon cures. Pleasant to the palate and adapted to all constitutions. Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Parade, Banquet, and General Good Time.

The first day of the convention of Letter Carriers at Philadelphia was a grand success. Yesterday morning the Plainfield carriers marched down to the North avenue station headed by Messenger Frisby bearing the handsome silk banner presented by Mrs. John M. Hetfield. The special train from Newark carried them to Philadelphia where they marched up Broad street to the starting point of the parade and fell into line. After the parade they attended a monster banquet given to the Letter Carriers and then saw the sights returning at about midnight.

A Party On the Lawn.

Although it rained Saturday it could not spoil the pleasure of those who were present at the lawn party given that afternoon in honor of David and Isabella Scott, by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, of East Front street. A SERIOUS AFFAIR.

It is always an inscrutable mystery to everybody why people quarrel. For our little arguments there is always of course, good, sound and sufficient reason; for the dispute of other folk the excuse appears ever absurdly inadequate. Why, for instance, young Greig and Miss Elsie Norman, both returning from India on the Bengal, should break off with amazing suddenness their engagement just as the Bengal was nearing the Bay of Biscay was not very easy to see.

But they did.

"And I suppose," said young Greig, with a face that looked less bronzed than usual, "that nothing I can say will alter your decision? Your mind is quite made up?"

"It always is," declared Miss Norman.

She held tightly to the brass rail and looked away at the spot in the distance which represented Spain. It is best when quarreling with any one you have cared for not to look at their eyes.

"I particularly wish that, for the time that we shall have to travel together, we shall see as little of each other as possible. We can easily say good-by at Plymouth."

"It will not be easy for me," said Henry Greig. "I am not used to saying good-by to any one that I—that I have ——"

"You should be glad of a new experience, Mr. Greig. It's a precious thing nowadays."

"You're not yourself, this morning, Elsie."

"I wish I were not!" she exclaimed with a sudden change of manner. "If I were some one else I shouldn't be so unhappy. Here is Mrs. Renton. She mustn't see my eyes. This is the last time we shall speak to each other. Good-by!"

"But, I say, isn't there some means ——"

Elsie Norman held out her hand. Greig pressed it, and she turned and went below. Mrs. Renton sank into her deck chair carefully, as stout ladies do, and seemed gratified when the deck chair only creaked complainingly and did not give way.

"Mr. Greig, pray come here at once. Miss Norman monopolizes your time to such an extent that we poor women see nothing of you. Sit here at once and tell me all about yourself."

"It's an uninteresting subject," said Greig, pulling another deck chair to the side of Mrs. Renton.

"Tell me a secret, then, I'm exceedingly fond of secrets. When are you going to marry Elsie?"

"Never."

"Never? Of course you're both young; but that seems a long time to wait, doesn't it? Mr. Van Straaten said ——"

"Van Straaten is a fool of the kind they make in Germany. I shall have to ask Van Straaten not to interfere with my affairs."

The old German, with his pince-nez awry, pinching the end of his nose, was coming excitedly up the gangway.

"Vere is the Captain?" he screamed. "I insist. Pring me all at once the Captain."

The Captain of the Bengal hurried up. In a few words of mangled English Mr. Van Straaten explained. A group of interested passengers stood around listening.

"I talk to Miss Norman for leedle time," cried Van Straaten. "I then go to my gabin; I find there my brecious diamonds—vanished."

"They can't have gone far," said the Captain.

"They have no need to go at all. Eight tousand bounds' worth all gone. I must know now queekly who has stole them alretty."

"Any suspicion?" asked the Captain.

"I am not so sure. I am not so sure."

"Anybody on board see them?"

"Von person only. Mr. Greig, if you please, come here. I show you my brecious diamonds, ain't it, two days after we leave Calcutta?"

"That is so," said Greig cheerfully. "And very magnificent diamonds they were. I remember telling you I wished one or two were mine then, so that I might give them to——

He stopped.

"I suppose we shall have to search the cabins," said the Captain of the Bengal.

"It's a fearful nuisance, ladies and gentlemen; but it can't be helped. May we begin with yours, Mr. Grieg?"

"I really don't know," protested Greig, "why I should have my cabin upset and turned out just because——

"I desire that Mr. Greig's cabin should be searched," said Mr. Van Straaten, insistently.

"That settles it, then," said Henry Greig, carelessly. "Fire away. I'll come down with you."

The crowd went below and stood in the corridor while the examination was progressing. Elsie Norman, hearing the noise, left her aunt, and, rather red at eyes, came forward.

The Captain, Mr. Van Straaten, the chief steward and Henry Greig reappeared at the door of the cabin. The old German bore a leather case very carefully in his arms.

"The diamonds have been found," announced the Captain of the Bengal, seriously. "We shall not have to trouble you, ladies and gentlemen."

They were only ordinary folk, rather bored by the tediousness of the journey from Calcutta, and they could not help showing a certain relish over the diversion.

"Most painful affair, really."

"Case found under the pillow in the berth."

"Seemed such an honest fellow, too."

"My dear," said Mrs. Renton, bitterly, "it doesn't do to trust any one nowadays. You don't seem to know who's who."

"But you'd think really on a P. & O. steamship——"

"I'm sorry for that poor Miss Norman. She was engaged to him, you know."

"Oh, that's broken off quite definitely. I heard her telling the old German so. The old fellow asked her what was the matter and she told him. He was a partner of her father's, you know, and he seemed much concerned about her. You see, dear, I wasn't exactly listening, but——"

"But you heard, dear—that's the main point. Come into my cabin and see my new serge dress."

They went aft, leaving Greig at the door of his cabin. He was holding the sides to prevent himself from falling. Other passengers went past his cabin, keeping carefully to the other side of the narrow corridor. Not one of them spoke to him, but they all spoke to each other.

"What does this mean?" cried Henry Greig. "Do they all suspect me of ——"

"Harry!"

A soft white hand on his arm with a kindly pressure. He turned and seized it gladly.

"Elsie! Aren't you, too, going to follow them?"

"Tell me what it all means."

It did not take long to put the girl in possession of the facts. Her face flamed red with indignation.

"And they dare to think that you would do a thing like that?"

"Well," said Greig, uneasily, "they found the things there, you see. It's circumstantial evidence of rather an awkward kind. But I needn't tell you Miss Norman——"

"My name is still Elsie."

"My dear girl! I needn't tell you that I shouldn't dream of taking poor old Van Straaten's diamonds or anybody else's."

"I am quite sure of that, Harry. I must see him about it." She repinned her straw hat with a determined air. "We two must stand together now, whatever happens."

"Elsie, hadn't you better let me fight it out alone? The truth is nearly sure to come out sooner or later, and——"

"In the meantime, dear, you will have to forget our stupid quarrel of this morning. I was quite wrong."

"So was I," said Greig, promptly.

A man has no business to kiss a girl as she is ascending the gangway of a P. & O. steamship. It has been done, no doubt, on more than one occasion, but it is nearly always an act to be condemned by right thinking people who have not had the chance of committing the crime. Nevertheless, if it is at any time to be pardoned it was in the instance at present in question.

"But," said the astonished Mrs. Renton to her companion, "I thought you said, my dear, that their engagement was all off?"

"She certainly said so. Why she should be so affectionate with him now, after this scandalous affair, goodness only knows."

"Ah, my dear! Girls are queer creatures."

There was a few hours of mixed feelings for Mr. Greig of the Eastern Bank. It was terrible to feel this suspicion hanging over him; to watch the looks cast at him by the passengers, to observe Mr. Van Straaten's almost comic appearance of injury; on the other hand it was delightful to feel that close to him in the time of stress, as he sat on deck or strolled up and down, was a cheerful young person in her very best spirits. The Bay meanwhile sympathetically behaved in a manner quite exemplary.

"I am astonished, my tear," said Mr. Van Staaten severely, "that you should be freintly with Mr. Greig after what has habbened alretty. I strongly advise you to gif him up. You dold me you had decided——"

"I've changed my mind," she said definitely. "Women folks are not good at a lot of things, but we do know how to change our minds."

Mr. Van Staaten lifted his hat and turned away. The old gentleman when he was a few paces off seemed agitated—so much so that he had to pat his eyes gently with his scarlet handkerchief. He called to one of the sailors:

"Dell my man Hans to come instantly."

Much commotion soon after the appearance of the stolid faced Hans. A rush toward that part of the ship by all the passengers on deck. Swift talking in German. Considerable temper on the part of Mr. Van Staaten; penitent words from Hans.

"Mr. Greig," cried the old German, "come her di-rectly. And Miss Norman. Listen to this horreeble man of mine. I haf lost also my hatbox; I ask him where it is, and he replies that he place it by mistake in Mr. Greig's gabin. Is it not so, Hans?"

Sorrowful acknowledgment from the profusely penitent Hans. Van Straaten raised his voice:

"Then I say to him.

"'Is it possible that you careless schoundrel you blaced also by mistake the diamond box in Mr. Greig's gabin?' And he say, 'Yes.'"

Quite a noisy cheering from the assembled passengers. A pressing forward to congratulate Greig. He, delighted beyond expression, turned to Elsie Norman.

"You don't repent being counsel for my defense, young Portia?"

"You are just the client I like."

"And respecting this morning. Let's walk forward."

They walked forward.

"Dot was a good drick of mine," said Van Straaten as he watched them. He wiped his glasses carefully. "I knew it would answer. I was once, a long time ago, in love mineself."—St. James's Budget.

The Boy Who Knew His Father.

The boy had smashed his father's shaving mug and done sundry other damage, when his mother discovered him.

"Oh, Freddie!" she exclaimed, horrified; "what will your papa say when he comes home and sees what you have done?"

"Well, mamma," he replied, "I don't think I would like to repeat it before you."—Puck.

The Well of Life.

What are drugs? Are they not specially prepared to make this life more enjoyable? Each patent medicine is made to cure some special thing. Each oil, each tincture, each herb, is good for some special purpose. If your health is not perfect some one of these things will make you feel better.

But whatever it is, the quality should be good—it should be pure.

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

FASHIONS IN OLD JERUSALEM.

The Jewesses of Ancient Times Were Gorgeously Arrayed, Indeed.

As far back as seven centuries before the Christian era there were very gayly dressed women in Jerusalem. The prophet Ezekiel tells of them. They had garments of silk adorned with embroidered work; their bodies were swathed in fine linen; they had shoes of badger skin. They wore ornaments of gold and silver, rings in the ears, bracelets on the wrists, a chain around the neck, a jewel over the brow, and a crown upon the head.

The prophet speaks of the earrings which were worn by the women of Jerusalem; but these ornaments were worn by Jewesses ages before the time of Ezekiel, even in the days of Moses, and earlier yet. There were earrings among the other gifts in the oblations to Moses, as described in the Book of Numbers. The first Biblical reference to them is in the part of Genesis which tells how Rebekah obtained as a gift a "golden earring of half a shekel weight" from Abraham's servant, who "put it upon her face."

At a later period the patriarch Jacob procured all the earrings which belonged to his household and hid them under an oak tree. Subsequently to that time earrings are frequently spoken of in the Bible. Even Job, the patient man of Uz, must have owned a lot of them in the latter part of his life, for when all his brethren and all his sisters and all his acquaintances came to comfort him under his afflictions, "every one of them gave him an earring of gold."

In the very early periods of Jewish history women seem to have been as fond of dress and decorations as they are in modern times. When the daughters of Jerusalem were appareled and bejeweled in the way described by Ezekiel, their garments and ornaments must have been nearly as expensive as those of the grand dames who now shine in society. The wearing of "divers colors," however, does not seem to have been a mark of honor.

THE COUNT WAS A CONDUCTOR.

Something of Which He May Be Proud When He Rejoins the Nobility.

Everybody who has ever ridden much on the Union street cars of San Francisco, has at some time noticed Conductor Otto W. Mall, a foreigner of distinguished manners and master of politeness in six languages—Russian, Danish, Swedish, English, German and French. Mall is no longer a conductor, for he has just inherited nearly a half million dollars from a wealthy aunt at Copenhagen, and now he is not ashamed to tell his friends the truth about his status and that he is a genuine Danish count.

Mall got $500 recently, and his attorneys at Copenhagen have informed him that a draft for any sum within reason will be honored at an early date, and that the sum will approximate $500,000. There has been some delay in the settlement owing to a contest of the will which was begun by the Count's cousins some months ago.

Mall never made himself known to anybody in California or pretended to be anything other than a laborer struggling to get on in the world. He has been a conductor on the Union street line for seven years, though he occasionally quit to do mining work at the Pioneer mines in Amador county.

Several years ago he was severely hurt while helping a woman and her child from a car. One of the manholes in the street was open and he fell into it. Speaking of his inheritance, the Count said:

"I always knew I would get a pretty good inheritance some day, but what was the use to speak of it? People would not believe me, and it is a bore to be talking about expected windfalls. I may go to Europe on a visit but I think I shall always make California my home, for I have learned to like the State and its people.

"I can now devote my life to studies long neglected. I am fond of science, language, music and art. The experience I have had as a hard workingman has taught me how the other half lives, and I have profited by the lessons. You ask me why I followed such a business. I hardly know, but I do know when one gets in a rut it is very hard to get out of it."

Men Above Principles.

"Ah, yes," confessed the sweet girl graduate of yesterday, who is to-day a bride, "it is true that we pledged ourselves never to marry, but we value men above principles, don't you know."

And the mind that had then discussed the transcendental in municipal politics now concentrated itself upon the purchase of an oil stove that would cook steak and not heat the room.—Detroit Tribune.

KOLA NUT TEST.

It Enables a Sick Soldier to Beat a Well Man in a 25 Mile Race.

American surgeons and army officers have for some time been experimenting with the kola nut with a view if introducing it into the commissary department of the army, to be used in lieu of other food in forced marches where there is little or nothing for the soldier to eat.

Dr. Charles E. Woodruff and Lieut. Harris, of the United States army, stationed at Fort Sheridan, have made experiments which have shown that in forced marches the kola nut gives far better satisfaction for nutritious purposes than ordinary food. Both Dr. Woodruff and Lieut. Harris found that they were less fatigued from the long walks they took when they ate nothing but the kola than when they ate full rations of ordinary food.

An experiment with the kola nut was made in St. Louis and the result was identical with that of the Fort Sheridan officers. A number of the army officers of Fort Snelling were anxious to see the result of an experiment, and so the test was arranged.

Corporal R. P. Wyatt and Private M. C. Olson, both of Company F, started from the Ryan Hotel at 8:40 to walk to the West Hotel at Minneapolis and return to the Ryan at once. Private Olson was not allowed to eat any breakfast, but he was given five little reddish nuts about the size and shape of a good sized hickory nut, which he was told to eat slowly on the way.

Further than this he was not allowed to eat any food while making the trip. Corporal Wyatt was allowed to eat a good hearty breakfast and told he could eat and drink what he wished on the way. He was requested to regulate his diet according to the soldier's bill of fare when the larder in the commissary's tent is well stocked.

At 3:50 the two men arrived at the Ryan Hotel from their journey to Minneapolis. In giving their accounts of the trip, which comprised a walk of 25 miles in the hot sun, they plainly showed that the kola nut had proved the more satisfactory diet.

Corporal Wyatt had eaten and drank freely as he felt inclined to during the day, and came in almost overcome by the heat, and thoroughly tired and stiff from the long walk. Private Olson, who but recently arose from a bed of sickness and has not fully regained his strength, was much the fresher of the two, and had suffered little from heat. He said he ate two of the nuts on the way to Minneapolis and two on the way back, and that he had sat and rested while his companion ate and drank.

He said he never felt better than when he returned from the long tramp, and that he thought that the walk had done him good. He had not felt the need of more food.

"ONLY TWO OF US LEFT."

Patti Says She and Nilsson Are the Last of the Old School.

La Diva Patti, who at two score and ten has again taken London by storm, is interviewed sympathetically in London Lady regarding her recent triumphant season at Covent Garden. The proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof, and La Diva is certainly entitled to speak of the singing voice with authority. Here is what she says:

"Yes," she began, "my reception was most gratifying the other night. I thought the people never would stop cheering. I assure you it brought tears to my eyes, and my heart had to be pushed well down my throat before I could find my voice.

"My voice? Yes, I know. It has always astonished me myself; but, then, God gave it to me, and I pray and believe that it will be many a long year before He takes it from me. Like 'Violetta,' I would sing my highest, sweetest note, even with my last breath.

"Do I feel more fatigued now than I used to?" continued Patti. "No. But, remember, I take the very, very best care of myself, and of every detail of my health. My diet, my wines, my hours of sleep, of practice, of recreation, are all most thoughtfully arranged, and under absolute regulation, and I never transgress.

"And again, cher Monsieur, I think that the school of operatic training to which I belong no longer exists. As I told Christine Nilsson the other day when we met in Paris, 'Only you and I are left, my dear,' and she agreed with me. Singers were not turned out in half dozens, like—like—well, to use an Americanism, like oysters on the half shell.

"I cannot help thinking that the reason that so few voices last among the present day singers is because so much of their tuition was forced. There was too much anxiety for a quickly-made voice, and so, like a burst of fireworks, there is glory for a little while, and then—puff—out!"

Neither Denial or Affirmation.

"You're a wicked, lazy tramp," shouted the red-faced woman.

"Madam," rejoined the tourist calmly, "I decline to be drawn into any controversy. You will take notice that I do not claim to be a June bride."—Detroit Tribune.

Papa's Joy.

"Well, I think not, Bobby. Why?"

"I heard him say that the week you spent at the seashore seemed like heaven to him."—Pottsville Review.

BULL FIGHTS STOPPED

The Chief Toreador Driven from France.

Officials Appeal to the Police in Vain and Several Members of the Council Resign—A Fight Carried Out at Arles and Three Bulls and Three Horses Are Killed.

Paris, Sept. 2.—A series of great bull fights was fixed to begin at Bayonne yesterday, and the celebrated Spanish bullfighter Mazzanteni was specially engaged to appear. The police, however, refused to allow the fight to proceed and they caused Mazzanteni to be conducted to the Spanish frontier. The people were anxious to see a bull fight and the action of the police was greeted with hoots and cries of derision. A number of senators and members of the chamber of deputies and the municipal council intervened with the police to have the performance go on, but all their efforts were useless. When the members of the municipal council found that the police were determined to prevent the fight and to send Mazzantini out of the country they held a special meeting and unanimously decided to resign. Five brigades of gendarmes and many mounted police occupied the arena. The young king of Servia was present, but his mother had been assured beforehand that the authoritie would not allow the fight.

Bulls and Horses Killed.

At Arles there was a bull fight in the presence of 5,000 persons. Three bulls and three horses were killed, but nevertheless the performance was characterized by some as tame and unexciting and the spectators hooted the toreadors. It was intended to have a fight at Tarascon, but the authorities prohibited it. The inhabitants were made very angry by the intervention of the police, and the members of the town council protested against the fight being stopped. The police were obdurate, however, and the fight did not take place.

MRS. HALLIDAY IS VIOLENT.

Assaults an Attendant at the Matteawan Asylum.

Newburgh, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Considerable excitement was caused yesterday by rumors that Mrs. Halliday, the Sullivan county murderess, confined in the Matteawan asylum, had killed an attendant there. Inquiry at the asyluin shows that Mrs. Halliday on Friday last made a fierce attack on Miss Ward, an attendant, but succeeded in only scratching her neck severely, and from the infliction of this slight injury the rumors of murder arose. Miss Ward is now on duty as usual. The asylum officials state that Mrs. Halliday's mental condition has somewhat improved since she was brought to the institution, but she is still liable to become violent at any time, and the probability is that she will never be much better than she is now. The asylum attendants are well aware of this fact and keep a careful watch over her.

NEW WOMAN IN EARNEST.

A Western Elocutionist Appears in Knickerbockers Astride a Horse.

Albia, Iowa, Sept. 2.—Miss Lucy B. Griffin, an elocutionist, exemplified the rights of the new woman in this city Saturday and created quite a stir in social circles. She abhors Mrs. Lease's costume of Syrian trousers, but yesterday she appeared upon the streets in full-dress knickerbockers. Not to be outdone or abashed in her practical ideas of dress reform and the freedom of her sex from fashion's dictates she went to a livery stable, ordered a horse saddled and astride in her knickerbockers rode over the city and made many calls on her lady friends. Some of them fled from her in dismay, and none went to the pavement to greet her. The elocutionist is positive the new woman has come to stay.

LONSDALE IN HIGH FAVOR.

Emperor William Paying the Earl the Greatest of Attention.

Berlin, Sept. 2.—Emperor William is showing the greatest attention to the Earl of Lonsdale, whose guest his majesty was during part of the time he recently spent in England. His majesty has deputed a personal valet and page to wait upon the earl at the Bristol hotel where he is stopping. A court carriage has been placed at his disposal. The earl dined with the emperor last evening. To-day he will attend the parade on the Tempelhof field, when he will ride in the emperor's carriage. He will attend the opera this evening, occupying the imperial box.

VERITY ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

He Was To Have Been Married Next Week.

New York, Sept. 2.—George Verity of Bayport, Long Island, who is to be married next week, attempted suicide Saturday night by hanging. He was discovered by a livery stable keeper, who cut him down. He had written a note to the young woman to whom he was to be married saying he was tired of living and wanted to die. Whether the wedding will take place or not is not certain.

The Pittsburgs Secure Hastings

Pittsburg, Sept. 2.—The managers of the Pittsburg baseball club have finally closed the deal whereby Pitcher Hastings of Kansas City becomes a member oft he local club after the close of the western league season, September 23. The consideration in the transaction is said to be $2,000.

Flunked Out of the Match.

Boston, Sept. 2.—Johnny Young of Brooklyn, who was to have boxed Joe Flaherty of Lowell, at New London, Conn., to-night, flunked out of the match. Leslie Pearce of Philadelphia takes Young's place.

HOPKINS ADVISED IT

While Mayor Encouraged the Great Strike of '94.

Sent for the American Railway Union Officials and Told Them To Tie Up the Railroad—Debs Admits the Truthfulness of the Story—Says the Day of Strikes Is Past.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—A morning paper says ex-Mayor Hopkins advised the great railroad strike of 1894 which ended in such disastrous loss of property and life and confirms the statement by interviews with president Eugene V. Debs, of the American Railway union in Woodstock jail, and ex-vice president George W. Howard, in this city. Mr. Howard declares that some time previous to the ordering of the strike against the railroads the American Railwy union officials received word that Mayor Hopkins would like to see them. A meeting was arranged at which Debs, Howard, the mayor and his business partner, Mr. Secord, one or two city officials and a newspaper representative were present. The prospective strike was the chief topic of conversation.

Howard's Plan.

Mr. Howard said his plan was to have work stopped at the Pullman repair shops at St. Louis and Ludlow, Ky., and then have the car inspectors on the different roads refuse to pass sleeping cars in need of repairs. As the railroads would need to have the usual number of sleepers they would demand that Pullman live up to the terms of his contract. Pullman would be unable to do so and the roads would be only too glad to get out from under his monopoly and he would have to do something. Mr. Secord spoke very emphatically against Howard's proposition and said his idea was that the trainmen should refuse to haul Pullman sleepers.

Hopkins Advised a Strike.

According to Mr. Howard Mayor Hopkins said: "That's right, tie them up Debs, tie them up. If you only get one or two roads it will shut off the revenue and bring the old man to arbitration. I have know him for years and I know he will continue to fight. The shops don't cut much os a figure. Money goes out there as well af it comes in. As Secord says, the railroads will make the repairs on his cars and he can shut down the shops and keep them closed until the men starve. The only thing to do is tie up some of the lines that haul his cars."

Debs Confirms the Story.

Mr. Debs when seen at the Woodstock jail said: "That statement is substantially correct. I do not feel that it would be quite right for me to repeat what Mr. Hopkins said on that occasion. It has been a good while since then and no public mention has ever yet been made of the conversation. I would not of my own accord repeat it, but since you ask whether it is true, I can't deny it without lying, and if I refuse to discuss the matter its truthfulness will be taken for granted. I do not understand the conversation was altogether private. Secrecy was not enjoined, but at the same time I have some delicacy about speaking of it. If the mayor thought he was right I do not see why he should hesitate to stand by what he said."

Time of Great Strikes Is Past.

Mr. Debs said there would be no more great strikes. The strike of last summer was the climax of railroad disturbances and this country would not see another like it. The time had gone by for that method for settling difficulties between railway companies and their employes. Asked if he considered himself a martyr, Mr. Debs said: "No, sir. It requires no courage to bear the penalties of one's honest convictions. I am not vain enough or presumptious enough to lay any claims to martyrdom. It is by the merest chance that I am in jail on account of the strike. It might have been any other one out of the millions of people in this country." Mr. Debs has served over thre months of his jail sentence, and says he will be glad when the remining three are over. Meanwhile he spends sixteen hours a day over his books and correspondence. He looks well and is enjoying good health.

BOTH DUELISTS WOUNDED.

Count de Benalua and Senor de Roda Meet on the Field of Honor.

Madrid, Sept. 2.—Count de Benalua, who was an intimate friend of the late King Alfonso XII., and Senor Martinez de Roda, who some time ago married in New York the widow of the ex-president of Guatemala, became involved in a quarrel recently which resulted in the sending and acceptance of a challenge to fight a duel. The meeting took place on the French frontier yesterday and both the duelists were wounded.

LIGHT SEISMIC SHOCKS

New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania Shaken.

The Shocks, Which Lasted Only a Few Seconds and Were Accompanied by Rumbling Noise, Distinctly Felt—Houses Shaken and People Awakened and Alarmed.

High Bridge, N. J., Sept. 2.—An earthquake shock was felt here at about 6 o'clock yesterday morning and from reports received here it appears to have been felt all through this (Hunterdon) county. Buildings rocked, beds were shaken, rudely arousing people who had not yet risen, and, in a number of cases, articles fell from shelves, much to the alarm of nervous people. The shock was greater in the upper part of the county.

At Brooklyn and Coney Island.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Three distinct earthquake shocks were felt by the residents of Brooklyn about 6 o'clock yesterday morning They were not severe as no damage to life or property is reported from any section of the city. The districts of East New York and South Brooklyn received the greater shock, but it was also distinctly felt in the other districts. Contrary reports are given as to its severity. Those who heard the rumbling sounds declare they died away in a low grating noise. The shock was pretty severe in Coney Island and many persons were awakened from their sleep. Pictures, crockery and even furniture in many houses were dislodged from their positions and the owners who were not awakened by the shock, wondered how it came to pass.

Pennsylvania Shaken.

Chester, Pa., Sept. 2.—An earthquake shock shook this city about 6 o'clock yesterday morning and startled many people. The vibrations did not continue longer than several seconds, but caused windows and buildings to tremble and wall ornaments to become dislodged. At West Chester and other places very perceptible tremor of the earth was felt.

Philadelphia Felt It.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2.—A distinctly perceptible earthquake shock was felt here yesterday morning about 6 o'clock. The vibration did not last longer than a second or two, but was severe enough to awaken people from sleep and to shake ornaments hanging on walls. The direction of the shock was from southeast to north, northeast.

Alarmed at Atlantic Highlands.

Atlantic Highlands, N. J., Sept. 2.—At daybreak yesterday morning there was an earthquake here that shook houses and people. It was accompanied by a low rumbling sound that resembled thunder. Many people arose from their beds in terror. The shock lasted about forty-five seconds.

Two Shocks at Rahway.

Rahway, N. J., Sept. 3.—Two distinct shocks of earthquake were felt here early yesterday morning. The first at 3 o'clock was light, but at 6 o'clock the shock lasted five seconds and was accompanied by a rumbling noise resembling thunder. No damage has been reported.

Houses Rocked Like Cradles.

Northport, N. Y., Sept. 2.—Shortly before 6 o'clock yesterday morning an earthquake shock was distinctly felt here. Houses rocked like cradles and people asleep were awakened by the vibrations. The rumbling lasted for several seconds.

At Sandy Hook.

Sandy Hook, N. J., Sept. 2.—A shock, apparently that of an earthquake, lasting about three seconds, was felt here at 6:08 Sunday morning.

At Port Jervis, N. Y.

Port Jervis, N. Y., Sept. 2.—An earthquake shock was felt here very perceptibly at about 6 o'clock yesterday morning. No damage was done.

THE NINETY-EIGHT CLUB.

Sir Knights Permanently Organize With Twenty Members.

"The Ninety-Eight Club of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar," which was temporarily organized at the Boston triennial conclave, as told exclusively in The Daily Press, was formally and permanently organized Monday night with the following officers: President, John Brooks; vice-president, D. C. Adams; treasurer, C. C. Howard; secretary, H. W. Marshall; committee on by-laws, W. A. Coddington and D. C. Adams; committee on soliciting members, J. Kirkner and E. C. Adams.

The club starts with a membership of twenty members. It is the intention to give frequent social entertainments during the winter season, and it is expected that eventually nearly all Sir Knights will join the club.

The object of the organization is to prepare to take the trip to the next conclave of Knights at Pittsburg in 1898.

PLAINFIELDERS ABROAD.

Some Are in Bonny Scotland, While Others Are Preparing to Sail.

Mrs. and Miss Clapp, of Mercer avenue, who went abroad in July with one of Cook's parties, traveled with them through Ireland and Scotland, and since the return of that party to this country, have journeyed in England, visiting old Cathedral towns like Winchester and Salisbury. They will return at the end of October.

Miss Kate Biglow, daughter of F. H. Biglow of Central avenue, who sailed in June, has been sojourning at Naples, Genoa, Rome and Florence, has glided through the streets of Venice, climbed Vesuvius, visited Nuremburg and Heidelburg, taken the trip of the Rhine as far as Cologne, getting glimpses of Belgium and Holland, and after a visit to Paris, is planning to sail for America September 6th.

A Novel Invention.

Captain Doane, of La Grande avenue, is completing a novel and attractive windmill which stands in the yard. He has been working on it for a long time. It consists of ten small boats, which are built from a full-rigged ship to a sloop. The lines are perfect in detail and the work is certainly most creditable. The slightest breeze causes a rapid motion of the boats that is pleasing to witness.

The Fair Lillian Here.

Miss Lillian Kennedy, the favorite soubrette supported by an exceptional strong supporting company, will play a two nights engagement at Music Hall commencing tonight, in two entirely new plays "A Midnight Frolic," and on Thursday night "The Little Rebell," both plays full of the latest specialties. Notwithstanding that this is a very expensive attraction the prices will remain the same as last season, viz: 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents.

Why Don't the Council Act?

Mrs. DeForest, of West Second street, applied to the City Council some time ago for permission to erect a memorial drinking fountain in front of her property in memory of a deceased daughter. The Council referred the matter to a committee. Since then she has heard nothing of it. She is anxious to have the Council act on the matter.

An Unhealthy Place.

The people of North Plainfield are still complaining of the terrible condition of Green brook. The odor arising from it is very bad and the foul air formed is very unhealthy. Last year the brook was flushed and the same remedy would be of great benefit this year.

A Rarity.

The piazza of Wm. VanDeventer's house on East Fifth street was the centre of attraction Sunday evening, when a night-blooming cereus was in full bloom. Another one will open in a few days.

A Big Delegation Wanted.

The local union of the Christian Endeavor is desirous of taking 100 delegates to the State Convention in October to be held at Atlantic City.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrey, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

BEST RACES OF THE SEASON.

BICYCLE EVENTS BY CALCIUM LIGHT PROVE A GREAT SUCCESS.

Starbuck Smashes the Track Competitive Record—No Loafing Allowed—Benner Brothers Make a Great Hit—Summary.

A clear sky, a luminous moon and delightful weather should have filled the grand stand at the Crescent oval last evening to overflowing with those who came to see the night races given under the management of O. S. Bunnell, but they did not. Those who did not come missed the best racing that has been given on the oval since it was built. The time was remarkably fast, the finishes, except in one case, were very close, and the races followed each other in very rapid succession, a great contrast to the ordinary meet. The handicaps were so arranged that the men were just bunched at the tape, adding greatly to the interest.

The hero of the night was Starbuck, who, in the one-mile open, smashed the one-mile track competitive record of 2:17 made by Charles Brown from scratch in a handicap race. Starbuck's time was 2:15 3-5. He also won the five-mile handicap by very hard riding, most of the time having to ride alone. The riders were well bunched in the last lap and Starbuck spurted the entire lap to keep from being pocketed. His riding was certainly superb. In fact, all the professionals rode as if their life depended on it and there was an entire absence of that bane of amateur racing, loafing. The Class A men seemed to catch the spirit and kept up a hot pace. Mr. Bunnell had much to do with it, however, as he placed a time limit on each race, and if the racers did not ride under it they had to try again.

In the final of the 2.40 class A mile race, no one would pace at first and the men loafed for half a lap, then they got down to business. McCutchen won by the prettiest kind of a spurt with his opponents right at his rear wheel. The time was 2.46 and Bunnell said no race. They tried again and still no one would pace. When the time for the final spurt came McCutchen dropped out as he saw the time limit had been exceeded. Again the referee announced no race and said that the riders would try again this evening, when it is expected there will be no loafing.

T. A. Cuming had a cinch in his heat of the one mile handicap class A and won, setting up by a sixty yards. There was a close fight for second and third, however. At the last moment McCutchen agreed to ride from scratch in the second heat of the same race and qualified. The final heat will be ridden this evening and from the racing in the heats, an exciting contest is promised.

The special attraction of the Benner Brothers was greatly appreciated by all those present and the tiny riders in their little red and white racing suits reminded one strongly of Palmer Cox's Brownies.

The six-year-old lad gave his four-year-old brother 100 yards start in a one-third of a mile race. The little boys rode like veterans, and when they neared the finish line with the larger brother a little in the rear the crowd went wild. Some of the older portion of the audience who are not usually very mirthful, laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks to see the little lads put down their heads and spurt like old-timers.

The fifty bright gasoline lamps, aided by the moon, made the track almost as light as day, and the spectators had no trouble in watching the racing all through its length.

The announcing was very good, every item of interest to the audience being announced without delay. All the officials were, in fact, very satisfactory, and not an unfair decision or unsatisfactory ruling was made during the evening. The meet was, as far as management and racing could make it, a grand success, and if there is not a large attendance this evening it will not be the fault of the promoters.

The officials were:

Referee—O. S. Bunnell, Philadelphia.

A Coming Building.

Work has been progressing quite rapidly at the site of the J. W. Jackson building on the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street. The stones for the foundation are beginning to be laid while the excavating is nearly completed.

FAREWELL TO MR. BRADY.

East Third Street Mission Bid Godspeed to a Co-laborer.

The members of the East Third mission met at the mission last evening and gave Irving Brady, one of the members, a farewell reception.

There were about twenty-five persons present, and the evening was devoted to sociability. Piano solos by Clifford Braider, violin solos by R. W. Barnes and remarks by Superintendent L. W. Randolph and Irving Brady, were enjoyed. During the evening refreshments were served.

All expressed their regret upon the departure of Mr. Brady who leaves for Virginia on Friday, where he will study law, and many wished him Godspeed in his undertaking. The affair was one of pleasure to all.

HIS BICYCLE CONFISCATED.

A Newark Man Puts up His Wheel for Riding Without a Light.

George Rice, a bicycle rider from Newark, came to Plainfield last night with his wheel to witness the races on the Crescent Oval. He rode down North avenue with a friend, and when he reached Park avenue, Policeman Frederickson noticed that he had no light, not even a lamp. He was stopped and the letter of the law was explained to him. Rice pleaded with the officer to let him go, but it was of no use. His wheel was placed in the rookery and Rice was fined $5. He did not pay the fine last night, but said he would come around today and settle. As a result Rice walked to the track.

Disorder in General.

Sometime Monday afternoon someone entered the home of J. E. Townsend on Coddington avenue while he and his wife were away, and when they got through one would have thought they were preparing to move. The contents of the house were completely turned upside down, the clock, stoves, piano and carpets being the only things left in their place. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend were greatly surprised on their return to find their goods in such a disordered state. Mr. Townsend says that he had a late supper.

Contracts Filed.

The following contracts have been filed in the county clerk's office at Elizabeth from August 22d to August 28th:

Mrs. Ann Bartle, Plainfield, with Walter S. Arthur, carpenter, house addition, $650; The Plainfield Land and Improvement Co., with Walter S. Arthur, Plainfield, two houses on Sixth street, Plainfield, carpentering, painting, masonry, etc., except heating, $7,000; First National Bank, Plainfield, with Bart, Than & Fraser, Hoboken, marble work, $1,095; George H. Batchelor, Plainfield, with A. M. Griffin, plumbing and heating house, West Seventh street, $287.20; A. D. Thompson, Plainfield, with J. C. Manning, house on West Seventh street, plumbing, carpentering etc., $3,640; A. D. Thompson with W. C. Smith, Plainfield, house, masonry, $578.

He Was Honest.

Hazel Grant, the daughter of Webster Grant, of Kensington avenue, lost a valuable pin while on an outing at Tom's River some time ago. Yesterday the pin was returned, having been found by some man, who was honest enough to return it.

A Big Time.

The Red Men are preparing for one of their grand jollifications tonight when a reception is to be given to the Poambo Tribe, No. 65, of Perth Amboy, by the Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, in their hall in the Elkwood building. All Red Men are cordially invited to be present.

Dr. Carroll's Talent Recognized.

It is rumored on good authority that Dr. Carroll, of North Plainfield, has just signed a three years contract to furnish and compile the religious department of a new encyclopedia, for which plans for publication are now being arranged.

Think of the Dirt.

How many loads of dirt would you think the teams of Capt. Hand hauled out of the cellar he has just excavated for the J. W. Jackson building at the corner of Madison avenue and Front street? Well, the Captain has computed that over 7,000 loads have been taken out.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WHEN STUDIES WILL RESUME

HIGH SCHOOL REPAIRS DELAY THE OPENING A WEEK.

Date Set for September 16th—Janitors Appointed for the Ensuing Year—Talk of Teaching Stenography—Other Business.

Owing to the work of repairs at the High School building the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held last night at the home of the clerk, Frank B. Clark, on Central avenue. After the usual budget of monthly bills were presented and ordered paid, Tax Collector John Johnson reported that $233.38 school money had been collected for the month of August and deposited to the credit of the Board in the bank.

County Superintendent B. Holmes in a letter stated that proportionate share for Plainfield of State school money for 1895 96 was $1,882 39, which is over $41 more than last year. Both reports were received and filed.

A letter from C. B. Harris accepting the position of janitor of the Washington School at $40 a month on trial was received and filed.

Mr. Lounsbury read a letter from the Board of Health which asked the Board whether they were going to place fire-escapes on the school buildings.

Mr. Lounsbury answered the letter by stating that he did not know what they had to do with it.

The matter of papering the assembly room and the Stillman building was referred to the building committee with power.

Mr. Lounsbury brought up the subject of placing corrugated rubber matting on the steps and landings in the Stillman building, on trial, at a cost of about $40, and if satisfactory to do the same with the other buildings. The work was ordered done.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that there was yet considerable work to be done on the High School building, and that it would not be ready for the opening on September 9th. The time of reopening the High School was, in consequence, postponed till Monday, September 16th.

A communication was received from G. B. Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, asking that his son, Fred, who has been attending the Washington school, be allowed this year to attend the Franklin school. The reason given was that he desired to have his son and daughter attend the same school for company. The matter was referred with power to Superintendent Maxson.

The Board then went into executive session and reappointed the janitors of the schools as follows:

J. Clarkson and assistant, Stillman and Franklin buildings, $75 and $35 per month respectively; S. Hope, Bryant school, $70 per month; H. Pugh, Irving, $65 per month; J. M. Scull, Wadsworth, $12 per month. The latter was formerly paid $10 and the Board increased the salary to $12.

John Whiting, a former student and graduate of the High School, was present at the meeting and presented to the Board the advisability of introducing stenography in the schools. He stated that it would strengthen the memory and be useful in a business way to the students, and that he would give lessons for the sum of $1 each, with twelve to fifteen sessions a week. The matter was laid over for further consideration. The Board then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

"Plainfield, '96."

Miss Emily Coriell, of Church street, has composed a hymn entitled "Plainfield, '96" which will be sung at the State convention at Atlantic City.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TWO OF THEM CAUGHT.

Borough Scrappers Leave $22 for the Labor Day Melee.

Constable Tayner, of the borough, succeeded in capturing James Burke and Michael Motley, the men who were engaged in a fight Monday afternoon on Somerset street, as exclusively reported in The Daily Press.

Burke was found in Anderson's restaurant on Somerset street last night and Motley was caught at his place of employment at the Climax bottle-stopper factory this morning.

They were both given a hearing by Justice Crosley, this morning. Burke was fined $15 and Motley $7. The fines were paid and the men released.

Ed. Thompson, the third party in the fight is still at large, but there is good prospect of a speedy capture.

AUTUMN WORK BEGUN.

Justice Newcorn's Court the Scene of Several Cases.

Justice Newcorn's court was quite lively this morning. Two cases of French vs. Bindenburger and others, on contract, came up. Judgment was rendered for the plaintiff and execution issued in both cases. In the suit of Schummel vs. Verete, on contract, a suit for wages, judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. Judgment was also rendered for the plaintiff in the case of Miller vs. Verete, on contract.

Summons was issued in the case of Steinhart Brothers & Company vs. Wallace V. Miller, on contract, returnable on the 9th.

The Wail of One Far Gone.

Of course, the sewer will be nice.
When it is in its little bed,
But ten to one before 'tis there
You and I will both be dead.
There may have been an awful row,
Before the pyramids were made,
But I will back our sewer men,
To put the pharaohs in the shade.
The trolley folk were slow enough,
With all the months they used to take,
But when it comes to artistic languor, procrastination, sluggishness, torpidity, somnolence, oscitancy, lethargy, inertia, lotus-eating, dawdling, drawling, lagging, loafing, lolling, lounging and dead-to-the-world-ness,
The sewer people take the cake!
—The Human Being.

Asleep in a Wagon.

Wm. Hadley, a former resident of Plainfield, but late of Brooklyn, was found by Marshal Doud last night asleep in a wagon on Vine street. The man evidently had been drinking and was a little troublesome. He was locked up and this morning Justice Crosley suspended sentence. Hadley is suffering from a broken arm caused by falling from a ladder recently and was on his way to see his sister in Easton, Pa., when he got in trouble here. He started for his destination when released.

A Social on the Lawn.

Friendship Degree, Lodge of Rebecca, gave a festival on the lawn of C. H. Rugg, East Second street, last evening. Chinese lanterns were tastefully arranged about the grounds, while the lemonade well in the centre was prettily decorated with bunting, flags and greens. A charming evening was enjoyed by all present.

A Noon Time Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Ada Josephine Miller, daughter of Mrs. F. A. Miller, to George L. Dunn, of Scotch Plains, occurred today at twelve o'clock at the bride's home.

And Still They Come.

The great success with which the special sales of Neuman Brothers have been met, has induced them to continue the sale today and tomorrow. They are receiving a new supply every day, so go early and take your pick.

Struck by Lightning.

The house occupied by E. Messerschmidt, on Jackson avenue was struck by lightning last Saturday afternoon, and a small piece of wood was torn from the peak of the dwelling. There was no other damage.

Fanwood Inspectors.

The following are the inspectors of election in Fanwood: Republican—James E. Goodman, Wm. R. Buckley; Democratic—John Schmidt, Charles H. French.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

Fair Luna Coquettes with the Earth's Shadow.

Totally Obscured for One Hour and Forty-one Minutes—Not an Uncommon Astronomical Event, But the Night Was Exceedingly Favorable for Observation.

Washington, Sept. 4.—People who were out late last night beheld an interesting sight in the total eclipse of the moon. It was the second of the year, but the previous one, which occurred on March 10, was not successfully observed on account of the clouds. Last night, however, the conditions for observing the eclipse could not have been bettered. The fair Luna began to coquette with the earth's shadow at 9:48, when just the edge of her bright disc was obscured by the penumbra. At 11 o'clock she had fairly passed into the the earth's shadow, and began to assume a dull coppery tinge. The total eclipse was reached at 12:06 when the moon hung in the sky like a great copper globe, sadly in want of a burnishing. In this condition the satellite continued until 1:47 a. m., when she again began to emerge into the penumbra. The eclipse was entirely over at 2:44, when Luna once more shown as brightly as if she had never pouted behind the earth's shadow. The moon's disc is nearly always visible at the height of the eclipse, owing to the refraction of the sun's rays from the earth's atmosphere. Such a common astronomical event as an eclipse of the moon caused little if any extraordinary attention from the officials at the naval observatory, but many laymen in the science and numerous others, attracted by the clear and cool September night, lingered long beyond their usual hour for retiring and watched the display in the sky from the early tinging of shadow until totality.

Observed at Harvard.

Boston, Sept. 4.—The eclipse of the moon last night was plainly visible, the sky being cloudless. At Harvard observatory Professor Searle was in charge of the observations. He was assisted in his time observations by Professor Oliver C. Wendell, with the twelve-inch refracting telescope and John Raynor Edmands, while H. R. Colson succeeded in obtaining several excellent photographs with the eighteen-inch Draper photographic telescope.

MURDERED BY A HIGHWAYMAN

Urban Had Come to the Rescue of His Brother.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 4.—Highwaymen Monday night at Pleasant Hill assaulted Anthony Urban with a sandbag and then shot to death his brother Matthew, who had come to his rescue. The murder took place at Urban's home and the fatal bullet hit him while he stood on the door step. Peter Arschoavage was yesterday arrested and locked up on suspicion of having committed the murder.

Announces the Names of Members of the Executive Committee.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—Senator Quay arrived in this city yesterday and visited the headquarters of the republican state committee. There he remained two hours making preliminary preparations for the coming campaign. Ex-State Chairman Gilkinson turned over the books, papers and other things of the committee to his successor. The new chairman announced his appointments subject to ratification by the state committee of the following eleven persons as members of the executive committee which is to be auxiliary to the state committee and advisory to Chairman Quay: Frank Willing Leach of Philadelphia, chairman; Senators Boies Penrose and C. Wesley Thomas of Philadelphia, Lieut.-Gov. Lyon and Congressman Stone of Allegheny, Congressman Robinson and ex-Senator Cooper of Delaware county, ex-Lieut.-Gov. Waires of Lackawana, State Senator Andrews of Crawford, Lyman D. Gilbert of Dauphin and S A Davenport of Erie.

PIETZEL'S SUPPOSED BODY.

Holmes' Alleged Victim Again Exhumed and a Leg Bone Taken.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—The supposed body of Benjamin Pietzel, whom H. H. Holmes is alleged to have murdered, and which was exhumed in the Mechanics' cemetery last Saturday and decapitated for the purpose of endeavoring to identify it by means of Pietzel's teeth, was again disinterred yesterday by the coroner's physicians. A part of the leg was taken, which it is understood will be used in aiding Mrs. Pietzel in identifying by a scar thereon, the body as that of her husbands.

KITE LOST HER WAY,

Encountered Stormy Weather—Engaged an Esquimaux Pilot.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 4.—Capt. McKenzie of the Gloucester fishing schooner John F. McKenzie makes an important correction of the statement respecting the Peary steamer Kite, given out by his mate yesterday. The Kite did not reach Holsteinburg till July 27, instead of the 15th. She met with stormy weather, overran Holsteinburg sixty miles and had to engage an Esquimaux pilot to make the return trip to the harbor. All the members of the party are in splendid health.

FLEEING FOR SAFETY

South Jersey Forest Fires Spreading Rapidly.

The Flames Rushing Towards Egg Harbor with Awful Fury—Gangs of Men Fighting the Fire, But They Are Making Little Headway. Worst Blaze in Years.

Cape May, N. J., Sept. 4.—A change of wind to the south gave the forest fire which broke out near Woodbine Monday fresh impetus last evening, and it is burning with awful fury. Its line is said to extend for forty miles, and the flames are eating their way with great rapidity towards Egg Harbor. It is the worst woods fire in years. Gangs of men are out fighting with might and main to stop its onward rush by back firing, but they are making but slight headway. Residents are fleeing from their homes which are endangered. Dense masses of smoke and flying cinders are driven before the brisk winds and passengers on the railroad trains are almost stifled. They describe the fire as very alarming.

HEAVY DAMAGE BY FLOODS.

Railroad Bridges and Telegraph Wires Washed Away in Mexico.

St. Louis, Sept. 4.—Dispatches from Saltillo and other points in eastern Mexico say that section of the country has just been visited by the heaviest floods known for many years. The Mexican National railroad has suffered heavy losses, ten bridges having been washed away north of Saltillo. Telegraph wires are also down in that part of the country and great damage has been caused to crops and property. Official reports of the havoc created by the mountain rain last Friday in northeastern Mexico prove the situation even worse than first reported. Between Monterey and Laredo at least ten miles of telegraph wires were washed away, and almost every bridge was destroyed. The loss will probably be not less than $500,000. The Mexican National railroad and the gulf railroad and the Gulf railway are equally crippled toward the east.

AN AMERICAN SAILOR STABBED.

Fight Between British and Newark Tars Over the Stars and Stripes.

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—By a private letter from Montevideo it is learned that on July 4 the sailors of the American cruiser Newark and those from the British merchant marine in port had a rough and tumble fight. A Briton took down the American flag that was used in the decorations of a saloon. That started the row, and for twenty minutes the fighting was fast and furious. No one was seriously injured. Later in the day John Astrom, one of the Newark's men, was dangerously stabbed in the abdomen. He was recovering when the letter was written.

KILLED BY A RUNAWAY HORSE.

Sad Accident to a Woman While Riding a Bicycle.

Chicopee, Mass., Sept. 4.—Miss Carrie Stoddard, aged 30, of Chicopee Falls, while riding her bicycle on the road to Chicopee was run down by a runaway horse drawing a light wagon. One of the shafts of the wagon penetrated her body just above the waist, causing death within half an hour. Miss Stoddard's death shocks the entire community as she belonged to a well known family and was highly respected.

RELIGIOUS RIOTS IN INDIA.

Ten Mohammedans Killed After Attacking a Hindu Procession.

Bombay, Sept. 4.—In a riot at Dhulia, province of Khandeish, between Hindus and Mohammedans, five of the latter were killed outright and five more, who were wounded, died soon afterwards. Fifty Mohammedans in all were wounded. The riot was caused by an attack which the Mohammedans made upon a Hindu procession. The police guarding the procession fired upon the rioters.

TELL-TALE FACES.

PINCHED AND CAREWORN,

As Worn by Many American Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The "tell-tale face" is worn by many American women, and is a symptom of symptoms, a signal of distress.

While women do all in their power to hide their condition, the practised eye soon detects the trouble.

When pains and aches are felt in every part of the body, when faintness, dizziness, and that bearing-down feeling prevail, when loss of sleep and appetite are reducing flesh daily, when the society of friends is irksome, and the hopeless "blues" predominate, then the face is pinched, haggard, and careworn, and prompt relief is necessary, or a beautiful life will be sacrificed.

An American woman, Lydia E. Pinkham, a student of women and their diseases, twenty years ago succeeded in producing an absolute cure for all diseases of women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands to-day as it did then, pre-eminent.

Mrs. H. Wampler, of Barabo, Wis., whose letter we were permitted to publish last year, writes that she hopes Mrs. Pinkham will continue to use her name, as the publication in newspapers of the account of her own wonderful cure and relief from years of misery has been the means of influencing many suffering women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and become well like herself. Mrs. Wampler feels, and rightly, too, that in this way she is doing a great good.

THEIR MONEY IS SCARCE

Englishmen Not Anxious To Back Valkyrie.

The Betting in London Is Three to One on the Defender, with Few Takers—Both Boats in Fine Condition and the Races Will Be Strictly Contests of Merit.

New York, Sept. 4.—A cablegram received from London by an evening paper reads as follows: "The betting is 3 to 1 on the Defender, and very little of it. There is plenty of American money offering, but the Englishmen want long odds." This would indicate that the Britishers, while perfectly willing to shout and argue that their yacht is a world beater, are not quite so ready to back up their opinions with hard cash. The betting here has not been at such long odds as 3 to 1, and the cable dispatch above gave rise to the surmise that possibly the Valkyrie had been found wanting and that the Englishmen had got the tip.

3 to 1 None Too Many.

Commondore James D. Smith of the cup committee was seen and asked if he knew of anything the matter with the Valkyrie that would cause the betting in England to be so much in favor of the Yankee boat, when the Britishers were reported to be more confident than ever before that they had a grand chance for the cup. "There is absolutely nothing the matter with the Valkyrie," he replied. "She is in her finest condition and will sail against the Defender in perfect trim. If she doesn't win it will be because the other boat is the better. The Defender will keep the cup here beyond a doubt. Odds of 3 to 1 on her are none too many."

VICTORY FOR BELL TELEPHONE

Decision Rendered Against the Western Union Company.

Boston, Sept. 4.—In the United States circuit court of appeals yesterday a decision was rendered in the case of the American Bell Telephone company, appellant, vs. the Western Union Telegraph company et al, complainants, appellees, in favor of the appellant. The suit, which was originally brought in the circuit court by the Western Union Telegraph company, the Gold & Stock Telegraph company and the American Speaking Telephone company, and continued by the Western Union company, was for an accounting from the Bell company alleged to have been the right of the plaintiffs under certain contracts made by them with the Bell company.

SHIP DESTROYED BY FIRE.

The Bawnmore Was Wrecked and Flames Finished Her.

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—Fire has completed the destruction of the tank steamship Bawnmore, which was wrecked ten miles below Bandon, Ore., on Aug. 28. Twelve hours after she went ashore the waves beat her down to starboard and the water rushed into the cabin and forecastle and got into the tanks. In the after tank there was a large quantity of lime, and as soon as the water reached it the flames broke out. From tank to tank the flames spread, and soon the hull and iron decks were red hot. The street cars, lumber and boats composing her cargo were soon in flames.

BOTH WILL DIE.

A Man and Woman Injured While Riding a Tandem Wheel.

San Francisco, Sept. 4.—Miss Marion N. Hall and George McCloud while riding a tandem wheel in Golden Gate park yesterday met with injuries which will probably result in the death of both. They were going at great speed when Miss Hall fainted and fell from the wheel. Her mishap caused the rear wheel to sheer, unseating McCloud and throwing him violently from the saddle. McCloud's skull was fractured and Miss Hall's right collar bone was broken and she is also suffering from concussion of the brain.

Twenty-three Horses Cremated.

Washington, Ind., Sept. 4.—Fire started in Fleming's livery stable yesterday at Petersburg, ten miles south of here, and twenty-three horses were cremated. The opera house building and contents and the Read hotel were also burned to the ground. The total loss is $50,000.

Historical Fetes at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 4.—The literary and historical fete began here yesterday morning in the opera house, and was continued in the Pompeian house of Pausa in the evening, when representations of Roman life and historical incidents in life and action were given.

Bank Note Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The national bank note circulation outstanding on August 31 was $212,249,173, an increase during August of $967,265. The circulation based on bonds was $187,970,343, an increase during the month of $1,412,910.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The president appointed Ransford Stevens Miller, jr., New York to be interpreter of the United States legation in Japan.

DID NOT RECEIVE THE FEES.

Spofford's Reply to the St. Louis Music Firm.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Regarding the suit brought in St. Louis by Mrs. Jessie Beattin Thomas, the wife of ex-Congressman Thomas of Metropolis, Ill., against a music publishing firm of the former city for failure to copyright two of her songs, and the allegations of the publishers that they had forwarded the necessary copyright fees to Librarian Spofford of the congressional library and held his receipt therefor, Mr. Spofford said the fees in question had not been received and he had of course given no receipt. Claims of a like character were occasionally made and he had had trouble before with the firm which is now being sued. To avoid these claims Mr. Spofford some time ago began the practice of sending with each copyright acknowledgment a request that fees hereafter be paid by checks on their respective local banks. These checks, when returned to the issuers, were most desirable forms of receipts and there was less risk from loss in the mails than when bills were sent, often unregistered. Nearly all the large publishing houses are now remitting by checks, even in such small amounts as fifty cents. Mr. Spofford said that notwithstanding a penalty of $100 for the unauthorized use of the copyright privilege, there was a considerable amount of music, books and other publications in circulation which were not registered at the library, though claiming to be.

FORTUNES TO UNITE.

Moses Taylor and Gertrude Vanderbilt Engaged.

New York, Sept. 4.—Before the winter season has been completed Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, only daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt, will become a bride. It has long been rumored that she intends to wed Moses Taylor, the millionaire clubman, and now a verification of the rumor which has come from the friends of the couple at Newyort places it beyond the shadow of a doubt that two hearts and two fortunes are to unite. Mr. Taylor's wealth is computed at the lowest figure to be $20,000,000. The bride is one of America's wealthiest heiresses. She has an annual income of over $50,000, and will some day be worth not less than $20,000,000. They will be the richest young couple in the country.

ACCUSED FROM THE GALLOWS.

Congressman McAlpin's Son Tries To Get at the Condemned Man.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 4.—A special from Jasper, Fla., says: Joseph B. Norton, white, aged 30, was hanged there yesterday for the murder of James Denmark, also while. Three thousand persons saw the hanging. Norton ascended the gallows firmly. He declared his innocence, and said his life had been sworn away by perjured witnesses. He pointed out Messrs. Miles and McAlpin as two of the men who had sworn falsely against him. This almost caused a riot. Young McAlpin, who is a son of Representative McAlpin, made a desperate effort to get at Norton, but Sheriff Polhill arrested him and order was restored. Norton called on God to witness that Judson Taylor killed Denmark.

RACE TROUBLE AT CENTRALIA.

Negroes Still Insist on Using the Schools Set Apart for Whites.

Centralia, Ill., Sept. 4.—The two school buildings set apart by the school board for the use of negro pupils were empty yesterday as they have been since the school commenced. The buildings are in every way as well equipped as those of the white schools and provided with competent teachers, but the negroes will not use them. The blacks demand admission to all schools, and threaten suits for damages for interfering with their rights of citizenship. The whites will retaliate by refusing employment to black men.

COUNT EMICH UNDER ARREST.

He and a Woman Are Wanted in Germany.

London, Sept. 4.—Count Emich of Alt Leiningen-Westerburg and his woman companion, Olga Bauernfeind, were arraigned in the Bow street police court yesterday under a warrant demanding their extradition to Germany to answer the charge of abduction. The prisoners are charged with having abducted and detained a child whose possession was presumably necessary to the abductors for pecuniary purposes. After the warrant was read the prisoners were remanded for further hearing.

VICTORY FOR REBELS

Spanish Forces Routed at Dos Caminos.

Twenty-Five Killed, One Officer Wounded and One Taken Prisoner by the Insurgents—Captured Rebels Deported To Undergo Imprisonment in a Fortress.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 4.—News has been received here of an engagement which took place on August 23, near Dos Caminos, between a large force of rebels under the command of Antonio Macco and a party of guerrilleros. The government force lost twenty-five killed. One of the commanders of the Spanish forces was wounded and a Spanish lieutenant colonel was taken prisoner by the rebels. The insurgents loss is not known.

Captured Rebels Deported.

Havana, Sept. 4.—A company of Cubans under sentence of imprisonment in the fortress of Ceuta, Morocco, for rebellion were deported yesterday on board the steamer Cataluna. Felipe Petiton, Fabio Borrero, Antonio Saavdra and Antonio and Barban Tase are under sentence of life imprisonment, while the following are condemned to twenty years: Mariano Aguero, Alberto Bozo, Elpidio Marin, Miguel Gonzales, Pablo Saavedra, Joze Yanez, Juan Gualberto, Gonez Agapito, Cludio Laranaga and Ignacio Lazaga.

War Balloons for Cuba.

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 4.—Samuel Andrews, a machinist of this city, has just perfected a war balloon which he has sold to a syndicate of New York Cubans for use in the aid of the Cuban insurgents. The balloon has been tested in the fields of New Jersey and works perfectly. Instead of the ordinary car it is fitted with an armored box, from which a number of bombs can be suspended. The bombs are ignited and released by automatic machinery in the box, and after all are discharged the box explodes, destroying the balloon and the secret mechanism. The machinery is worked by a steel spring. Andrews claims to have a device by which he can control the direction of the balloon.

LYNCHING EXPECTED TO-DAY.

Murderer Lane To Be Taken to Versailles for Trial.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 4.—William Lane, who murdered the two Rodenbaugs at Versailles, and who was removed here for protection from a mob, will be taken to Versailles to-day for trial and it is generally believed that a lynching will follow. The Nicholas people swear that he shall not die on the scaffold. Ever precaution is being taken for Lane's safety which shows that the officials are nervous. Heavily armed guards will accompany him. Rodenbaug's friends claim that the courts will not hang Lane and that a light sentence to the state prison is all he will get and that they propose to take the law in their hands. Judge Bullock of Lexington says that he will fight until killed to prevent a mob from hanging Lane. The Frankfort officials are prepared to receive any sort of a mob. A detachment of the state militia slept at the jail last night.

IS VON DER AHE MARRIED?

Manager Phelan Indirectly Denies the Report.

St. Louis, Sept. 4.—The rumored marriage of Chris Von der Ahe set the sports talking to-day. Five months ago his wife secured a divorce from him through default since when he has been paying marked attention to a beautiful St. Louis girl. Mr. Von der Ahe is with the Browns in the east and the lady is said to be here. In a private telegram Manager Phelan of the Browns indirectly denied that his principal is married.

CHOLERA IN JAPAN.

7,901 Cases and 4,804 Deaths from Jan. 1 to July 19 of This Year.

Washington, Sept. 4.—A report received at the Marine hospital service shows there were in Japan between Jan. 1, 1895, and July 19, of this year 7,901 cases of cholera and 4,804 deaths. In 1879 and 1886 the diseased assumed the most violent form, there being 162,637 cases and 105,786 deaths in 1879 and 155,923 cases and 108,409 deaths in 1886.

The only consolation there is in having the trolley in Plainfield is that some day it may be extended.

The New York Morning Advertiser tersely remarks that Mayor Strong can carry on an era of Reform in baseball as well as in municipal affairs.

Democratic harmony does not seem to be near at hand in New York. Tammany Hall invited the State Democracy to come into their caucuses and take a share of the delegates, but the latter refused and intend sending delegates to the State convention regardless of Tammany men.

A NIGHT OF MUSIC.

Councilman Fisk's Open Air Concert Appreciated by a Large Audience.

Councilman Fisk made no mistake when he postponed the open air concert from Saturday evening until last night. He could not have had a better night had he waited a year; not a cloud in the sky, the moon at full and the temperature simply ideal.

The people of Plainfield appreciated it too, for they turned out until the city park was comfortably full.

The concert concluded with the Honeymoon March which, although not on the programme, was too great a favorite to be left out. After all was over the throng still waited, like Oliver Twist, wanting more. Then the band played a few strains from "Home, Sweet Home" and their listeners took the hint.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A. E. Bushnell and family, of Park avenue, have returned after a sojourn at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Manning, of Brooklyn, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. John B. Drayton, of Franklin place.

John Anderson, of New York, spent Sunday and Monday with his cousin, Randolph Marsh of Plainfield avenue.

The Netherwood Closes.

The Hotel Netherwood closed today for the season. While the patronage of the house has not been sufficient to make the season a very profitable one, the management of John Spitler has been such as to make the resort a popular one with those that have visited it, and should Mr. Spitler again assume control next season the reputation which he has made ought to be sufficient to make a successful one. Mr. Spitler will probably remain in Plainfield this fall and possibly all winter.

Band Concert Saturday Night.

The next band concert will be given Saturday evening at the corner of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue. This one is given by Councilman Frost.

Boys Club Soon to Open.

The Boys Club will be reopened Monday evening, September 16th. The manual training department of the club begins October 1st.

Mr. Choate's Fee of $200,000.

A group of members of the legal profession were talking about the income tax decision, when some allusion was made to the size of the fees that were paid to counsel employed to fight the tax.

"I have it on the best authority," said an eminent lawyer from New York, "that Joseph Choate's retainer in the case was $100,000, with the understanding that if the decision of the court was favorable to the opponents of the tax he was to get $100,000 additional."—Washington Post.

Cupid's Overture.

Jennette (simpering)—I think the Count means to propose, ma!

Her Ma—Why, has he said anything to you?"

Jannette—No, but last night he asked what pa's income was.—Chicago Record.

Shakespeare Up to Date.

All the world's a wheel and men and women are the riders.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

—J. C. Dyer, 218 West Front street, has taken the agency for a superior sawed stone for sidewalks, similar to that laid in front of the Babcock building. Those contemplating laying walks would do well to consult him before purchasing.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

At Popular Prices.

An event of interest in the theatrical world will be the appearance next week at the Stillman Music Hall of the Bubb Comedy Company, Challenge Band and Orchestra, comprising in all nearly forty people. This company has a wide reputation of being the leading repertorie company now traveling, and sustains the reputation wherever it appears by the excellent performances it gives to the patrons at popular prices. There are many features that commend the Bubb company to the theatre-going public, the high standard plays produced and the superb company of actors and actresses engaged to interpret them. The celebrated Elmore children and the tons of special scenery carried by the company. Ladies and children take advantage of the popular dime matinees and in consequence these performances are well patronized. The admission in the evening is ten, twenty and thirty cents, which is in the reach of everybody and which should be the means of crowding the theatre nightly during the Bubb company's engagement next week.

A Mystery Explained.

The street-fight was almost over. One able-bodied gladiator lay prostrate on the sidewalk, and the other was enjoying the fruits of victory by kicking him in the ribs, while the crowd surged around to get a good view of the proceedings. Suddenly a figure appeared which caused strong men to hold their breath in astonishment.

It was a policeman!

With a fixed gaze and unfaltering step he advanced and laid his grasp on the shirt collar of the victor, who for a few seconds remained nerveless and paralyzed by the mysterious apparition, and, then tearing himself away, fled down an alley with a cry of horror.

Awed and silent, the crowd gathered round and gazed at the stern set face of the officer.

Suddenly a quiver passed over his features; he drew his coat cuffs several times across his eyes and looked helplessly about him.

"Where am I?" he gasped.

The mystery was explained at last. He was a sleep-walker.—Truth.

An Issue in Doubt.

Stranger—I was over to your courthouse to-day at the murder trial. I don't see why the jury deliberates so long; the prisoner proved a complete alibi.

Resident (Boomertown, Oklahoma)—Wal, I wouldn't like to gamble on the result. This is the first chance fer a hangin' since the new jail's bin built, an' local pride's at stake!—Puck.

The Summer Girl Joke.

Of all the jokes the dearest
That hangs on memory's wall,
The old, old joke of the summer girl,
It seemeth the best of all.

The ships have passed in the night time;
Big sleeves are getting passe;
Trilby has gone to the bow-wows,
And bloomers have had their day.

We look with longing fondness
At what we spurned last fall,
And the old, old joke of the summer girl,
Seemeth the best of all.

A dog was advertised to play on a piano at a circus. When the time came for the dog to perform he got on a seat and began playing. Suddenly a wag in the crowd shouted "rats!" upon which the dog bounded off the seat. But the dog kept on playing.—Minneapolis Journal.

OYSTERS OF THE RIGHT KIND.

Rogers, the Sea Food Man, Handles Them Direct From the Beds.

Plainfield being an inland town, it is not sometimes surprising if persons doubt the quantity of the fish which arrives here, but those who deal with Rogers, the sea food man, on West Second street, never have any doubts as to the quality of his goods, for it is only the one thing—first-class—as thousands can testify.

He delivers your order at your home as early in the day as desirable.

A prominent feature of this place is the oyster department. Now, those who know anything about oysters are satisfied that that there is a big difference in them.

This year Rogers intends making a specialty of them, and has made arrangements with four of the largest shippers in the business to supply him with nothing but the finest fancy stock of oysters to be had, commencing today. The prices, as usual, will be right on oysters as well as on all kinds of sea food.

A NEW YORKER IN LONDON.

He Got a Good View of the House of Commons.

A New York business man who is in England has written a letter from London to one of his friends here in which he says:

"I was in Parliament when the Liberal ministers threw up the sponge. There are many curious looking Englishmen in the House of Commons, and I never saw a more motley crowd. There were solemn looking personages wearing wigs. There were strange beings with bald heads and whiskers; there were red-haired and yellow-haired men; there were a hundred faces which Signor Lombroso ought to put in a book. Three-fourths of the members wore their hats in the House, mostly stovepipes and derbys.

"Nearly all of them were clumsily clad. Some wore ill-fitting dress-suits, others cutaways; many had sack coats of all colors, and but very few had stylish coats. Lots of them had trousers that were too short or too long, or very slouchy, while some wore clothes that looked so grotesque as to suggest Baxter street in New York or Petticoat lane in London.

"So much for my first impression of the first assembly of gentlemen in the world. I used to think that the House of Representatives in Washington was badly dressed, but I had not then seen the British House of Commons. As for the brains of Parliament, it seems to me that every man whom I have heard speak during my four visits to it had a hatful of them, closely packed, whether he was a Tory, a Unionist, or a Gladstonian. The speeches in the House of Commons are not in the nature of rant, but are rather plain and direct statements."

An Encounter With a Wildcat.

Harry Prutzman, of Leesport, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, had an exciting adventure this week on Fricker's Mountain, near Gouglersville. He had a day off and went out picking huckleberries.

He came to a mountain spring and lay on his stomach to take a drink. While in this position a wildcat sprang out of a tree above him and alighted upon his back. The animal sank its claws deep into the flesh causing great pain.

Having no weapon to defend himself with his chances seemed very slender for coming out of the contest with the vicious animal alive.

However, he turned, and after a desperate struggle succeeded in throwing the animal from him and regaining his feet. It immediately sprung upon him again, tearing his clothing and rending his flesh with its sharp claws.

After several encounters, which greatly weakened and fatigued him, he managed to deal the animal a sound kick, which sent it away some distance and gave him an opportunity to grasp a club which was lying near.

With this he managed to keep it at bay, and after a duel of about ten minutes it apparently became tired of the attack and moved away when Prutzman escaped.—Philadelphia Press.

Incorrigible.

A newly married man of my acquaintance, who evidently needs disciplice, thus discours s:

"A woman is a handy thing around the house. She does not cost any more to keep than you will give her, and she will take a great interest in you. If you go out at night she'll be awake when you get home, and then she'll tell you all about yourself, and more, too.

"Of course she will know where you have been, and what kept you out so late, and after she gets through telling you, she will ask where you have been, and what kept you out so late, and after telling her, she won't believe you, but you mustn't mind that, and if, after going to bed, she says she hasn't closed her eyes for the night, and then keeps up her conversation two hours longer, and won't go to sleep when she a chance, you musn't mind that, either; it's her nature."—Roxbury Gazette.

Professional Enthusiasm.

The patient had just described his symptoms and the physician grasped him by the hand.

"My dear fellow," he cried, "I cannot tell you how delighted I am that you should have come to me. You have a disease which has baffled the profession for years. Hitherto it has always proved fatal, and I've always wished to experiment on it myself. If I save you I shall be immortal; and if I don't—what's the odds?"—Harper's Bazar.

The Railroad that Didn't Go.

Lunatics often assume a superiority of intellect to others which is quite amusing. A gentleman travelling in England some years ago, while walking along the road, not far from the side of which ran a railroad, encountered a number of insane people out for a walk in charge of a keeper. With a nod toward the railway tracks he said to one of the lunatics:

"Where does this railway go to?"

The lunatic looked at him scornfully for a moment, and then replied:

"It don't go anywhere. We keep it here to run trains on."—Harper's Round Table.

Concerned About the Future.

They were seated in the parlor conversing on the uncertainty of life.

She—The future is a vast unfathomable mystery to us, isn't it?

He—Yes; all we know is that we have to go some time.

Voice from the Library would suit the convenience of the household if you'd make it sooner than that.—Richmond Despatch.

Philadelphia's largest trolley party made a round of the surburban roads in fifty cars one evening last week. Nearly every car carried musicians, and several brass bands were in the outfit. Trolley parties are just now Philadelphia's most exciting social events.

ELECTRICITY DOESN'T KILL.

Secrets of the Death Chamber at Auburn Prison.

In an interview, Dr. P. J. Gibbons, of Syracuse, originator of the present methods of resuscitating victims of electric shock, said regarding electrical executions:

"They don't kill the subjects by electricity; they kill them by the knife or otherwise, barring cases of specific cases of weakness, aneurism of the heart or weakness in the brain, in which cases the shock might produce rupture and certain death. Ninety-five per cent. of the subjects are not killed by the current. Now in the first place they use an alternating current. The alternating current hardly ever kills. The continuous current may coagulate the blood: the alternating current never does that. If they want to kill criminals by electricity they should construct a special continuous current dynamo for the purpose with coarse winding. Then they can kill their subjects. They don't do it now.

"I applied to Gov. Flower for permission to attempt to resuscitate victims of the electric current. At that time I was very anxious to let the world know what could be done in the way of resuscitation. They would not allow it, however. I don't care anything about it now, for the reason that the knowledge of these methods is now spread all over the world where electricity is used, and its utility has been demonstrated, and that was the object I had in view.

"I was in Auburn prison when they killed the negro Johnson. This is a chapter which has been kept secret long enough. After the current had been applied to Johnson I was allowed to apply the simple means of artificial respiration and did so.

"It was not very long before Johnson gave a gasp and showed unmistakable evidence of returning consciousness. The Warden intervened and prevented the further prosecution of the attempt, and, of course, the symptoms of returning life cased.

"A little later they performed the autopsy on Johnson. It was agreed among those present that the facts should remain one of the secrets of the death chamber. They might as well be known now, and there they are.

"About two months before Johnson was killed, they experimented on another negro named Taylor. You will remember that in Taylor's case it was announced that the armature of the dynamo burned out and that it was necessary to obtain a current from the city lighting plant to continue the operation.

"Such was not the case. The armature burned out, to be sure, after the current had been applied fully, but when they applied the current the second time, fifty three minutes later, they applied it to a dead man. Taylor came to himself sufficiently to move and talk and walk.

"Deadly drugs were administered to him, and he was killed by those drugs, and, as I say, when the borrowed current was applied it was applied to a corpse, made such by the administering of deadly drugs. There is another secret of the electric chamber."

"Dr. Gibbons," said the interviewer, "that is a very serious charge. Do I understand you perfectly? This man recovered partial consciousness and would have lived had not the drugs been administered to him, and a second application of the current was made after he was dead from the effects of the drugs?"

"That is the statement exactly," said Dr. Gibbons, "and I am prepared to prove its correctness."

"Now about this latest case, that of Dr. Buchanan," said the reporter.

"That was the easiest case of any of them to resuscitate. Dr. Buchanan would have recovered consciousness after the first application if he had been left alone and no remedies applied. After the second application consciousness would have been restored by the simple means we are talking about, without even the use of a bellows."

A Born Diplomat.

Charlie was caught napping on the porch of the summer resort. A pair of soft little hands covered his eyes and a sweet voice commanded:

"Guess who it is."

Nothing very dreadful for Charlie in this, you think; but then you don't know that Charlie was engaged to two girls, and, for the life of him, couldn't decide which voice it was, which made it a very embarrassing situation for Charlie. A wrong guess would lead to complications awful to think of. But a happy thought inspired Charley, and he announced:

"It's the dearest, sweetest little girl in all the world."

"Oh, you lovely boy!" gurgled the satisfied one, as she removed her hands.

And now Charlie thinks of applying for a foreign Ministry, feeling that his talents would be wasted in any other than a diplomatic field.—Puck.

Tantalizing.

Little Rastus was reading aloud for the edification of the rest of the family from his book of fairy tales.

He began:

"Once there was a flock of chickens which wandered after dark into a watermelon patch——"

"See heah, boy!" his father interrupted. "When de preacher comes nex' Sunday I gwine ask heem ef dem words is really dar, an' ef you jes' ben makin' dat up fer to tantalize me, I gwine dust yo' jacket till yo' tongue hang out!"—Indianapolis Journal.

Considerate.

"Mary we have breakfast at 8 o'clock," said Mrs. Post to her new servant girl, who was already entertaining several of her friends who had dropped in to see how she liked her new place.

"All right, mam," said Mary. "If I ain't up don't wait for me."—San Francisco Post.

GOLD WATCHES.

There Are Thousands of Jewish Watch Dealers, but No Watchmakers.

The manager of one of the largest watch factories in the United States says that while his company have a very large number of Jewish customers who buy watches at wholesale for their stores, there is not in the country a single watch factory of Jewish proprietorship.

A large part of the retail trade in watches is in the hands of Jewish dealers, whose purchases from the factories amount to millions of dollars a year, but they leave to other people the business of manufacturing them, which is supposed to be a very profitable industry.

There are certain kinds of watches which can be manufactured only by existing companies, as their mechanism is guarded by patents; but there are other watches no part of the works of which is patented. In the making of American watches machinery is employed to an extent unequaled in any foreign country. The factory manager says that in the delicate and complicated processes through which a stemwinder watch is made not far from four thousand distinct mechanical operations are involved, besides other work which does not come within the scope of machinery.

In several of the largest American watch factories the operatives are numbered by the thousand, and include both men and women. It is surprising for one who is unacquainted with the business to learn that there are single factories in the United States which have manufactured as many as half a million watches in a year, and sold them, too.

Canine Knowledge of Human Speech.

No dog lover requires proof that his canine friends understand human speech, and he is always ready to accept new evidence in favor of a theory already held. Knowing this fact, a correspondent relates the exploits of a sailor dog appropriately named Jack.

His master was the captain of a fishing vessel sailing from Provincetown. Jack had often been his master's companion in his voyages, but on one occasion it was decided that the dog must be left at home. The eve of the captain's departure had come. The dog lay dozing beside the fire, and gave no sign of interest when his master said in ordinary tones: "We must shut Jack up in the barn to-night, or he will try to follow me in the morning."

Presently Jack barked to be let out, and no one thought any more about him until bedtime, when he was to be made prisoner. Then no Jack was to be found. In vain were whistling, calling, coaxing and scolding, and at last the puzzled master gave up the search.

The next morning the captain started before dawn on his long tramp to the neighboring port. There his sailors were waiting to row him to his vessel, which was one of a large fleet lying in the harbor at some distance from the shore. As they drew near his own vessel the captain was astonished to see the familiar head of Jack watching his approach with evident interest, and probably with varied emotions.

The dog's appearance had been as great a mystery to the sailors during the night as it was now to the captain. Shortly after midnight they had been startled by a whining and scratching at the vessel's side, and had been delighted to find their friend Jack begging to be taken from the water to the deck.

There is no reason to doubt that the creature had fully understood his master's purpose, and determined to forestall it. How he accomplished his long tramp to the port, swam across the harbor, and, in the darkness, selected his master's vessel from the large fleet of similar craft, I leave it to some master of canine psychology to explain. I simply state the facts as I know them to have occurred.—Youth's Companion.

Nature's Beverage.

The weary teetotaller riding along a dusty white hot turnpike in Kentucky came to a farm house with a well sweep in the front yard and a man sitting in the shade by the gate.

"Good day," saluted the traveller. "Can I be accomodated with a drink here? I am very thirsty."

"Certainly," was the hospitable response. "What would you like to have?"

"Nature's beverage, of course," replied the teetotaler, somewhat shocked.

"All right," said the native, taking a bottle of corn juice from his pocket and handing it over. "There's about a pint in there and plenty more in the house. Help yourself."

Public Office for Riches.

The honorarium which the Chinese Government paid Mr. John W. Foster for his diplomatic services is said on excellent authority to be between $50,000 and $60,000, and not $250,000, as first reported. On the occasion of Mr. Foster's first meeting with Li Hung Chang, the latter asked the American ex-Secretary of State:

"You have held many offices?"

"Yes, quite a number."

"And you are not rich?"

"No."

"You have a queer country," replied the viceroy, "I cannot understand you."

The Bicycle and the Piano.

There is one redeeming feature about the bicycle craze; the father who buys his girls one each has no money left to buy a piano.—Atchison Globe.

Sure of Him.

"Isn't he rather fast?" asked the anxious mother.

"Yes, mamma, in one sense of the word. I don't think he can get away."—Indianapolis Journal.

I.

Michel Grey was missing. All the police in Paris could not have told us more. The man had vanished like a phantom, leaving no word, no message, no letter. The city had taken him from our sight. Whether he were alive or dead, in France or out of France, a willing absconder or the victim of the assassin, neither friend nor enemy could tell. He had gone like the night, and had left us to face the problem as we might.

That was a problem for us, and that we could not begin and end with his going, I never had a doubt. He had been seen about with Sir Nicolas for the best part of a month; my master's game with his sister, Dora Grey, was known to all the town about; there wasn't a servant in the hotel that didn't understand where the hate beween the two men came from. And, to cap all, the man went away at the height of it, and we were left with the girl, and with all the talk that followed his disappearance.

Until this moment I had looked upon the whole episode as a handsome turn of fortune. There were many weeks after the strange hoax of the golden egg when my master never put his nose outside the Hotel de Lille. In all the years I've known him I can never remember such an upset as that business was both to his health and to his energy. He seemed just like one stupefied, with no taste for work and no taste for play. The little money that he possessed dribbled away pound by pound until I had to find what was wanted even for his daily living. He no longer earned anything at the billiard-table; he scarce read the newspapers. There were days when he never got up from his bed; days when he did not open his lips to man or woman. And I do believe that he was never so low, or in such a queer way, as upon the evening that brought him face with Dora Grey and gave a turn to his life which he was to feel for many years.

She came to the hotel quite sudden—an auburn-haired, blue-eyed little thing with the fairest skin woman ever had, and a way with her which was wonderful to see. The name down in the visitor's book was "Dora Grey, of Boston," and just above it I saw written "Michel Grey, artist." But I didn't mark the man until the following morning, though Sir Nicolas, who had gone down into the garden that night, the first time for many weeks, was as full of the pair of them as he could be.

"Hildebrand," says he, "there's an American couple below which is worth the knowing. She's an artist from Boston, and she's come to the schools. It's the Greys, the railway people, they are; and rolling in the money. Did ye hear a fair-haired girl laughing at the top of her voice in the garden? Well, that's the one I mean. Faith, it's speaking manners these Americans have for sure. She'd told me her history before we'd done the soup."

"Is she staying long, sir?" I asked.

"Three months certain, and likely longer. She's come here to be near the painting. That was her brother that sat opposite Jack Ames to-night. A white-faced man, with a liver, I'll wager. I'll know him better this time to-morrow."

It was extraordinary, I must say, to see how a little thing like this drew him out of himself. While he'd gone down to dinner telling me that I should find his body in the morgue before the month was out, he came up to bed all cheerful like a boy, and next morning he took an hour to dress himself. I saw him sitting down with the Americans to dejeuner, and after dinner he was three hours with the brother over at the billiard-room at the Cafe Rouge. Then I knew that the business had begun, and that luck had lifted us out of the groove again.

"They're a queer couple altogether, Hildebrand," says Sir Nicolas, when I took him his coffee next morning; "bedad! the man puzzles me. He's as mean of the money as a Scotchman out of Montrose. There was three hours we were playing last night and not a sovereign changed hands."

"You won't pay many bills out of that, sir," says I.

"And don't I know it. Isn't it the girl I'm thinking of? They're the railway people I'd be telling you—the Greys of Boston. That was a lucky day which sent them to the Hotel de Lille; and for three months, too. You can do much with a woman in three months, Hildebrand."

"That you can, sir, if she's willing."

"Oh, she'll be willing enough by and by. There's no sugar for an American tongue like a title to roll over it. I was the man of the party before I'd known her an hour. She's just the sweetest bit of a brogue you ever heard, and her father's worth five million dollars. Get me my light frock coat, will you know I'm to drive to St. Cloud this very morning."

Well, he went off with her sure enough, the pair of them dressed up until you might have picked them out of a thousand. When he was gone, and the place was put a bit straight, I strolled over to the Cafe Rouge to get my lunch and read the English papers. Paris was beginning to be full again then, for we were almost through the autumn, and the gardens were cold at nights. But you could find the folks you wanted any time from midday until four, and no sooner was I in the place than I saw Michel Grey, the brother of the little American woman Sir Nicolas had just driven to St. Cloud. He was sitting at a table, and there was a bottle of hock before him.

"Halloa, my man," cried he, as I passed him, and he didn't speak a bit like an

"WOULD THAT BE ANY BUSINESS OF YOURS?"

American, "I'd half-a-dozen words with you if you don't mind."

"With the greatest pleasure in life, sir," I replied, thinking, at the same time, what a peculiar-looking gentleman he was.

"Is it long since you left Dublin?" asks he, quite calm like, and pretending to see nothing of the start I gave.

"Would that be any business of yours?" I asked, sharp and short, and looking at him in a way he couldn't mistake.

"Certainly it would be," says he, "a cousin of mine knew a Sir Nicolas Steele in Dublin three years ago, and I was wondering if it was the same."

"Then you should have asked my guvnor," says I, while my heart began to jump so that I could hardly hold my hand still.

"Oh, no offense," cries he, and with that he slipped a five-franc piece into my hand.

"You've been in Paris long?" he asks.

"A month or more," says I, thinking where I could have him.

"Are you going back to England soon?"

"We are going back at the end of November. Sir Nicolas has engagements in London that month."

"Oh, then you are going back."

"Why, what would we be doing all the winter here in Paris?"

He seemed to think a while over this, taking a drink of the hock and rolling his bleary eyes as though he was looking for some one in the garden. Presently he said:

"Do you like the situation you're in?"

"Oh," said I, "it's much the same as other situations. Here to-day and gone to-morrow."

"Then you travel a good deal?"

"That's so—but travel or no travel, it's all the same to me."

"Your master seems a pleasant sort of gentleman?"

"I should call him that."

"He's a baronet or something, isn't he?"

"Exactly; he's Sir Nicolas Steele of Castle Rath, County Kerry."

"A generous man, I should say."

I looked at him straight, for I'd read him up by this time.

"It's a cold morning for taking in the open air, sir," says I, and with that I turned on my heel and left him.

Now, though I had taken it coolly enough, a duller head than mine could have seen through the man's talk.

"What's in the wind is this," said I to myself, when I got back to the hotel, "you've heard some gossip my fine gentleman, and you want to get to the bottom of it. If it's true that a cousin of yours knew Sir Nicolas Steele in Dublin three years ago, then you'll write to him, and what you'll learn won't keep your sister at the Hotel de Lille. Maybe that cousin is in Europe; more probably he's in America, which gives us a month. Anyway, it's you that we've got to play, and the sooner we begin the better."

This was my thought, and yet simple as it seemed, there was something happened later in the day which gave a new turn altogether to it. I'd been bothering my head with the matter all afternoon, making nothing new of it outside the fact that the danger signal had been rung, so to speak, when what should happen but that, just before seven o'clock, I met the man again face to face in the corridor of the hotel, and the sight of him fairly took my breath away. I shouldn't have called him a healthy person any time, but now his eyes were sunken away something dreadful to see—while his cheeks were hollow like the cheeks of one just got up from a fever bed. White as his face had been in the morning, the color of it was like a bit of plaster of Paris in the afternoon. And what was more than this the way he walked, feeling his road with his hands, like a blind man, and staring before him as though he was frightened that every step he took might land him on nothing. Never have I seen the muscles of a man's mouth twitch so much, or a man's fingers look so like claws. If he had been stark raving mad, he could not have given me a greater shock—and I stood there before him feeling like a child that has seen something horrible on the stairs and does not know whether to go forward or to go back.

There was a minute when, seeing him clutch hold of the banister and fix his dreadful eyes on me, I thought he was going to strike me. He half raised his right arm, but let it drop quickly again and began to mumble something that I could not hear. His speech was thick like that of a drunken man, and yet I could have sworn that drink was not the matter with him. Quite otherwise, he appeared to be in great pain, and when he got his words out at last, they came with gasps like the words of a man suffering.

"Where's your shoddy baronet?" he asked.

"What's that?" said I.

"Your Nicolas Steele, card-sharper and thief?" he went on, and this took me more aback than if he'd hit me.

"Look here," said I, "you're a bold man, but if you don't want to be horse-whipped out of this hotel, don't say that twice."

"Then you mean to say that he isn't?"

"A hundred times. A more honorable gentleman doesn't breathe in Paris, and if it wasn't for the state you were in, young man, I'd let you know it, too."

This silenced him a bit. He stood rocking on his heels for a minute or more, and then muttering something between his teeth which I could not make out, he continued his march up the stairs. A quarter of an hour later, Sir Nicolas himself drove up with the young American, and he hadn't been in the hotel two minutes before I'd told him what had passed and what I'd seen. Strange to say, he took it as calm as a man hearing of the weather.

"The fellow's a lunatic; that's what he is," he cried, while he began to dress for the opera; "she's told me his history coming home. He's a drug drinker, and what he remembers to-day, he'll know nothing of to-morrow or, perhaps, for a month or more. Ye needn't mind him no more than a toy-pistol. I have her word for it, and that's good enough for me."

"Then his cousin wasn't in Dublin three years ago?" asked I.

"Indeed and he was, and that's the humor of it. He left before my affair, d'ye see, and if they write him, it's a pretty tale of me he'll be telling. Bedad! I couldn't have wished it better if me own hands had the planning of it."

"I glad to hear that, sir," said I, "so long as the young lady doesn't listen."

"Listen—not she. It's easy for the ears to be shut when the heart is open. Sure, won't I be marrying her within the month. She's American, you must remember, and tied to nobody's apron-strings. Oh, it was a famous day that kept us at the Hotel de Lille."

He said this quite unconcerned, and not a bit ready to argue the point out with me. It was all very well for him to glide over it in that easy way, but what I wanted to know was where had Michel Grey first heard talk about us? That the gossip was new to him was evident from the fact that he played billiards with my master the very first night he came to Paris. What chatter he had heard was heard between supper that evening and breakfast two days after. And this was what troubled even in the face of Sir Nicholas' tale about him taking drugs and forgetting. "There's danger moving," I thought, "and if you're married within the month, Nicky, I'm a Chinaman."

This is how the thing looked to me, then and for days after. While, on the one hand, Michel Grey talked no more, either to me or to Sir Nicholas, of his suspicions, on the other hand, I could see that he would have no truck with us, and was doing his best to make his sister think as he did. That he did not succeed in this is to be set down to many things, but above all to the fact that for days together he would hang about the hotel like a man without a mind; and was, as all the world could see, tottering fast to his grave. What drug he drank or where he learned the habit, no man could say, but a more pitiable spectacle than he made, looking for all the world like a blind thing come out of a coffin, I hope never to see. Luckily for us, there was no affection lost between him and Miss Dora. Talk as he might, the day was rare when she did not plan some excursion with my master. They spent hours together out at Fontainebleau or Versailles—were half their leisure time at the picture galleries, the other half at the cafes and theaters. I saw them walking arm and arm in the gardens, I saw him kiss her when she went to her painting in the morning, I saw him kiss her when she came home again to dejeuner, and I began to think that after all he was right and I was wrong. Then, all of a sudden, the trouble came, and we woke up from our dream like men roused by artillery fire.

Michel Grey had disappeared. For the first time since we had been at the hotel, he had changed words with my master over the dinner table. It did not come to blows, but the hands of the people around alone kept the two men apart, and Sir Nicolas was heard by twenty folks to say that he'd beat the life out of the American with his hunting crop. That night and the next Michel Grey did not sleep in his bed at the Hotel de Lille. At ten o'clock two mornings later his sister Dora was knocking at my master's door, wanting to know what he had done with him.

I can see her now, with her pretty hair streaming down her back and her face that flushed that she might have been rubbing her cheeks with a glove. Many women would have thought nothing of a man going off like that; but the quarrel stuck in her head, I suppose, and she was as scared as a rabbit. When Sir Nicolas came out to her, she was no longer gentle with him as she had been before this, but stamped her foot and spoke angry, with quick, biting words.

"Well," she cried, "where is he? You know, of course?"

"As God is my witness, I know nothing," said he.

"But you were with him last—you were the last to speak to him."

"Indeed, and I was; and when he'd done with me, he went straight to his bedroom. Dora, it's not lies that I'd tell you at such a time."

"Then where is he, what has happened to him, what shall I tell my father? Oh, they love him at home, indeed they do."

She began to cry at this, and my master took her hand.

"You poor little thing," said he, drawing her head down upon his shoulder. "Would I harm him, whatever he was—and your brother, too? Don't ye see, child, that he's just gone off in a bit of a huff, and will be back before your tears are dry. Ye'll be the first to laugh when he walks in here."

"He is not the man to do that," said she, though she was no longer angry; "I am sure of it. I dreamed of him all night. He is dead, Nicolas."

Now what should Sir Nicolas do when she said this but give her a great kiss and burst out laughing.

"Dead!" said he, "then I'm thinking we should get ready for the waking, and ask him to crack the first bottle. Bedad! he's as dead as I am, little woman, and don't you think any such thing. Whatever put that into your head?"

THEY SPENT HOURS TOGETHER.

"I could not tell you," says she. "We do not think these things, we know them."

At this he set off laughing again, and did his best to cheer her up—though it was poor work he made of it at the best. By and by, when he had seen a nice little breakfast sent up to her rooms, he came to me, and I knew then that he took it worse than I had thought he would.

"Well," says he, "the fool's gone right enough. There's no word or sign yet. I'll begin to think by and by that harm's come to him."

"In that case, sir," said I, "it's a pity that what was said two nights ago couldn't wait."

"How do you mean?" he asked.

"Why—it's no good disguising it—you threatened to murder him."

"Good God! Would they think that?"

"There's some that might."

He stood stock still when I had said this, and his face was very white.

"It's luck to make one gnash the teeth," said he, presently. "I'd have married her within the week."

"There's no reason why you shouldn't now, sir," said I, "always supposing that it's well with him. But there are things to do."

"You think so?"

"Certainly; and if it was me concerned I'd be up at the police station before the clock struck again."

"Do you believe they would find him?"

"They might, or they might not; but it would be cover for you."

"I'll do that," said he, shortly. "Is there anything else?"

"One thing," said I. "This young fellow has a father in America. If three days pass and we hear nothing of him, send a cable out to Boston, and advise that a reward be offered—a big one, say ten thousand dollars. Meanwhile, offer a reward of two thousand francs yourself."

"But I'd have to pay. What's the sense in that?"

"Sir, said I, "if Mr. Grey, of Boston, will offer a reward of ten thousand dollars for the recovery of his son, there is one man who will find him."

"And who is that, pray?"

"Myself."

He looked at me with blank amazement. Then he said, quite simply:

"Ye're a clever man. I'd be sorry for the day when we parted."

"But we must part, sir," said I.

"'Tis no time for nonsense, sure," said he.

"And it's no nonsense I mean, sir. If I'm to find this man and to claim this reward, the work must be done away from here."

"Where would it be done, then?"

"From the house in the Rue Dupin, where we lived two years ago."

He thought over it a little while, and then he said:

"It's the devil of a head ye've got. How did you come to think of it?"

"Common sense taught me," said I. "There's many a worse friend, sir."

* * * * * * * *

A week after this talk I left the Hotel de Lille and took a lodging in a little house in the Rue Dupin. It was the first time in my life that ever I'd set to work to hunt a man, and I knew at the beginning of it that I had a stiff job before me. Notwithstanding the light way we had taken Michel Grey's disappearance, seven days had passed and no living soul had heard a word of him. He had gone like a light in a wind, and had left neither letter nor message. While some were bold enough to say that Nicolas Steele could have told the tale, the many were deceived by the pains my master took to trace the missing man. None the less, it was not hidden from me that the police were watching him, and that any minute he might be face to face with the greatest peril of his life.

My object in moving from the hotel to the Rue Dupin was a simple one. Jonathan Grey, the father of the missing man, had walked into the trap we had set for him like a child into a sweetstuff-shop. His answer to his daughter's cable was immediate. "Offer the reward," he said, and we had offered it. That is to say, we had printed a thousand bills and had burned them.

"Once get those bills about Paris," said I to Sir Nicolas, "and your man's here in a couple of hours. That don't suit us when ten thousand dollars are at stake—not by a long way. If Michel Grey is to be found at all, I'm going to find him, and to bank half the reward in my name. The other half is money by every right."

"I've nothing to say against that," exclaimed he; "it's what I was thinking of myself. But ye don't tell me who's to claim the money, and all the world knowing that you're my servant. Ye don't forget that ye're dealing with Yankees?"

"I forget nothing, sir," said I, "and that's what takes me to the Rue Dupin. The man who will claim the reward is my friend, Jim Pascoe——"

"What! Jim Pascoe, the tout?"

"No other. If there's anything in Paris that's new to him I should be glad to hear of it. He'll do the job for a hundred pounds, and gladly."

"Ye don't fear to trust him?"

"Fear," I replied, "why, I know enough about Jim Pascoe to buy a dozen men."

This was a true word, and half an hour after it was spoken I was seated with Jim in the little attic of a cabin in the Rue Dupin, where I told him the tale. Jim was a man who got his living the best way he could, chiefly at Auteuil and Longchamps, and in being father-in-law to the English chaps who want to "do" Paris. If any one could say what had become of Michel Grey he was the man; and I'd hardly got the words out of my lips when he jumped down my throat with his theory.

"Bigg," says he, "your man's in a drug-den—and what's more, he's in a private drug-den. It's a wonder his people haven't had any note for money before this—that is, if Grey hasn't a banking account of his own in Paris."

"I don't follow you there," says I. "What do you mean by a private drug-den?"

"Why, a place where they dose 'em and bleed 'em at the same time. Such shops are cheap this way. They trap a man with cash, and make it pleasant for him so long as his money lasts, then they knock him on the head, or leave him to sleep it off in the gutter. You couldn't have named a worse job. I doubt that you'll ever set eyes on Grey again, if you live to be a hundred."

This was a facer. I'd thought all along that the American was laid by the heels in some opium-shop, but that we should have any difficulty in getting him out was a fact that never entered my head.

WORSE THAN THE DEATH CHAIR.

A Stone that Slays as by Lightning All Who Unwittingly Approach It.

One of the most recently discovered inexplicable phenomena is an immense electrical stone which crops out above ground in an almost inaccessible mountain pass some fifty or sixty miles north of the Needles, in Arizona.

In pursuing a conscientious investigation into a subject of this kind one finds it necessary to call into requisition such an immense number of grains of salt that the real truth of the matter becomes frequently lost in a briny deep, as it were, but in spite of this the existence of the electrical stone has been proved beyond a doubt.

In a multitude of witnesses there is safety, and it appears that the natives were for years acquainted with the stone and its peculiar properties long before its discovery by a party of hunters a short time ago.

Among the Indians the stone goes by the name of the "Death Trap," and the peak whereon it is located is called "Death Trap Mountain. They say their fathers and grandfathers before them knew of the stone, and it is only an old and experienced guide who will venture to take a party in the neighborhood of it, lest by some unlucky chance a too daring hunter will lose his life by suddenly coming upon it in an unguarded moment.

Now, as to the peculiar death dealing power of the stone. It is said that nothing great or small can set foot upon it and live. So powerful are the volts which it gives out at even the slightest contact that it is impossible for even the largest animal to withstand their strength.

A Rooster Kills a Dog.

A very peculiar fight took place at William Fox's barnyard, at Lawrenceburg, on Friday. Mr. Fox is the owner of a plucky game cock, that had won a number of battles in the pit. The owner placed the steel gaffs upon its legs to illustrate to some of his friends how the cock used them when fighting, and procured another rooster to combat with it; but the selected bird refused to fight and flew over the fence. A dog was in the yard at the time, and the fowl, as if determined to have a fight of some kind, attacked the dog with the greatest fury.

The brute fought back, and a battle not contemplated by the parties began. The dog broke one wing of the cock, but the bird continued the fight in its crippled state and drove one of the steel gaffs through the eye of the dog into its brain, killing it instantly. The bird was so badly injured that it will never again enter the pit.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

WEDDING AT HIGH NOON.

PRETTY NUPTIAL EVENT OF TWO SCOTCH PLAINS YOUNG PEOPLE.

Marriage of Ada Josephine Miller to George L. Dunn—Both Popular With Church Workers, Who Present a Gift.

The home of Mrs. F. A. Miller at Scotch Plains was the scene of a very pretty wedding yesterday at twelve o'clock noon when her daughter, Miss Ada Josephine Miller, was united in marriage to George L. Dunn, also of Scotch Plains. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

Miss Wooster, of Rahway, was bridesmaid, and Nelson Dunn, of New Market, uncle of the groom, was best man. The bride wore a becoming gown of gray silk, with steel trimmings and satin ribbon, while the bridesmaid was gowned in white.

A reception followed the ceremony, when hearty congratulations were extended the bride and groom, who are exceedingly popular among a large circle of acquaintances.

They received many handsome and useful presents, among which was a three-sided mirror from the Young People's Christian Association of the Baptist church, of which society both were members.

A wedding dinner was served by Stephenson, the caterer of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn left Fanwood on the two o'clock train for New York, and will spend two weeks on Long Island and Connecticut visiting. As they left the house their friends showered rice on them.

Among the guests present were Mrs. Joseph Wooster and family, of Rahway; W. H. Davis, Fred Alyea, Miss Alyea, Henry Broadwell and family, of Newark; Miss Kate Heral, Tottenville, S. I.; Wm. Banks and family, of Netherwood; Miss Mary Dunn, New Market; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Parks, Scotch Plains; Mrs. DeMott, Gladstone; Miss Henrietta Parse, Trenton. A pleasant feature was the presence of Miss Eliza Dunn, of Millington, an aunt of the groom. She is eighty-six years old and is especially young in her actions. Mr. and Mrs. Dunn will reside in Scotch Plains on their return.

SIGNS THAT LIE.

An Official Needed to Make Signboards More Truthful.

There is a signboard down on the Springfield road just this side of Locust Grove, which points innocently to a northward lane and says: "New Providence, 3½ miles." Up over the brow of the mountain, a mile or two along the same lane, another more truthful board gives the lie with "New Providence, 3 miles." Beside the latter board is one which has it that Summit is but two miles northeastward, and this also does't know what it is talking about. It should be someone's business to make the signs more truthful.

For Woman's School Suffrage.

The Union County Woman's Suffrage Association are arranging for a series of five lectures to be given in this city on Tuesdays during the month of October. A part will be given in the afternoon and a part at night. The speakers will all be well-known advocates of woman's suffrage. The price for the course of lectures will be $1.

A Desirable Improvement.

One of the best and most desirable improvements which has been made under the management of Rich & Maeder at Music Hall, is the seperation of the gallery box office and entrance from those of the orchestra and dress circle.

Ninth Anniversary.

The ninth anniversary of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., will be celebrated during the week, commencing October 6th.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AN UNPROVOKED ASSAULT.

John Loizeaux Set Upon by a Pair of Young Toughs.

It is not an uncommon sight to see two ragamuffins pounce upon a smaller boy and give him a thrashing in a large city like New York, but it is certainly a very unusual circumstance for Plainfield streets.

Yesterday afternoon as John Loizeaux, a nine-year-old lad living on Putnam avenue, was walking down LaGrande avenue and had almost reached Watchung avenue, when two young toughs crossed over from the other side of the street and struck him in the face and chest. Then the two ran away leaving their victim bleeding at the nose and mouth. Two older boys, seeing young Loizeaux in trouble, came over, but could not find the two toughs. Their reason for attacking him is unknown, as the lad said he did not know them, or did not speak or do anything to them as they passed.

SPECIAL ELECTION FOR A BOROUGH.

Judge McCormick Grants the Application of the Fanwood Petitioners.

Application was made yesterday by the inhabitants of the central part of Fanwood township to Judge McCormick, in the Union county Court of Common Pleas, for the erection of that portion of the township into an independent borough, the same as Roselle. Several important improvements, including sewers, are wanted by the residents of the more thickly built-up part of the township that surrounds the railroad station, and they cannot have these things, because of the opposition of the residents of the other or agricultural part. Judge McCormick ordered a special election for October 1st, when the question will be decided.

Hurt While Coupling Cars.

P. E. Smith, who was formerly employed by Major Paul on East Front street, was badly injured while coupling cars between Camden and Atlantic City a day or two ago. Mr. Smith runs between these two cities as baggage master. He is a brother of Mrs. James Totten, of Manson place, who went to Camden today and will bring the injured man to Plainfield, where he will be cared for until he recovers.

More Hope Chapel Sports.

The Hope chapel Y. M. L., will complete the balance of their programme, which was stopped by rain on Saturday last, September 7th at 2:30 in the afternoon at Maltby's track. The list of events are:

Running hop step and jump; throwing twelve pound hammer; three-mile run; one-mile handicap bicycle race; two-mile handicap bicycle race; five mile handicap bicycle race.

Death of an Elizabethan.

Horatio N. Howard, a brother of County Clerk William Howard, died in Elizabeth yesterday. He was for many years associated with his brother in the grocery business in Rahway, but for the last ten years has been connected with the engineering and surveying department of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He leaves a widow.

Suit for $100,000 Damages.

Attorney George T. Parrott, of Elizabeth, has entered suit for Amos Clark against the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Pennsylvania railroad company and the United N. J. railroad company, for $100,000 damages. Deputy Sheriff Lloyd will serve the papers.

"Boom Plainfield for '96."

"Boom Plainfield for '96."

That is the slogan that the Christian Endeavorers from this city will carry to their State convention soon to be held at Atlantic City. Every effort will be made to bring the convention of 1896 to this city, and there is good prospect of success.

Took a Mud Bath.

One of the sewer contractor's men got in the way of the stream of water from the hose yesterday afternoon and was upset into the ditch. He came out a muddy man.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ANOTHER NIGHT OF RACING.

SEVERAL LIVELY BICYCLE EVENTS AT THE CRESCENT OVAL.

Spectators More Interested in the Amateurs Than Professionals—McCutchen's Finishing Spurts Admired—Summary.

The beautiful weather still continued last evening for the second and last of the night meets at the Crescent oval. The attendance was much better than at the previous night but nowhere near as large as it should have been. The races were all very good, but the amateurs seemed to interest the people more than the professionals. Starbuck rode in the two-mile handicap and won that after an exhibition of very pretty riding. The favorite of the evening, however, was Will McCutchen who won both races he started in, which were the 2:40 class and the 2:50 class. In the former, he made the fastest time made in an open race during the evening. His spurt was grand, for although he was riding against very fast men, he won the both races by over a length.

McCutchen was also entered for the one-mile handicap, but he did not ride. Cuming led in the first part of the race, but the bunch soon caught him, and as he was unable to duplicate his riding of Monday he finished in the sixth or seventh place.

The five-mile handicap for Class A riders started in at a very hot pace.

The limit men bunched together, while Ertz and Leffersen from scratch and Brown from the 120 yard line chased after them. The three rear riders alternated in setting the pace and spurted steadily for nine laps; then, seeing they could not catch the limit men, they fell out. The advance bunch stopped the hot scorch and went along at a steady gait, ending with the usual spurt on the last lap.

The special feature of the evening was an unpaced one-third of a mile by Messrs. Appley and Bird, of Elizabeth, on a tandem. Their time was 38 3-5.

The last race on the programe was the consolation for Class A riders, and this race was the occasion for the first kick of the meet. A time limit was placed on the race, but the riders loafed and finished in about three minutes. Referee Bunnell declared it no race, and the riders refused to ride. The man who finished fourth finally agreed to ride and was given first prize.

ONE MILE, 2:40 CLASS, CLASS A.

Preliminary heats run on Tuesday. Final heat—Won by William M. McCutchen, Plainfield; William Brown, New York, second; A. M. Lefferson, New York, third; B. L. Johnson, Somerville, fourth. Time, 2:30 3-5.

TWO-MILE HANDICAP, PROFESSIONAL.

Won by J. F. Starbuck, scratch; Jay Eaton, 50 yards, second; E. L. Blauvelt, 180 yards, third; C. P. Kuhlke, 200 yards, fourth; J. A. Silvie, 35 yards, fifth. Time, 4:44 4-5.

FIVE-MILE HANDICAP, CLASS A.

Won by Joshua Lindley, Trenton, 280 yards; H. F. Loehrs, Elizabeth, 330 yards, second; A. C. Greene, 220 yards, third. Time, 12:41.

ONE MILE CONSOLATION, PROFESSIONAL.

Won by H. Hawthorne, Newark; C. G. Carpenter, Asbury Park, second; L. J. Wyckoff, Newark, third; B. C. Bettner, Rochester, fourth. Time, 2:37 1-5.

ONE MILE CONSOLATION, CLASS A.

Won by Brandtsen.

Contracts Awarded Tomorrow.

The ground for the new building of Powlison & Jones was cleared off yesterday. The contracts, it is expected, will be awarded tomorrow and ground broken on Monday.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.

WILL LOIZEAUX SAVES THE LIFE OF A YOUNG BOY.

A Family Attempt to Cross Demler's Dam, When the Child Fell In—Loizeaux Offered a Reward But Modestly Refuses.

Presence of mind is a great thing to have in time of accident, and Will Loizeaux showed yesterday that he had plenty of it. A family, consisting of father, mother and little boy, came out from New York yesterday and drove all over this section. In the afternoon they rode up Somerset street to the Notch and stopped near Demler's pond. They started to walk across the dam and had passed half way across when, for some reason, the little lad tumbled into the water. The parents were paralyzed with fear and terror, but just at this moment Will Loizeaux rode by on a wheel. He took in the situation at a glance, jumped off the wheel and pulled off his coat and shoes.

Then he bravely plunged in after the drowning child and soon brought him safe to his terror stricken mother's arm. The now happy father insisted on presenting the rescuer of his son with a reward but young Loizeaux utterly refused to take any. A firm friendship was then established between them and the rescued boy and his parents promised to visit their brave Plainfield friend, after which Will Loizeaux started for home in a rather moist condition.

A LIVELY LITTLE BLAZE.

Prompt Action Saves Westphal's Grocery From a Disastrous Conflagration.

A little blaze started in the cellar of Westphal's grocery at the corner of Liberty and West Fourth street this morning shortly after half past seven. The fire caught in a large pile of paper bags through the carelessness, it is supposed, of a boy who works in the store and who had been down cellar with a candle a few minutes before. Smoke was seen pouring out of the cellar windows and the garden hose was stretched down the cellar stairs. It kept kinking, however, and no water could be obtained. A bucket brigade was formed under the command of Councilman Westphal who had in the mean time bravely jumped in and scattered the blazing bags. An alarm was sent in from box 24 and the fire department responded very promptly. Two extinguishers were used to put out what fire remained.

MUST PAY THE RACE-TRACK MEN.

Linden Township Must Return the $5,000 License Fee—Decided This Morning.

In court at Elizabeth this morning Judge VanSyckle rendered a decision in the case of the Linden Race-Track Association against James W. Hope, as treasurer of Linden township, in favor of the plaintiffs for $5,475. A great deal of interest centred in the decision as the case was an important one. The race-track association paid a license fee of $5,000 to the township for the privilege of conducting horse races. Then shortly after the Legislature passed the bill prohibiting the selling of pools on races in New Jersey, and when it became a law the township officials refused to return the license fee. Suit was brought for the recovery of the money, and at the May term of court a decision was made in favor of the track association. The case was appealed and now Judge VanSyckel reaffirms the first decision.

CASH REGISTERS, BUT NO MONEY.

A Traveling Agent Leaves the City Hotel in the Lurch.

Harry Decker, of Stroudsburg, Pa., came to Plainfield a short time ago as an agent for a cash-register concern. He stopped at the City Hotel while in the city, running up a board bill of about $35. After he had covered the town seeking purchasers, and meeting with poor success, he took French leave.

On a complaint, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant for his arrest to satisfy the board bill, but the man was very clever and made his escape. Since then he has not been seen, and is not likely to be as he will probably give Plainfield a wide berth.

Social Season Opening.

Mrs. L. W. Serrell, Jr., of 120 Crescent avenue, will give a cotillion to her friends at the Revere House, Saturday evening, Sept. 14th. It will be one of the social events of the season.

A Day on the Mountain.

Quite a party went picnicing on the mountain today. They were Mrs. Wm. Rockwell and family, Mrs. Chapman and family, Miss Mabel Smith, Louis Chase and Irwin Cooley.

THE NEXT OPEN-AIR CONCERT.

Where It Is to Be and What Is to Be Played.

The Second Ward residents will enjoy the next open-air concert on Saturday evening, when Councilman Frost will give his third at the corner of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue. The music will be furnished by Guttman's band and will last from 7:30 until 9:30. Many of the residents in the neighborhood are preparing to decorate with Chinese lanterns, and it is hoped that all will. The programme is a varied one, and includes two descriptive pieces, one of which is repeated by request.

The official programme will be as follows:

March—Directoire.....Sousa
Selections from the Milk White Flag.....Stahl
Descriptive piece—
The Darkies Jubilee, or Pastimes on the Levee.....Turner
Waltzes—Emmeline.....Wade
Overture—Enchantment.....Herman
Patrol—American.....Cox
Serenade—The Old Church Organ..Chambers
Overture—Poet and Peasant.....Suppe
Descriptive piece—
A Russian Carriage Song....Thornton
(by request.)
Overture—Le Diadem.....Herman
Schottische, (with vocal chorus)—
Four Little Curly-headed Coons. Wheeler
Final Salute to Burlington.....Sherman

In case of rain the concert will be postponed until the following Monday evening.

ANOTHER CASE OF MYSTERY.

A Plainfielder Who Has Been Missing Since Tuesday.

Plainfild may soon again be startled by a disappearance case that will set the town in a furore that will equal that caused by the wandering of Lucretia Clark.

A well known and prominent citizen has been missing since Tuesday and no trace can be secured of his whereabouts, though a search is being made to locate him. He made a visit to Asbury Park a few days ago and from there went to his place of business in New York on Tuesday. He left ostensibly for Plainfield at closing hours, but did not come home.

It was known that he had quite a sum of money with him, and whether he has been waylaid, robbed and forcibly held or has left for parts unknown of his own volition remains a deep mystery. The Daily Press withholds the man's identity in order that he may be given ample chance to return or make his whereabouts known before the publication of his name, and thus avoid the subsequent damaging gossip which would follow.

LAST OF THE TRIO CAPTURED.

Ede Thompson, One of the Labor Day Scrappers Languishes Behind the Bars.

The speedy capture of Ede Thompson, the colored man, who was implicated in the fight on Somerset street, Monday afternoon, as predicted in The Daily Press of last night, was fulfilled yesterday afternoon.

Sergeant Kiely saw the man on a wagon coming up Somerset street toward Front street. He at once took charge of the culprit and placed him in the rookery. Word was then sent to Chief VanHorn of the borough and he sent Marshal Doud after him.

He was taken back to the borough again and placed under lock and key.

Thompson was given a hearing by Justice Crosley last night at seven o'clock and was fined $10. Not possessing the cash he will remain in the borough lockup that many days.

Hunting Deer.

Harry and Herbert Johnson, of LaGrande avenue, who have been spending their summer at the cottage on the shores of Lake Champlain, went to Whitehall in their naptha launch "Plainfield," and have started into the Adirondacks with a guide after deer.

A Sprained Ankle

A woman by the name of Mrs. Brown, of Dunellen, sprained her ankle in getting off a train at the North avenue station last night. With the assistance of a friend she reached her destination and returned to her home later.

—There will be a business meeting of the Reform Club tonight.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

UGH, MUCH GOOD FELLOWS.

PAUGH-CAUGH-NAUGH-SINQUE TRIBE ENTERTAIN IN ROYAL STYLE.

Visitors from Perth Amboy and New Brunswick Have a Jolly Time With Local Red Men—Happy Remarks Made.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, I. O. R. M., entertained fifteen members from Poambo Tribe, of Perth Amboy, and four members from Ahanda Tribe, of New Brunswick, last evening in royal style. It was Red Men's night and the way it was celebrated gave evidence of true redmanship. John Carney was master of ceremonies, and a better one could not have been chosen.

After the visitors had arrived Chas. Conover, Sachem of the home tribe, in a few well-chosen words, welcomed them to the wigwam. Deputy Great Sachem John Ulrich was then called on and gave a few excellent remarks for the good of the order. He told many things of interest to the members. He was followed by Lawyer H. C. Runyon, who made one of the best addresses of the evening. He impressed upon the minds of all what it meant to be a Red man. Brother Haberman, of Ahanda Tribe, rendered a cornet solo that was indeed creditable.

Among the visitors who made remarks were: Brethren Erkeson, Schauck, John Hansen, Emil Eskelsen, Fred Slater and Gorgen Martginson, of Poambo Tribe, and N. C. Mague, of Msantonomah Tribe. M. F. Elderton, of the home tribe, pleased all with a few remarks.

After a social time had been spent in this way, all were invited to the banquet hall where a sumptuous supper was served. Vocal solos were rendered by A. D. Pope, Harry Drier, and Brother Haberman, of Ahanda Tribe. Refreshments were served and it was early this morning when the visitors left for home, thoroughly pleased with the entertainment given.

A Creditable Performance.

The production of "A Midnight Frolic" at Music Hall last night by Lillian Kennedy was, on the whole, a creditable one. The play is a new one, and tells a story of southern life in a vein of humor and pathos mixed together so as to have a pleasant effect with the audience. The specialities introduced are up-to-date and presented in a catchy manner by Miss Kennedy and James Kennedy.

"The Fair Rebel" will be produced by the company this evening.

An Autumn Dance.

The cool evening's of autumn are just the thing for dancing and the Young Men's Social Club of the Revere House believe it. They are now making great preparations for a grand autumn ball to be held in Central Hall on Monday evening, September 16th. The committee in charge consists of Howard Grobs, R. B. Norwood, E. W. Cary, S. A. Abrams, H. A. Gause, J. Bailey, G. H. H. Henderson and W. J. Davis. Music will be furnished by Guttman's orchestra.

Stratford Not Yet Opened.

The negotiations which have been going on between Miss Elizabeth Bartholomew, of Jeansville, Pa., and James E. Martine, looking to the opening of the Stratford have not yet been consummated. If Miss Bartholomew opens the school she will be assisted by Miss Audobond of Boston.

Will Soon Be Out.

Augustus M. Frazee, who has been at the hospital for the past six weeks and who was obliged to have the lower part of his right leg amputated, is improving steadily. He will leave the hospital on Saturday and his friends will be glad to see him out again.

For Possession of a Horse.

The case of Carter against Stevens was adjourned at Bound Brook this morning for two weeks. George Anderson, of Somerville, represented the plaintiff, and S. S. Swackhamer the defendant.

—Sewer work has progressed far enough on Front street to allow the street cars to once more run on time.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WARNING TO TURKEY

Broad Hint of Dismemberment from Salisbury.

Outcome of an Interview Between the British Prime Minister and the Turkish Ambassador on the Question of Armenian Reforms—Uneasiness at Constantinople.

Constantinople, Sept. 5.—It is officially announced that Rustem Pasha, Turkish ambassador to England, has telegraphed to the foreign minister that he has had an interview, relative to the Armenian question, with Lord Salisbury, whom he had assured that the sublime porte is not opposed to the reforms proposed by the powers signatory to the treaty of Berlin, but that Turkey could not permit control of Armenia by an international commission. Lord Salisbury replied that under the circumstances it would be useless to coutinne the interview. "If," he said, "the porte persists in his refusal, the powers will undertake the suggested reforms and rest satisfied. If, moreover, the porte continues to resist," he added, "it will be a signal for the dismemberment of Turkey." The dispatch has caused the greatest uneasiness here.

OUT $99.25 EXPRESS CHARGES.

Package Marked $1,000, Containing $200,000, Received at Treasury.

Washington, Sept. 5.—A package, it is stated, has reached the register of the treasury through the United States Express company the endorsement upon the envelope containing it being marked "bonds, value $1,000," on which express charges were 75 cents. Other marks showed that the package came from the state treasurer of Minnesota and it is asserted that the contents were $200,000, instead of $1,000, a fact that if known to the express company would have vastly augmented the expense of expressing the package. The circumstance has been made known to the express company by the register of the treasury and it is presumed the company will call upon the state of Minnesota to supply the difference between 75 cents, the cost of conveying $1,000 from St. Paul to Washington and $100, the expense that would meet the transfer of $200,000 between the two cities.

SOUTH JERSEY FOREST FIRE.

The Flames Still Raging and Cranberry Bogs Are Now Threatened.

Millville, N. J., Sept. 5.—The forest fires which have been burning in Cape May county for several days past got as far as Belle Plain near this city last night and are raging with dire results. Station Agent Miller of the West Jersey railroad dispatched a special train with 100 men to the scene of the fire last night, but they could do nothing. The fire has branched off from the line of the railroad and threatens to burn up thousands of dollars worth of cranberry bogs, besides destroying miles of timber.

MAY BOMBARD TANGIER.

Spain Decides on a Naval Demonstration To Enforce Terms.

London, Sept. 5.—Advices from Madrid state that in consequence of failure of diplomatic measures, the government has decided upon a naval demonstration at Tangier to enforce the terms of the treaty signed with the government of Morocco. Four warships are now at Cadiz.

SAY IS A FRAUD.

Rode as a Novice Under the Name of Callendar at Middletown, Conn.

Middletown, Conn., Sept. 6.—"Callender," who rode in the Labor Day races at Crystal Lake park, claiming to hail from Hartford, and claiming to be a novice and winning first prize, is Say of Manchester, a class A rider. He has been reported to the L. A. W. racing board.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Gov. Levi P. Morton is here to take part in the floral parade and battle of flowers to-day.

HOLMES WILL BE INDICTED.

Philadelphia Officials Hold Another Consultation over the Case.

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—Another conference on the Holmes case was held between District Attorney Graham, Assistant District Atrorney Barlow, Detective Geyer and Coroner's Physician Mattern yesterday afternoon. Dr. Mattern made a report on the condition of the right leg which he amputated from Pietzel's body. It is stated that there will be no difficulty in identifying the leg by a deep scar in the flesh just below the knee joint. Coroner's Physician Sidebotham, who has taken charge of Pietzel's skull and the amputated leg, made a similar report to the district attorney. The indictment against Holmes has not yet been drawn up, but the district attorney's staff is working on the details of the case and it is almost certain that the grand jury will be called upon to consider evidence against the author of the many crimes before its adjournment at the end of the month. At any rate, it is stated that there is no doubt that Holmes will be held for trial in this city for Pietzel's murder.

ONLY A STRAY LUNATIC.

Winsted's Wild Man Scare at Last Made Clear.

Winsted, Conn., Sept. 5.—The ferocious-wild man with the gray locks and other weird paraphernalia, who has been making war upon staid hens and almost frightening old maids to death in this locality for the past two weeks, has apparently reached the end of his rope. His capture is momentarily expected. Shortly after noon yesterday a telegraphic message was received here from Colebrook which said that the wild man had been located at the back of Bett Culver's farm house. Chief of Police Wheeler promptly started with a posse. The statement that the wild man is Artist Beckwith is an absurdity. He has been recognized as a man named Butler, who escaped from the Middletown insane asylum some time ago.

CHOLERA IS RAGING.

Thousands of Deaths Reported in China and Japan.

Pekin, Sept. 5.—Cholera increases here and the deaths exceed 1,500 daily. It is also increasing in Japan. The total number of cases reported throughout Japan on Aug. 19 was 881; deaths, 429. The aggregate number of cases from the 1st inst. is 25,000, of which 1,220 occurred on transports, and the deaths are 16,278. A telegram from Mr. Cinda, Japanese consul at Shanghai, reports 263 deaths among Chinese and seven among foreigners in British and American concessions between the 1st and 12th of August.

MRS. FLEMING SILENT.

She Does Not Sleep But Appears Cheerful and Confident.

New York, Sept. 5.—Mrs. Fleming, who is locked up in the tombs accused of causing the death of her mother, Mrs. Bliss, by administering poison to her, is as silent as ever, but although she does not sleep, is cheerful and seems confident of acquittal. She will be called before the coroner again to-morrow and it is said the police have an unbroken chain of evidence against her, except as to one point and that is as to where she procured the poison.

DIVORCE SUIT OFF.

Gill Withdraws the Charges He Made Against His Wife.

Westfield, Mass., Sept. 5.—W. F. Gill of New York, who recently instituted divorce proceedings against his wife, Mrs. E. O. Gill, a sister of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and who is at the Gill summer home at Granville, has given Lawyer Kneil of this town a signed statement withdrawing the charges of gross intoxication from indulgence in chloral made by him against his wife, and also withdraws the suit.

MAY BE TRIED AGAIN

New Developments in the Young Murder Mystery.

Westchester Officials Receive a Letter, the Writter of Which Claims To Be Able To Produce the Murderer—Mrs. Young Was Accused and Acquitted.

Westchester, Pa., Sept. 5.—Chief of Police Jefferis of this place has received a letter which has revived one of the most interesting murder cases which has ever come under the notice of the Chester county authorities. He declines to give the author of the letter but says the writer professes to give important information relative to the death of J. Norris Young, who was killed by poison four years ago. The case is still fresh in the minds of the people. Mr. Young was an upright and industrious young miller who had a grist mill near the village of Marshallton, about four miles from Westchester. His wife was Blanche Woodward Young, a remarkably pretty girl of 19. Norris died suddenly one evening, and was burled two days later. Then his brothers came here to see District Attorney Bingham, and said they suspected foul play.

Poison Discovered.

The district attorney had the body disinterred, and the late Dr. Formed of Philadelphia was secured to make an examination of the stomach. His first examination led him to declare that Young had died of arsenical poisoning. Dr. Formed took the stomach to his laboratory in Philadelphia to complete the examination, and the young wife was arrested charged with murder. Her lawyer applied for a writ of habeas corpus, and Judge Waddell gave the case a hearing. Blanche, with her infant, was in the prisoner's dock. Dr. Formed testified that Young had been poisoned. The links in the chain had not been worked together, however, and Blanche was discharged. She left Westchester at once and is now a saleswoman in a large store in Baltimore.

Will Again Probe the Case.

It is learned that the letter received by Chief Jefferis alleges that the writer can furnish information that will lead to the conviction of the murderer. Whether Blanche is to be again arrested is unknown. If the case is again revived some interesting and sensational testimony may be heard. The police will look up the writer of the letter and again probe the case.

WYOMING EVADES THE ISSUE.

Allows the Illegally Imprisoned Bannocks To Escape.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The department of justice has notified the Indian bureau that there are no Bannock Indians in confinement at Marysvale, Wyo., those imprisoned by the state authorities for violation of game laws having been allowed to escape. The district attorney for Wyoming, therefore, is unable to ask writs of habeas corpus on their behalf, and this means of bringing the Bannock treaty before the United States courts for adjudication cannot be pursued.

BELOW THE DEAD LINE

The Syndicate Again Boosts the Gold Reserve.

Now Only a Little More Than One Hundred Thousand Dollars Above the One Hundred Million Mark—Down to $97,615,172 Yesterday—Money Now in Circulation.

Washington, Sept. 5.—At the close of business yesterday the treasury gold reserve stood at $100,115,172. These figures were reached just before the end of the day's business by the syndicate depositing $2,500,000. Prior to 3 o'clock Assistant Treasurer Jordan reported $1,700,000 in gold withdrawn at New York for export to Europe. When the report was received the gold reserve had fallen below the $100,000,000 mark, standing at $97,615,172. On the treasurer's books it stood above the reserve limit, but the withdrawals on Monday had not been taken up. Tuesday the gold reserve was all day below the limit to the amount of $1,100,000. This fact was not known at the treasury until yesterday as it was generally understood, though not officially reported, that the $2,000,000 in gold deposited by the Farmers' Loan & Trust company on Tuesday had been on the syndicate account.

MONEY IN CIRCULATION.

A Decrease of $43,000,000 Over This Date Last Year.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The treasury circulation statement just issued shows a net decrease of money of all kinds in circulation in the United States on Sept. 1 of $10,950,758, making the total circulation $1,603,583,028, or $22.87 ber capita based on 70,127,000 people. As compared with Sept. 1, 1894, there is a decrease in circulation of $43,000,000.

ALLEN IS CAUGHT AT LAST.

One of the Men Who Escaped from Jail Recaptured.

Springfield, Mo:, Sept. 5.—Charles Allen, one of the Springfield, Ill., postoffice robbers who broke out of a New York jail July 4, was caught here yesterday. He was arrested on a telegram from Ozark, twenty miles south, where he had swindled the postmaster and several bankers out of small sums. Claude Webb, a confidence man, recently chased out of St. Louis was with him. On Allen's person were found letters from his wife at Oakland, Cal., which show that he has gone under the alias of P. M. Hogan, D. M. Miller and Charles Robinson. A photograph sent out by Inspector Wheeler at Washington established his identity.

SEVERE STORM IN TENNESSEE.

Houses Blown Down and Unroofed at the Town of McKenzie.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 5.—A severe storm with heavy rain visited the town of McKenzie, Tenn., yesterday, which did considerable damage. The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad depot was demolished except that part used as the telegraph office. Many houses were unroofed and the losses will run up into the thousands. No fatalities are reported. The front of Frye's jewelry store was torn out and blown across the street to the public square.

ITS 175TH ANNIVERSARY.

Upper Octoraro Presbyterian Celebration at Parkersburg.

Parkersburg, Pa., Sept. 5.—The celebration of the 175th anniversary of the Upper Octoraro Presbyterian church took place yesterday. The church itself is a comparatively modern one, but in the cemetery are buried soldiers who fought in all four wars in which this country has been engaged—the revolution 1812, 1846 and the rebellion. The are eighty-seven soldiers altogether buried in the little enclosure.

THE CONFLICT IN FORMOSA.

Native Insurgents Said To Be Succeeding Against the Japanese.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 5.—The Novoye Vremya's correspondent at Vladivostock writes that the Formosan insurgents are conducting a successful warfare against the Japanese, in which women share equally with the men a spirit of determined resistance. Though the army is decimated by sickness, the Japanese will grant no quarter, and will spare neither women nor chiluren.

New Mail Devices.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The postoffice department has received proposals for new devices in mail catchers, new devices for opening and fastening mail pouches, etc. A committee of experts will be appointed to give all these devices a practical test and, if found to be no better than those now in use, the bids subinitted will be considered.

Spain's Imports and Exports.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Consul-General Bowen, at Barcelona, in a report just received by the department of state, says that it now looks as if the exports of Spain to the United States would steadily decrease while her imports from the United States would increase.

Depot and Postoffice Burned.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Fire completely destroyed the Harlem railstation at Hartsdale yesterday afternoon. The postoffice was located in the station and all the stamps, letters and other property of the United State government were lost.

Congressman Fischer Married.

Baltimore, Sept. 5.—Miss Clara Groedel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Groedel, was married last night to congressman Israel F. Fischer of Brooklyn, N. Y. Rabbi Clinton Levy performed the ceremony in Eden street synagogue.

Falvey and Pearce Not Matched.

Boston, Sept. 5.—The report that Jack Falvey of Providence and Leslie Pearce of Philadelphia are matched to fight is denied by George V. Tuchey, manager of Pearce.

Dancing Masters' Convention.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The entire business befor the American society of professors of dancing now is the discussion for adoption of several dances.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Spanish Soldiers Outnumbered and Defeated in a Fight at Remedios.

Havana, Sept. 5.—According to official advices a detachment of the Bourbon regiment and a band of twelve loyalist guerrillas from Camajuani were surprised while engaged in foraging on the San Rafael plantation at Remedios, by 300 insurgents under command of Carrillo Fernando and Cantero. Although greatly outnumbered the soldiers and guerrillas made a good stand. The Spanish sergeant in command was killed with seven of his soldiers and two of the guerrillas. The insurgent loss is stated to have been three men killed and eight wounded. One battalion of the Reus regiment was sent to Ciego Avila, a squadron of the Arabian regiment to San Felipe, a battalion of artillery to Santiago de Cuba and the Vegas field artillery to San Antonio.

Nine Rebels Killed.

While Lieutenant Alquezar with fifty-four troops was watching the coast on Monday last he was attacked on the Guyana farm, in the Trinidad district, by rebel bands led by Rego and Lino Perez. The government forces retreated fighting for a league to Vista Alegre where they were reinforced by eighty trpops. The rebels were then attacked and nine of them were killed. The troops captured a quantity of ammunition and arms. The government loss was four wounded.

HIGH TREASON CHARGED.

The Vorwaerts' Editor Arrested for Criticising the Kaiser's Speech.

Rerlin, Sept. 5.—The editor of the socialist organ Vorwaerts has been arrested and all of the copies of last Sunday's edition of the paper have been seized in consequence of the publication of an editorial on the Sedan Day celebrations. The charge against the editor is high treason. Yesterday's edition of the paper criticises the emperor's fetes and speeches, and declares that an explanation of the passage in the kaiser's speech at the state dinner in the white hall of the castle on Monday evening calling upon the guards to "put down that treasonable band" (meaning the socialists) has become imperative. The paper adds that adequate criticism of such threats as were indulged in by the emperor as impossible on account of the public prosecutions already begun.

ENGLISH ATHLETES ARRIVE.

The Two Teams To Contest for Honors Now in New York.

New York, Sept. 5.—On the steamer Aurania of the Cunard line from Liverpool which arrive last evening were two athletic teams who have come to contest for international honors with the teams of Yale college and the New York Athletic club. They are from the London Athletic club and Cambridge university. In the former team are Bradley, Downer, Fitzherbert, Horan, Jordan, Johnson, Lewin, Lutyens, Mendelsen, Oakley, Robinson, Shaw and Watson. The Cambridge team consists of Davenport, Fitzherbert, Fletcher, Horan, Lewin, Lutyens, Mendelsen, Pilking and Watson. All are in the best of health.

LOSS OF AN IRISH SHIP FEARED

The Lord Downshire Missing—Possibly Sunk by the Prince Oscar.

London, Sept. 5.—The Evening Standard says that anxiety is felt at Belfast for the safety of the ship Lord Downshire, which left Iquique last May, since which time nothing has been heard from her. There were thirty-two persons on board. It is feared that this may have been the ship which was sunk in the collision with the British ship Prince Oscar on the night of July 13 about 500 miles southeast of cape St. Roque. All of the crew of the ship with which the Prince Oscar was in collision are supposed to have been drowned.

COLORADO BULL FIGHTS.

The Mexican Participants Fined by a Judge at Colorado Springs.

Colorado Springs, Col., Sept. 5.—Judge Harris yesterday afternoon fined the Mexicans who participated in the bull fight at Gillette. Senor Barela, Mexican consul, appeared for the Mexicans. Marrerro, the mateador, was arraigned on four counts, and Carlos Garcia and Antonio Sentrea, the picadors, had seven counts against them. They pleaded guilty and were fined $15 on each count. They will pay their fines. The cases of the American managers of the affair have not been tried.

CARLISLE A CANDIDATE.

His Wife Says His Name Will Be Presented in '96.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 5.—A special from Clarksville says that Mrs. Carlisle has written to a friend in Christian county, Ky., that Secretary Carlisle is a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination and will have his name placed before the party as the present administration's favorite.

PLANING OFF HER HULL

Mysterious Work on the Cup Chaser Valkyrie.

Quite a Slice of the Under Body on Each Side Taken Off—Probably Done To Lessen the Time Allowance Which She Will Give to the Gallant Defender.

New York, Sept. 5.—The America's Cup committee has announced the official programme for the races between Valkyrie III. and Defender. The races will all be started at 11 a. m. from Sandy Hook lightship on alternate days, beginning Sept. 7, wind and weather permitting. The first, third and fifth races will be sailed to windward or leeward and return, and the second and fourth over an equilateral triangle. All races will be thirty miles, with a time limit of six hours, and the best three races in five will decide. The sailing directions will be: The start will be made off Sandy Hook lightship, the preparatory signal being given at 10:50 a. m., and the starting signal at 11 a. m.

The dates for the races are September 7, 9, 11, 13 and 14, but these may be changed by mutual consent, and the first three days may be all that are necessary. Should there be no wind at 11 a. m., the start will be made at 1:30 p. m. Should it still be calm the committee has the option of postponing the race or starting it not later than 3 o'clock. The rules practically the same as in 1893, except that the boats are allowed two minutes in which to cross the line instead of being a one gun start. The racing rules, time allowances, and system of measurement of the New York Yacht club will govern.

Valkyrie in Drydock.

The Valkyrie is still in drydock and will not be floated until to-morrow. A large gang of workmen are putting her hull in shape for the races. The most significant thing about the work on her was the cutting away of the under body aft for the puspose of shortening the water line. Her top sides were scraped and sandpapered until all of the black enamel coating was removed and the grain of the wood exposed. This was coated with shellac before white paint was applied to her sides. The planing under the long over-hanging stern was carried deeper than was necessary for the removal of the black enamel. The edge which extended from the rudder post aft was planed away at the water line and quite a slice of the under body on each side was taken off.

Not Done Without a Purpose.

Whether this is done to lessen the time allowance which the boat will give to Defender or because she was in danger of exceeding ninety feet load water line will not be known till John Hyslop runs his steel tape over her on Friday. The cutting away aft will not improve the lines of the yacht. On the other hand it will probably increase her tendency to drag water, but it is safe to say that it was not done without a purpose.

Estimate of Time Allowance.

Valkyrie will not be floated till Friday morning. The Defender is expected to-morrow forenoon, when both yachts will be officially measured. Capt. Sycamore of the Valkyrie said to-day that the estimate of one minute allowance to Defender by the British boat is about correct in his judgment. In all probability the allowance will be fully two minutes, as Valkyrie has greater water line and more sail area. With the close contest that is expected between the two boats this time allowance may determine the race.

Little Valkyrie Money.

Both sides appear confident of winning, but the Valkyrie people are putting up no money to speak of, while the members of the Defender syndicate are hunting for bets. One of them sent a representative around the hotels and clubs last night offering to place $1,500 on Defender at 2 to 1. The only response met with was an offer of $500 that Valkyrie III. wins one of the races.

Excursion Arrangements.

Public interest in the races grows as the time for the first event draws near. The fleet of excursion craft promises to be the largest that has ever followed an international race. There is a great demand for tickets on the larger and more seaworthy steamers. The prices of tickets run from $3 to $5, the top prices insuring safety from overcrowding as well as a seaworthy boat. The spectators will number well up in the thousands and the marine pageant, alone, will be a grand spectacle.

PATCHEN DEFEATS GENTRY.

Much Dissatisfaction Over the Way the Horses Were Handled

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—Joe Patchen defeated John R. Gentry at the Belmont Driving park yesterday afternoon in a match race for a purse of $4,000. Seven heats were paced, of which the third and fifth were declared no heats. There was much dissatisfaction with the manner in which the horses were handled.

Alien Labor Decision.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Solicitor Reeve of the treasury has decided that the transfer of an employe of a firm doing business abroad to the American branch of the concern is a violation of the alien contract labor law.

Prison Warden Appointed.

Washington, Sept. 5.—Attorney General Harmon has appointed J. M. Allen deputy warden of the Fort Leavenworth (Kansas) prison, which was placed under the control of the department of justice by the last congress.

Plainfield wants the State convention of the Christian Endeavor in 1896, and what is more Plainfield can take care of it.

It is good for people to dwell in harmony, so they say. Then let the trolley people harmonize with the city officials and extend the street railway.

If the devil ever stays away from church, it is when he knows the preaching will be done by a man who only knows God by hearsay.—Ram's Horn.

New Jersey must look to her laurels for the champion big hail stones. Missouri reports that stones weighing half a pound have fallen in that section. But they say that that the fura lie travels the bigger it gets, and this, of course, accounts for the eight ounce stones.

"Good roads appear to be one of the investments that pay from the start. The first county in New Jersey to thoroughly improve its roads is Union, and the increased valuation of its property in a single year is $1,359,609. At Summit, N. J., the increased valuation is $419,000, or over 25 per cent. The Telford roads going down in New Jersey are pronounced excellent by all who drive and also by bicyclers."—St. Louis Globe-Demecrat.

"There are two classes of men in the American Protective Association movement," says the Boston Herald. "The first are those who act from sectarian religious feelings, and desire to overthrow the Roman Catholic religion in this country. They are ages behind the times in their intolerance, and their effort is as futile as it would be to attempt to rend a rock by pelting it with feathers. The second are more strictly political in their motive, and they feel that foreigners have taken to themselves too many of the offices in this country."

The Sentry, Elizabeth's new paper whose editorials are written with terseness, has this to say about the candidacy of Speaker Cross for County Judge:

We are not of those who question the "special aptitude or fitness" of Judge Cross. We will concede, for the sake of argument, that he is qualified to fill the office. The point we make now, the point we have made all along, is that the Elective Judiciary Law is unjust inasmuch as for reasons that are strictly political it seeks to deprive judges of their offices during the term of office for which they were appointed and because it would change the method of selecting judges from the appointive, which has worked admirably to the elective, which would make seats on the bench, prizes to be contended for by men whose principal claim to consideration, is not their knowledge of the law nor their impartiality, but their service to the party.

TENNIS AT SOUTH ORANGE.

Plainfield Cracks Win Several Matches And Tie One.

The Plainfield tennis cracks who were so unlucky in the tournament of the South Orange Field Club, tried their luck in the doubles. On Tuesday, C. F. Walz and H. V. Ryder defeated Lee and partner, of South Orange, 6-3, 6-3. Yesterday they played the Miles Brothers, winning the first set 6-2, losing the next 4-6, while the third was declared drawn on account of darkness. The match will be continued today. In the consolation singles yesterday, T. U. Smith defeated J. V. Stratton, 6-0, 1-6, 6-1.

The Plainfield boys went over on their wheels and when they reached Scotch Plains, Smith punctured a tire. He borrowed Walz's wheel and led his own home, got another and returned to Scotch Plains. They returned on the train as they had no lanterns. They returned today to complete the contest.

Bound Brook to Have Good Roads.

The citizens of Bound Brook have taken hold with great vigor of the subject of macadamizing the streets of their town, and a number of the streets have already been put in excellent order by the Commissioners. They have recently taken proceedings to compel the Freeholders to macadamize under the State law the road from North Plainfield through the entire township to Somerville.

Under the State law only one-tenth of this expense is to be put upon the adjoining property owners. The county will be called upon for a small portion of the expenses, the State paying the larger amount. Mandamus proceedings have been begun against the Board of Freeholders to take action on this matter.

A Proposed Fair.

The members of Warren Engine Co. No. 1 are discussing the advisability of holding a fair at an early date. If they decide to have one it will be one of the features of the season and will be run on an elaborate scale.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

CATHOLIC DIOCESAN UNION.

President J. F. Murphy of Jersey City Elected to Another Term.

The annual meeting of the Catholic Youngs Men's Diocesion Union was held on Sunday in Jersey City. President Murphy opened the meeting and fourteen societies of Jersey City, Newark, Belleville, Elizabeth, Orange, Orange Valley, Harrison, Plainfield, Rahway, West Hoboken, and Chaltham responded to the roll call. The Field Day Committee reported the Field Day held on August 10th a large success and the prospects for next year's events brighter than ever.

The annual reports of the officers show the Union to have twenty associations on their roll, with a total membership of about 3,500. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $135. The Union donated $10 to be forwarded to the Army and Navy Committee of National Union to further their work of furnishing the soldiers and salors of the United States with periodicals and other literary publications. A communication was read from the National President relating to the arrangements being made for the convention to be held in St. Louis on September 24th, 25th, and 26th, and urged the Diocesan Union to be sure to send representatives.

SOME BASEBALL GOSSIP.

Where Some of the Old Crescents Are and What They Are Doing.

Deitrich, formerly of the Ironsides of Newark, is now playing centrefield for the Torontos of the Eastern League.

Eddie Daley, formerly of the Crescents, is holding down third bag for the Pawtucket, R. I. Club in the New England League.

The Sporting Life says: "Turner uses poor judgement in returning balls hit into his territory. He hasn't the knack of quickly sizing up a situation.

Leo Smith is playing shortstop for the Atlanta's, who are in second place in the Southern League. He is fielding good but not hitting the ball hard, which was his great fault while he played with the Crescents.

The many friends of Joe Bonner, formerly of the Crescents, will be glad to know he is playing good ball for the Wilkesbarres of the Eastern League, both at the bat and at second base. He recently made four two-baggers in a game against Springfield.

The National League batting average up to date shows Turner is fourth with an average of 383 and Keeler ninth with an average of 369, which makes each second highest batter in their respective clubs. Burkett, of the Clevelands, leads the League with a percentage of 414.

As Champion Jim Corbett was billed to play firstbase for the Ironsides of Newark Sunday, against the Hoboken A. C., a number of Plainfielders went to see the game. As Corbett made so many errors in the first inning he retired from the game much to the satisfaction of the 7,000 spectators.

The tax rate in Summit this year will be $2.86 on $100, against $3.34 last year. This decrease in the rate is owing to an increase in the valuation of $416,000, as assessed by John A. Hicks. This makes the total assessed valuation of the township $1,866,000.

AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

Marriage of Miss Dena Anderson to Percevial Davis, Both of This City.

The marriage of Miss Dena Anderson, of 346 Manson place, to Percevial Davis, of Elmwood place, took place yesterday afternoon at 5:30 at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. C. R. Barnes, pastor of the First M. E. church, performed the ceremony in the presence of only the parents and near relatives.

The bridemaid was Miss Jennie Anderson, sister of the bride, and the best man Thomas Randall. The bride was becoming in a gown of light gray cloth trimmed with white lace, and the bridemaid wore a gown of brown cloth. After the ceremony an informal reception was held and refreshments served.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis were the recipients of a large number of useful presents. They will reside for the present at the home of the bride.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Deckertown Man Says He Did Not Turn the Girl Out of Home.

The Daily Press some time ago published an item concerning an unfortunate colored girl who applied to Rev. P. W. Gibson for help. The girl claimed to have been sent to this city by L. J. Loomis, of Deckertown, N. J., with only enough money to get here. The Deckertown Recorder publishes the following communication from Mr. Loomis:

I noticed the little item in last week's Recorder in regard to a colored girl being stranded at Plainfield, without money or home, helpless, and having worked for me a few weeks, having been recommended to us by Mrs. John Roy, and by the agent for colored people of this town, W. S. Vandruff. She was in my family for four weeks, the last week entirely unable to do anything, my wife and daughter doing the work and caring for the colored girl. We also told her she was perfectly welcome to stay with us until she could collect sufficient money with which to go to her home in the south. But she declined doing that. We then went to the agent, W. S. Vandruff, and asked him what we should do. He told us there was a colony of colored people living in Plainfield, and advised sending her there. How much money she had when she reached the latter place I, of course, do not know. But I do know this: every dollar due her from me was paid and paid in the presence of my daughter. My wife provided a lunch for her on her trip and my horse and wagon took her and her baggage to the train. There all my responsibilities ended. The agent directed her to the agency at Plainfield. I am not their agent, and therefore not responsible for their coming and going or any happenings to them. I treat my servants humanely and kindly, pay them what is due them, and there all my obligations end, whether or not they become stranded in strange cities or towns.

Washingtonville.

Miss Edith Wilson, of New Market, is visiting her cousin, Miss Jennie Simpson.

Miss Kittie Watson, of New York, is visiting her friend, Miss H. J. Smith.

Burt Simpson, of North Plainfield, is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. John Wilson.

Mrs. Andrew Wilson is the guest of friends in the valley.

Miss Fannie McGrady, of Brooklyn, is visiting her friend, Miss Jessie Coddington of Somerset street.

One Was Absorbed in Her Paper.

She was a business like woman. There was nothing frivolous in her face, if I am any reader of countenances. She looked as if she could drive a bargain with the skill of an expert. She boarded a Main street car, walked calmly to the front corner, sat down and began to read a newspaper.

After several other persons had got on, the conductor came forward to collect the fares. The woman did not look up from her paper. The conductor rang up a number of fares and then began to look puzzled. Evidently his receipts did not correspond with the mental note he had made of the number he should collect.

"Did I get your fare?" he asked of a man sitting on the opposite side of the car. The reply was affirmative.

"And yours?" turning to his neighbor. Still an affirmative reply. The woman continued absorbed in her paper. The conductor looked hard at her several times, but evidently her sex saved her from an accusation of trying to beat the company.

The conductor shook his head sadly and returned to the rear platform. Then the woman stopped reading and, with just the ghost of a smile on her face began looking out of the window.—Buffalo Express.

The Philadelphia Standard of Velocity.

The visitor from the West was wandering around the streets of Philadelphia late at night, and finally ran up against a police officer.

"'Skuse me, mister," he said, "but where's the gate to the cem'tery?"

"What do you mean?" inquired the officer.

"Ain't thish cem'tery?" protested the visitor.

"No, it's Chestnut street."

"'Skuse me, I didn't know."

"Well, you don't seem to know anything very clearly," growled the officer, "and if you don't go where you belong I'll run you in."

"Guessh not," responded the visitor.

"Won't I?" and the officer caught him by the arm.

"Coursh you won't; you can't. Besh you can do in this town ish to walk me in," and the visitor tumbled helplessly into the officer's arms, with a leery laugh.

Heel and Toe for 1,500 Miles.

Robert F. Clever, a Pittsburg lawyer, proposes to take a walking tour of 1,500 miles this summer, starting on the first of next month. The route selected will be by way of Brownsville road to the National pike, to Harper's Ferry and through the Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys. Mr. Clever takes a trip of this kind every year. He has walked through nearly every State in the East and through all the southern counties of Pennsylvania.

—Since the repairs and refurnishing have not been completed, services in the Congregational church will not be resedum until September 8th.

UP-TO-DATE.

A Kindergarten Where French is Practically Taught.

In the kindergarten school of the Misses Scribner, Newton and Hellwig, Plainfield parents have an opportunity of having their children learn French in the most practical manner.

Abroad it is realized that languages must be studied in early childhood, when a correct pronunciation and fluency in speaking are so easily acquired, but studied practically without books, by conversation and object teaching.

Miss Hellwig's wonderful capacity of adopting her instruction to the age and individual requirements of her pupils is widely known. She possesses the happy gift of not only making her lessons all that could be desired for adults, but likewise of teaching young children in such a fascinating way that they are not aware of actually being instructed.

The English department of the kindergarten will be in charge of Miss Fuller, who will conduct it according to the latest methods.

Matinee Parties.

Since it has been announced that the Bubb Comedy Company would give dime matinees daily, commencing with Tuesday, considerable talk is being heard about several society people getting up matinee parties for the various afternoons during the week. Every effort will be exerted to make Stillman Music Hall as cool as possible for these performances and from appearances the engagement of the company may become decidedly popular. The organization carries a band and orchestra, one of the best traveling, and among its members will be found the famous Elmore children, formerly of Waite's company who have endeared themselves so warmly into the hearts of the younger generation of this city. The evening prices will be ten, twenty, and thirty cents. Monday evening The Black Flag.

Dunellen.

Miss Blair, of Jersey City, was in town Monday on business.

Miss Kate Carl, of Jackson avenue, is visiting relatives at East Orange.

Miss Mabel White, of Pluckamin, is visiting relatives on Dunellen avenue.

Mr. Mattis, of New Market, has moved into the Stryker house on Dunellen avenue.

Will Kirch, of Springdale visited his aunt, Mrs. Baldwin, of Front street, Tuesday.

Miss Maud Bolton, of Somerville, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Harman, of Front street.

Mrs. Harris, of Somerville, was the guest, Tuesday, of Mrs. Randolph, of Mountain avenue.

Willie Herlich, of Front street, who has been spending a few days at Warrenville, has returned home.

Mr. Henry, who has been visiting the family of R. Swackhamer, has returned to his home at Joliet, Ill.

Mrs. VanMiddlesworth and daughter Lillie spent Tuesday in Plainfield visiting friends on Liberty street.

Mrs. R. J. Swackhamer, of Dunellen avenue, who has been visiting in Massachusetts, has returned home.

The public schools of New Market and Dunellen commence their fall term of work next Monday, the ninth.

Miss Georgianna Reusch, who has been visiting her uncle, Paul Reusch, has returned to her home at Cranford.

Mrs. Ace, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. George Craig, has returned to her home in East Stroudsburg.

Mrs. B. Ball is about to move into one of Mr. Craig's houses on Dunellen avenue, and Mrs. Rea will move into the house vacated by Mrs. Ball.

A number of young people from this place and Plainfield enjoyed themselves at Washington Rock picnicing on Labor Day. S. Merrill ran a stage between Dunellen and Plainfield.

—J. M. Smalley's gray gelding "Little Wonder" and Meyers Compton's bay mare "Tanglefoot" had a trial race on Jackson avenue yesterday afternoon about five o'clock. The former won by a length.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement, "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, Pastor Central Pres. Church, Helen, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

MISTAKEN.

In view of the fact that there are but two living characters in this brief narrative, it will not be necessary to use names. One other character—a dead person—enters into the recital, and she, too, may be without a name.

It was nearly two years after this woman's death that He and She, the living principals of this tale were married. The dead woman had been his wife and She had known her for years—indeed, the two women had been school fellows together; and after the young wife's death She was the first to go to him with a consolation that brought surcease in that moment of heart torn grief, when the future seemed to hold nothing for him.

All at once, just at a moment when his friends were wondering that a husband's grief could be so deep and lasting, he began to go down the country-way between the two houses and spend an hour or the broad back porch that faced the garden of old fashioned roses that were cared for through the cool of the morning and evening by the quiet folk who had been so much to him in his time of grief. There was comfort here and remembrance, and sometimes remembrance is not so bitter when there is a faint gleam of hope with it.

That was what he thought as he grew fond of leaning back in the easy split bottom chair of that simple home one evening after another, until at length "the folks" began to go into the house earlier than they did at first, leaving him out there with her alone. Neither spoke of the dead woman for a long time. Then, one night, after they had come back from a long stroll, when He said one or two things that She seemed surprised to hear, she said, just before the parting:

"If you don't mind—to-morrow—we—you and I—will go up there—to the cemetery, you know, and put some flowers on—on her grave."

That night, sitting with the dead woman's picture in front of him, he thought it all over. He thought of the thousand qualities of heart and mind that had made the wife of his youth the wife of his fancy—his very life and soul.

He closed his eyes and felt her presence and heard her speech, and putting out his hand, hers seemed to rest within his own broad, willing palm. For a long time—hours, perhaps—he sat there, and then, when he got up from his chair, he saw, by a strange chance, a picture of the other woman in another part of the room.

"She shall not go with me, to-morrow!" he exclaimed, and the empty room echoed the words back to him so strangely, that he started. "It is my grief, not hers—my remembrance, not hers!" he cried, and again the walls repeated his words.

But the morning rarely keeps the pledges of the night. When he arose, after a brief but refreshing sleep, the sun filled the room. The first thing that caught his eye was the photograph of the dead woman, and then he remembered. He looked over into the fireplace and saw the bits of paper that were once her picture.

"I was foolish," he said, as he took the photograph and put it in the pocket of one of his coats—next to his heart.

It was late that afternoon when He and She returned from the little country cemetery, walking slowly and in silence. They had found the grave already more beautiful than artifice could make it, for nature had not been neglectful, and it seemed that over this mound, of all others, her gifts were scattered with lavish hand. So the little bunches of plucked roses were put about the headstones, and then they went home—to her home.

"Won't you come in?" she said, gently, as they reached the front of the house. The man stood in silence. The empty basket dropped at his feet and he looked away from the woman that stood in front of him. Then, moved by impulse, he turned and grasped her hands in his and held them, in spite of a struggle that followed a slight noise from within the house.

"Let me go!" she whispered, with excitement. "Some one will see!"

There was no one in the broad front hall, and she drew a chair out of an adjoining parlor, and as he seated himself absently she dropped upon one of the steps that led to the floor above. She started to speak but he was not listening. Instead, he began telling her of his struggles of the night before.

"I feel easier, now," he said, "and I want you to forgive me. Some day I am coming here—six months from now, perhaps, and ask you to be my wife—to take her place in my lonely heart. May I?"

She had been expecting such a question, but not in couple with such a confession. She was dazed by it all, and the only thing she could do was to follow him to the door, and, as he pressed her for an answer, say yes with her lips while her heart said no.

"Bless you!" the man murmured. "You have made me very happy. Good-by."

It was a little over a year from that day that He and She stood before the minister of their church. It was called a good match in the town. They had known each other for such a long time that it did not seem possible that there could be a mistake. After a little dinner to a few friends the couple went away on a little journey to the city—as light of heart as if neither had ever met more than a schoolboy's sorrow.

One day, six months after the wedding, She chanced to read a poem that brought a new and unsuspected terror to her heart. These were the stanzas:

What though she lieth mute on yonder hill?
Through ivy green and showy evergreen
Have held in loving fold, through many a year,
Her quiet grave, I fear her—fear her still.
He loved her once. Ay, though he hold me fast
And sear my lips with kisses burning sweet,
No touch of mine may make his life replete,
For man's first love is oftentimes his last.

The seeds of suspicion grow in shallow soil. From this chance poem one after another circumstance came back to the suddenly inflamed mind until a torrent of terrible thoughts drove the young wife almost to desperation. Then she became calmer, and proceeding on a foundation that had not a fact in its structure, she deliberately planned to test her husband's devotion. That evening when she met him at the gate with the kiss that he always said was the subject of all his daytime thinking. She was so quiet that he asked, as they walked arm in arm together up the cinder, rose-lined path, if anything had gone wrong.

"No," she answered softly, "but I've been thinking of something serious."

"Whether your preserves will turn out right?" he laughed.

The look that she gave in response was sobering.

"Nothing like that," she went on calmly. "It is about—about—her."

She watched for some effect, and she saw it. He started and paled.

"Why, dearest, what—what——"

But he could say no more. In an instant she—the other wife—came back to him. A feeling akin to that of the terrible night eighteen months before was aroused, and unconsciously he dropped the arm of the woman by his side—his living companion. The woman was watching his every movement.

"It is true," she thought. "For these long months I have been deceiving myself."

"I hope you haven't been thinking foolish things."

"I have only been thinking," she said, "that we should not forget—forget her so, that we should go up—up there, like we did once before."

"Together?" he asked.

"Yes. Why not?"

"Why, I don't know," he said, "but it seems strange, somehow—I don't know just why; but let's not go together."

In an instant she had reasoned that he had been going to that little cemetery alone and that at that shrine he had paid tribute without her knowledge.

As he sat he recalled the other great moment of his struggle with the same question, and now he felt guilty that he should so soon have forgotten the mound in the little cemetery and the woman whose body lay under it. He was thinking along in this vein when he went out to supper. His wife spoke to him of other things and appeared to be willing to change the subject, but he was moody and silent. That night, at bedtime, he went away to himself and she sat alone in her little room. She did not cry as women do when they are weak; but in her strength she calculated on the past and the future. She calmly reasoned it out, and thinking about it from every point of view, she could only see a picture of a wretched life. She had the chance poem in her hand, and two or three times she read its five stanzas through. The last one was the worst:

Love's perfect flower may never bloom for me—
For me, his wife; for, ah, I fear her still
Who lives forever mute on yonder hill.
His heart's one love! Would God that I were she!

"I wonder when he goes?" she thought. Surely she knew how all of his time had been spent; but she must have been deceived.

In this state of mind she fell asleep. When she awoke the first light of the morning was creeping through the vine-covered windows. She instantly remembered the horrible events of the night before, but now they did not seem so bad. She would go to him and talk it over. She would wake him with a kiss and confess her mind, just as he had done, long before. Then She went to his room. It was deserted. She looked hurriedly about the house. He was not there. The truth came to her in the instant. She was surprised that he could have got away on other mornings and back again without her knowledge.

She wondered, too, as she slipped into her light wrap and hat, that the neighbors had not observed and whispered it to her. In such a state of mind she hurried along the lane, not speaking to the surprised villagers who stared after her as she went up the hill in the direction of the graveyard.

In her excitement, she had miscalculated her position, and here, on the street side of the fence, she could see the neglected grave. He stood by it, with his hands clasped back of him. A bunch of flowers rested on the headstone, and there seemed to be many beautiful ones growing all over the mound. While she watched he fell to his knees, and, clasping his hands in front of his face, he remained motionless for a minute or two. Then he got up and walked in the direction of the stile. The woman crouched low in the grass and waited until her husband had passed down the road out of her view.

The man felt better for his morning's experience. He felt that he had repaired a neglect. Singularly enough, nature had kept up her kind ministrations, and the grave was as well tended as it had been nearly two years ago. The husband thought that he had felt his last doubt—that the living woman was as much to him now as the first had ever been, and that his conscience would never again allow a division of his consideration. He was, indeed, a happy man as he walked into his own open doorway and called cheerily for the wife of his home. He looked through the house, into the yard and up and down the roadway.

"It's funny," he thought. "She does not often go out so early in the morning."

As he stood at the gate one of the neighbors called to him:

"You folks are up early. Nothing wrong, I hope."

"Nothing at all."

"Didn't know but you was sick. Saw your wife going up toward the folks' just now."

FASHIONS IN OLD JERUSALEM.

The Jewesses of Ancient Times Were Gorgeously Arrayed, Indeed.

As far back as seven centuries before the Christian era there were very gayly dressed women in Jerusalem. The prophet Ezekiel tells of them. They had garments of silk adorned with embroidered work; their bodies were swathed in fine linen; they had shoes of badger skin. They wore ornaments of gold and silver, rings in the ears, bracelets on the wrists, a chain around the neck, a jewel over the brow, and a crown upon the head.

The prophet speaks of the earrings which were worn by the women of Jerusalem; but these ornaments were worn by Jewesses ages before the time of Ezekiel, even in the days of Moses, and earlier yet. There were earrings among the other gifts in the oblations to Moses, as described in the Book of Numbers. The first Biblical reference to them is in the part of Genesis which tells how Rebekah obtained as a gift a "golden earring of half a shekel weight" from Abraham's servant, who "put it upon her face."

At a later period the patriarch Jacob procured all the earrings which belonged to his household and hid them under an oak tree. Subsequently to that time earrings are frequently spoken of in the Bible. Even Job, the patient man of Uz, must have owned a lot of them in the latter part of his life, for when all his brethren and all his sisters and all his acquaintances came to comfort him under his afflictions, "every one of them gave him an earring of gold."

In the very early periods of Jewish history women seem to have been as fond of dress and decorations as they are in modern times. When the daughters of Jerusalem were appareled and bejeweled in the way described by Ezekiel, their garments and ornaments must have been nearly as expensive as those of the grand dames who now shine in society. The wearing of "divers colors," however, does not seem to have been a mark of honor.

THE COUNT WAS A CONDUCTOR.

Something of Which He May Be Proud When He Rejoins the Nobility.

Everybody who has ever ridden much on the Union street cars of San Francisco, has at some time noticed Conductor Otto W. Mall, a foreigner of distinguished manners and master of politeness in six languages—Russian, Danish, Swedish, English, German and French. Mall is no longer a conductor, for he has just inherited nearly a half million dollars from a wealthy aunt at Copenhagen, and now he is not ashamed to tell his friends the truth about his status and that he is a genuine Danish count.

Mall got $500 recently, and his attorneys at Copenhagen have informed him that a draft for any sum within reason will be honored at an early date, and that the sum will approximate $500,000. There has been some delay in the settlement owing to a contest of the will which was begun by the Count's cousins some months ago.

Mall never made himself known to anybody in California or pretended to be anything other than a laborer struggling to get on in the world. He has been a conductor on the Union street line for seven years, though he occasionally quit to do mining work at the Pioneer mines in Amador county.

Several years ago he was severely hurt while helping a woman and her child from a car. One of the manholes in the street was open and he fell into it. Speaking of his inheritance, the Count said:

"I always knew I would get a pretty good inheritance some day, but what was the use to speak of it? People would not believe me, and it is a bore to be talking about expected windfalls. I may go to Europe on a visit but I think I shall always make California my home, for I have learned to like the State and its people.

"I can now devote my life to studies long neglected. I am fond of science, language, music and art. The experience I have had as a hard workingman has taught me how the other half lives, and I have profited by the lessons. You ask me why I followed such a business. I hardly know, but I do know when one gets in a rut it is very hard to get out of it."

Men Above Principles.

"Ah, yes," confessed the sweet girl graduate of yesterday, who is to-day a bride, "it is true that we pledged ourselves never to marry, but we value men above principles, don't you know."

And the mind that had then discussed the transcendental in municipal politics now concentrated itself upon the purchase of an oil stove that would cook steak and not heat the room.—Detroit Tribune.

Union County Orphans' Court

On the application of Lawrence Collins, administrator, etc. For sale of land to pay debts.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

Lawrence Collins, administrator, etc., of John Collins, deceased, having exhibited to this Court under oath, a just and true account of the personal estate and debts of said deceased, whereby it appears that the personal estate of said deceased is insufficient to pay his debts, and requested the aid of the Court in the premises. It is, on this thirty-first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, ordered that all persons interested in the lands, tenements and real estate of said John Collins, deceased, appear before the Court, at the court house in the city of Elizabeth, on the 2d day of October next, at 10 a. m., to show cause why so much of the lands, tenements, hereditaments and real estate of the said John Collins, deceased, should not be sold as will be sufficient to pay his debts, or the residue thereof, as the case may require.

III.

"Then you don't take the thing on, Jim?" said I.

"Oh, I'm not saying that," cried he; "but it's worth more than a hundred. I'm like to have my head cracked before I'm out of it."

"I'll make it two hundred and fifty," said I, "and not a penny more."

"You're on," says he. "And now for a word about the chap's duds. What was he wearing when last you saw him?"

I gave him a full account of Michel Grey and his clothes, and he went away. Twenty-four hours after I got a line from him:

"Come up to the Rue de la Loire. I have found your man."

You may imagine that I didn't lose much time in doing as he asked me. While I couldn't really believe that the thing was to end in the simple way his letter made out, none the less the fact that we stood a good chance now of putting our hands on the ten thousand dollars came home to me.

"Bigg," said I, "you'll be set up for a twelvemonth, and he'll be off to New York to marry a Yankee—that is, if he doesn't close on that pretty bit of goods up at the Hotel de Lille. Was there ever such a town!"

I found Jim sitting on a dirty bed in a dirty little house near the boulevard end of the street he had named. He didn't look at all hopeful as I'd expected he would, and the cigar that he held in his hand had gone out.

"I BELIEVE YOUR MAN IS AT MAISON D'OR."

"Well," says he, "you got my letter?"

"Why should I be here if I hadn't?" says I.

"Ah, true," he went on; "and I may as well tell you at once—I believe your man's at the Maison d'Or, up in Montmartre."

"How did you find that out?" I asked.

"I traced him by his stick," said he; "an orange-wood cane, with a globe of silver and a little map of the world on top of it. Is that it?"

"The same!" cried I.

"And he wore a hat of black felt, large beyond usual?"

"He did that."

"Then he's at the Maison d'Or; and how we're to get him out, God knows."

"Why what's the difficulty?"

"I don't like the house,' says he, shifting his eyes curiously.

"But what's the matter with it?"

"Oh, there's nothing the matter with it, except that a good many who go in never come out again. I've no fancy for that myself."

"Jim," says I, "you haven't got a heart of a rabbit. What nonsense you're talking. Take me up to the shop, and let me have a look as it."

"I was going to suggest that," says he. "It'll be dark in an hour, and no one to tread on our heels. I know the woman who keeps the cabaret at the back of the place, and it was from the top of a shed in her garden that I looked down into the lower rooms."

"Why not knock at the door at once and have done with it?" says I.

"It would be worth more than your life or mine to do that," cried he; "all the neighborhood knows it. There's not a man that would venture in."

"Then what makes you think that this Grey is there?"

"He was two days at an opium den in the Rue d'Oran, which is not a stone's throw off, and was last seen at the cabaret I speak of. He was then with the man who runs the Maison d'Or. Folks knew him from my description of his hat and stick. I guessed at once that I should hear of him in a drug-shop. That's what took me to the Rue d'Oran."

"You're friends with the woman who runs this beer-shop, did you say?"

"The best possible, though I wouldn't walk with her in the Bois—not for choice, leastwise."

"Then let's get up there at once. If Grey is in the shop, the closer the eye we keep on it the better."

He assented to this, and we went off together in a closed cab. It was then almost full dusk, and threatening for a wet night. In fact we hadn't got to the top of the Rue du Faubourg when the rain began to pelt down in earnest, the people scuttling into the cafes, and the water flooding the gutters. When at last our rickety old cab began to lumber up the slopes to Montmartre, the lamps in the streets were dancing before a stiff west wind, and the sky above us was black as ink. Where we'd got to I couldn't for the life of me tell; but by and by Jim stopped the driver before a third-rate drinking den, and we stepped out in a dirty street, where the mud was almost up to our ankles.

"This is the place," said he; while it rained so fast that the water began to run off his hat. "Jam your tile over your eyes, and follow me. You will want a twenty franc piece to shut the old woman's mouth; after that, it's easy."

He led the way into a bit of a bar where four or five shabby customers were drinking beer and talking to women who matched them down to the ankles. But we weren't there more than a moment, for after a word in French lingo to the chap who served the drink, we passed on to a small parlor which overlooked a bit of a yard. Here a squat little woman, who didn't appear to have washed her face for a fortnight, was in talk with a girl who had a guitar in her hand—a poor, bespangled, squalid-looking wretch, who made her living, I don't doubt, by capering about before the scum in the bar. They left off when we came in, and then Jim fell to parleying with the woman, and a fine noise they made of it.

"She thinks you're a nark," said he to me in the middle of it, "give us the twenty franc piece and see if that will cool her."

I handed him over the money and they got to work again. This time the woman took it different, and when I'd whispered to him to promise her twenty francs more when we were through, she left off talking of a sudden, and led us down some dark stairs to a stinking kitchen where I wouldn't have housed a dog. Two minutes after, we were out in the back yard, and she had left us.

"Now," said Jim, "we're the better for wanting her, though she's a wonderful woman when you take her right. The fact is, she's just as crazy as the others about the house yonder, and is half afraid of having anything to do with us. But she's lent me the steps, and that's all I care a crack about."

It was raining cats and dogs now, and bitter cold, but we were both excited by what we'd come to do, and didn't feel it more than the touch of a feather. For my part, I'd thought little of the danger up to that time, but when I stood out in that dark yard and looked up to the black shape of a windowless and prison-like house, I must say that I got a shiver through me.

"Jim," said I, "two's not many for a job like this. Did you bring your pistol?"

"I did so," he whispered, "you don't find me going far without it in Paris. Will you go first, or shall I?"

"You go," said I, "since you know the way. I'm on your heels—though what you're to see through that wall I'd like to learn."

"There's a window on the lower story," cried he, "but keep your mouth shut, and tread light."

Saying this, he went up the steps, and I followed him. I have made it clear, I think, that the cabaret, or beer-shop, or whatever you like to call it, stood back to back with the house we'd come to inquire about. There was only a yard and a high wall between them, but at the end of this yard, and jambed up against the wall was a shed for lumber, so built that when you set the steps on its roof you could put your fingers on the top of the bricks above and haul yourself up. It didn't take Jim and I a minute to do this, and once astride the wall, we had our first view of the Maison d'Or.

I must say, and I always have said, that there was something uncanny in the very look of that house. Its heavy, blackened shape seemed to rise up like the shape of a dead-house or a prison. Many of its lower windows were heavily barred with iron bars. The paved yard around it was reeking with filth and rubbish. No sound, no light came out of it. It was just a great mass of brickwork looming up in the darkness, and I could understand easily enough how all the wild tales about it had come to be told. Sitting there, astride on the wall, and peering at such casements as faced the back of the cabaret, I should not have been a bit surprised if I'd have seen some inhuman thing stalking the yard below me. My heart was in my mouth—my nerves twitched like a woman's. And Jim was not a whit better.

"Do you make anything of it?" he whispered, after we'd been on the wall a minute or two.

"The devil a bit," said I.

"It ain't exactly a palace of varieties is it?" he continued a bit later. "but Grey's in there right enough. It was through that mite of a window on your left that I got a sight of the place last night. There was a light there then. I don't fancy we'll do much to-night."

"Nor me, neither," said I, for I was right down scared, and that's the fact of it.

"Shall we try again to-morrow night?" says he, and I could see he was in a hurry to be off.

"We might as well, for all the good we're doing," said I, and with that I turned to put my foot on the steps again. A moment later I saw a thing which fairly took my breath away.

The window which was dark had suddenly become light. A man with a lamp in his hand passed it, and, following him with quick steps, was no other than my master, Nicolas Steele.

Lawyer Weeks a Very Useful Man in a Place of Some Trust. John Y. McKane the Best Carpenter in Sing Sing and Almost Invaluable to the State.

The real social leaders up in Warden Sage's state hotel at Sing Sing come from New York and its immediate vicinity. They don't number 400 or even 40, but mentally they are so far superior to the other 1,300 guests that Warden Sage is proud of them, and if he had any say about it and the law wasn't in the way it is altogether likely that he would give a certificate to the effect that they had reformed and could be released with the certainty that they would be very good citizens indeed hereafter. For from being very bad citizens at large they have become models under restraint.

"Now, if I had a houseful of men like them," said the Warden, "there never would be the need of a harsh word in this place, and so far as work is concerned, they would work 24 hours a day if you would let them. We can't give them enough to do. That's about the only thing they have to complain of here, although they are treated like every other well-behaved member of the community, and no better."

One of the men the Warden referred to was Francis Weeks, the lawyer and man of wealth who was intrusted with many large estates and proved recreant to his trust and wrecked about everything he could lay his hands on, afterward fleeing to South America and being caught after a very long chase. Weeks was the sort of a man who enjoys life a good deal more than the average man. He did as he pleased; had plenty of money to spend and servants who attended his every want. In the clothing shop in the prison he is a bookkeeper and holds a place of some trust.

"A very useful man to the State," says the Warden, "a very useful man."

A good many people who visit Sing Sing ask about Weeks, but not one-tenth the number of those who want to see John Y. McKane. John Y. may be called the star boarder at the hotel. Since he has been there no visitor has gone through the institution who hasn't said:

"Where's McKane? I want to see McKane. Oh, please let me see McKane," or something of that kind.

It may be said, too, that not one out of twenty who goes there sees McKane. The prison officials, particularly the Warden and principal keeper Connaughton, don't believe in making a man's imprisonment any more unpleasant than is necessary. McKane knows how curious people are, and it is very distasteful to him to be the feature in a show of the kind. When visitors are doing the prison, if it is possible for McKane to be out of the way without neglecting his work or violating a rule, he manages generally to keep out of sight until they are gone.

Carpentering was John Y.'s trade before he got to be supreme ruler of Gravesend and Coney Island. He takes to it as a duck does to water, and he is the best carpenter in Sing Sing at the present time.

Another one of the distinguished set is Quigley, the forger. Quigley is a bookkeeper, too. He has the dirtiest job of any of the lot. He is in the foundry. The reason he was put there is that in his youth he was in the brass and iron business, and it came a kind of natural to him. It is a very rough and dirty place; but he likes it. There is plenty of work and he keeps himself well occupied. The Warden says he has been a very useful man there. He isn't quite as fleshy as he was when he went in, but he's not more unhappy than anybody else would be under the conditions.

His wife and brother call on him occasionally. When the reporter was going through the institution he found Quigley in the hospital just recovering from an attack of acute indigestion, a complaint, by the way, which is not a very uncommon one in the prison.

Judge Hunter, of Long Island City, may also be put among the notables. The Judge has been in prison now a long term of years. He misappropriated some money from an estate of which he was trustee to help him in getting back some of his own money which he had squandered in speculation. The good money went after the bad and he went to jail.

The general public have almost forgotten about him. He has only a few more months to serve. His hair is iron gray and he looks in the very best of health. He is addressed as Judge by the officers. At presen the is a nurse in the hospital, and a very good one, too, according to all accounts.

The most unpleasant part of imprisonment at Sing Sing for these men is doing the lockstep and eating meals along with the common herd of thieves, thugs and murderers. They have to do that just as if they were not distinguished and social leaders.

Drawing the Line.

She had fidgeted in her chair for a good hour, until she could stand it no longer. Said she in accents which told how she had suffered:

"George McStayer, you are not indifferent to me; I will be your wife if you will only ask me, and if you don't want me, say so. But there is one thing you must understand, once for all, this is not a continuous performance house."

AN ERUDITE BRAKEMAN.

A West Point Graduate Working His Way Up in the Railroad Business.

A rather grimy young man, in dusty corduroys and a stubby black beard, sat chatting with Freight Traffic Manager McCormick yesterday, says the Cincinnati Inquirer.

"Let me introduce Mr. Charlie Hine, a freight brakeman on our Chicago division," said Mr. McCormick.

Mr. Hine rose, and, acknowledging the reporter's greeting, put out his hand—he was shy a finger nail in the way of business as the result of his first month's experience on the road.

"Mr. Hine has resigned his commission as Lieutenant in the United States army to turn freight brakeman," continued Mr. McCormick. "He is a graduate of Washington High School, of the West Point Military Academy, and of the Cincinnati Law School. But he is ambitious and wants to graduate in the Big Four College. He is taking the operating department course and will go in for his examination and degree of superintendent one of these days."

The Enquirer published the announcement of Mr. Hines' resignation from the army a month or more ago. His old friends would hardly recognize him now. There is nothing of the trim and jaunty appearance left, and he has lost some pounds in weight while hustling local freight and twisting brakes, but he looks at you with determined eyes that smile cheerily and do not shift as he explains his position.

"My ambition is to be a superintendent," he says. "I have studied the theory, but I want the practice. Theory and practice combined produce the ideal condition in any profession, and in railroading, a profession which is comparatively new, nearly all the higher officers rose from the ranks.

"After the war there were thousands of educated men who came out of the service, and, finding themselves displaced in their old vocations, began life over again by taking subordinate positions on railroads. These men naturally rose, and now fill the official positions. I am simply doing from choice what many were forced to do by circumstances, that is all. There is nothing Quixotic about it."

"I suppose you didn't think there was enough danger in the profession of arms and thought that you would try freight braking?" asked the reporter. "The railroad companies killed or maimed nearly 35,000 employees in 1893, you know."

Mr. Hine smiled, and, glancing at his wounded finger, said that he "didn't propose to get killed or maimed if he could help it, but that was part of the game. I have just drawn my first month's pay, $60.20," he added, "and I rather think that I earned it. My companions are good fellows and have received me very kindly.

"The work comes a little hard, but I'm not at all discouraged, and mean to go through with it. I have fallen through a cattle guard once and knocked off a finger nail and hustled freight, but it's all right; I knew what I was getting into when I began it."

The young man is 28 years of age, of spare figure, and it is evident that he is not very strong physically. He is a native of Virginia. He has no special influence or backing to bring promotion, and says that he doesn't expect it except as he earns it in the regular course.

A Mystery Explained.

The street-fight was almost over. One able-bodied gladiator lay prostrate on the sidewalk, and the other was enjoying the fruits of victory by kicking him in the ribs, while the crowd surged around to get a good view of the proceedings. Suddenly a figure appeared which caused strong men to hold their breath in astonishment.

It was a policeman!

With a fixed gaze and unfaltering step he advanced and laid his grasp on the shirt collar of the victor, who for a few seconds remained nerveless and paralyzed by the mysterious apparition, and, then tearing himself away, fled down an alley with a cry of horror.

Awed and silent, the crowd gathered round and gazed at the stern set face of the officer.

Suddenly a quiver passed over his features; he drew his coat cuffs several times across his eyes and looked helplessly about him.

"Where am I?" he gasped.

The mystery was explained at last. He was a sleep-walker.—Truth.

An Issue in Doubt.

Stranger—I was over to your courthouse to-day at the murder trial. I don't see why the jury deliberates so long; the prisoner proved a complete alibi.

Resident (Boomertown, Oklahoma)—Wal, I wouldn't like to gamble on the result. This is the first chance fer a hangin' since the new jail's tin built, an' local pride's at stake!—Puck.

The Summer Girl Joke.

Of all the jokes the dearest
That hangs on memory's wall,
The old, old joke of the summer girl,
It seemeth the best of all.

The ships have passed in the night time;
Big sleeves are getting passe;
Trilby has gone to the bow-wows,
And bloomers have had their day.

We look with longing fondness
At what we spurned last fall;
And the old, old joke of the summer girl,
Seemeth the best of all.

A dog was advertised to play on a piano at a circus. When the time came for the dog to perform he got on a seat and began playing. Suddenly a wag in the crowd shouted "rats" upon which the dog bounded off the seat but the piano kept on playing.—Minneapolis Baptist.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. CHARMING NUPTIAL EVENT.

A SOMERVILLE YOUNG YOUNG MAN CARRIES OFF A PLAINFIELD BRIDE.

Miss Maud Safford and Louis P. Gaston the Contracting Parties—The Unitarian Service Used—Who the Guests Were.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Unitarian church yesterday afternoon at three o'clock when the marriage of Miss Maud Safford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Safford, of Grove street, and Louis P. Gaston, of Somerville, was solemnized. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hobart Clark.

From the church the newly-married couple and the guests were driven to the home of the bride's parents, very prettily decorated for the occasion, where the dinner was served.

The bride was charmingly attired in a wedding gown of white satin, trimmed with silk lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid was her sister, Miss Beatrice C. Safford, who wore a becoming gown of white figured silk, trimmed with blue ribbon. Her bouquet was of pink roses. Miss Marion Safford, the youngest sister of the bride, prettily gowned in white, was the maid of honor. The other two young ladies who completed the bridal party were Miss Helen G. Hopkins, of Arlington Mass., whose gown was of white organdie over green satin, and Miss Annie Baston, of the same place, who was attired in white and pale green silk. G. Tayloe Gwathmey, of Norfolk, Va., was the best man. The ushers were Frederick W. Ancona and George C. Davies, both of Philadelphia.

The guests at the wedding beside the bridal party and the parents of the bride, were Mrs. Hugh M. Gaston, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh K. Gaston, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Vanderveer, Dr. Mary Gaston, and Miss Francis Gaston, of Somerville, Miss Mary Evans, of Philadelphia, R. H. McCutchen, Miss Howland, Miss Marion McCutchen, and Miss Verna McCutchen, of Ellisdale Manor, South Branch, Miss Maria L. Barney, and Rev. and Mrs. Hobart Clark.

The bride and groom left soon after four o'clock amid a shower of rice for a trip to the New England coast. Mr. and Gaston will spend the winter at Somerville.

A Strong Company.

The elements that go to make a successful theatrical company are numerous and varied. The members must be artists of ability, the plays must be bright and catchy; there must be a mixture of sparkling vaudeville, which will turn out as satisfactory evening's entertainment as one should want to see. This is just what the Bubb company is. It has been carefully put together and long seasons of success have whipped the organization into one of the best shows on the road. The company includes the Elmore children which will be pleasing news to all the little ones throughout the city. Dime matinees will be given daily. Stillman Music Hall all next week.

Miss Smith to Resume Instruction.

Miss Alice O. Smith, a former resident of this city, will resume teaching on the piano and organ in the W. C. T. U. rooms Saturday, September 14th. Those who desire instruction in the above will find it to their advantage to call on Miss Smith any Saturday at the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue. Her advertisement appears in another column.

Court Decisions.

The following casee on contract were tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon, Lawyer Murphy representing the plaintiff:

LIQUOR DEALERS UP IN ARMS

THE LICENSED MEN ARE AFTER THE UNLICENSED ONES.

A Crusade to Be Instituted that Will Set the Town Agog With Excitement—Startling Statements Made to a Reporter.

If the present intentions of the licensed liquor dealers of this city are carried out Plainfield will shortly be the scene of a crusade that will raise high jinks with a good many people and incidentally set the town agog with excitement that will be alleviated only when a number of merchants are brought before the bar of justice, charged with selling liquor without a license, and cleared or convicted as the case may be.

The men who deal in liquor over bars by paying the city $700 per year for the privilege have got their dander up, figuratively speaking, and will soon be hot on the trail of those who sell with a license that principally consists in a wink of the eye and the knowledge that the patron knows a good thing without heralding it among his neighbors.

"Why," said a prominent liquor dealer to a Daily Press reporter last night, "there are fifty, yes sixty, places in this city who are selling liquor without a license. Do you call that a fair deal when we are paying $700 a year for that privilege? We do not and we are going to put a stop to it if possible."

That is the reason that the Retail Liquor Dealers Association was organized here a few days ago. By banding together in organization they propose to institute a crusade, gather evidence and prosecute those who are dealing illegally in liquor. As an organization they feel that they will accomplish results where as individuals they would fail.

The members of the Association are in conference this afternoon discussing the movement with the idea of formulating the general line of attack.

HIGH SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.

Many Desirable Changes Made for Advantages in Instruction.

The repairs in the High school building are now progressing very rapidly. The new yellow pine floors have been laid throughout the building, and those in the first and second floor class rooms have been polished while the Assembly Hall floor is all ready for it. The steps to the stairways have been relaid with yellow pine and polished, and also the halls. The registers have been changed from the bottom of the wall to a position eight feet higher in the class rooms, and ten feet higher in Assembly Hall. New ventilators have also been placed there. The fire escapes have been all arranged for some time, and the flagpole, one hundred and nine feet high, set up. The large platform in the eastern end of Assembly Hall has been taken down and a much smaller one put up in the side toward Fifth street. By the change in platform the room will be able to accommodate a larger number.

The large quantity of new and modern books necessary to supply the schools have begun to arrive, and Superintendent Maxson and his corps of assistants will have their hands full during the next few days in arranging them.

Neither the High school department, nor any of the grammar classes in the Stillman building, will reopen until Sepiember 16th.

A Bicycle Accident.

George Richter, the Somerset street barber, has lately endeavored to master the art of riding a wheel. Mrs. Richter is visiting friends at Berkely Heights, and Mr. Richter thought it would be pleasant to ride there on the wheel. He started yesterday from Craig place, but did not ride far before he fell off. As a result his face was severely scratched, and he received a few bruises. He was assisted into Wm. L. Smalley's house, where warm solutions were applied. Later he left for his home.

—John Leal's school for boys and young men will re-open next week.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

Council Takes Action That Will Bring the Extension.

TROLLEY ORDINANCE PROGRESSED.

There is Hope That the Electric Road Will Soon Spread Out Over The Town—Councilman Fisk Says in a Few Months—Sewer Matters Occupy Considerable Attention—License for a Woman—Many Other Important Matters Decided.

Noted progress was made along several important lines at last night's regular September meeting of the City Council, and although it was nearly 8:45 when Clerk Mac Murray, in the absence of President See, called the members to order, a considerable amount of business was transacted.

On motion of Councilman Fisk, Councilman Erickson was chosen president pro-tem.

Mr. See came in later, but did not take the chair.

Councilmen Stockton, Fisk, Erickson, Dumont, Frost, Moore, Frazee and Westphal answered to the roll call, after which the minutes of the last two meetings were read and approved.

The following petitions and communications were then presented:

From A. Vanderbeek and others, residents of Park avenue, asking that Park avenue be put in same condition that it was before the sewers were put in. It was referred to the Sewer committee; from Woolston & Buckle and others, asking that two electric lights be placed on Martine avenue. Referred to the Police and Public Light committee. E. C. Mulford and others petitioned Council for crosswalk at East Fifth street and Richmond, and South avenue and Berckman street. The matter was referred to Street committee.

D. S. Dunavan asked for permission to erect a corrugated covered wagon house in the rear of 242 East Second street. It was referred to the Building committee.

Mrs. E. T. De Forest asked that something be done with her request to erect a memorial fountain on West Second street. On motion of Mr. Fisk the request was granted with the proviso that it be done under the direction of the Street Commissioner.

C. E. Harris, janitor of Washington school, applied for the appointment of special policeman. The matter was referred to the Mayor.

Thomas Callahan objected to the street railway running from Richmond street through Third street to Watchung avenue. The objection was placed in the hands of the street committee.

George Belcher applied for a hack license which was granted later in the evening.

The city clerk's and city treasurer's reports were read and referred to the finance committee.

Mr. Dumont, from the finance committee, offered resolutions to the effect that the three months note of $1,500 now due, charged to the fire department fund, be renewed; that $4,000 be borrowed in anticipation of taxes to be placed in the general fund; and that $8,500 be borrowed to be used on sewer work. They were all adopted.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the clerk read the corporation notice in regard to the street railway extension. An opportunity was then given for anyone to offer objections. Mr. Callahan was present and stated his objection as given above. That being the only objection, the sewer committee, through Mr. Frost, made a report.

The specifications and bonds for the construction of the sewage beds were on his resolution filed, and they were ordered published in the Plainfield papers, also The Engineering News, of New York, and Monday, September 23d, set as the time to receive bids for the work.

Mr. Frost also offered a resolution that 150 copies of the specifications be printed by the printing committee, which was carried.

On both of the above resolutions Councilmen Moore and Frazee voted in the negative.

Mr. Fisk moved that the matter of releasing Cook & Co's bondsmen be referred to the corporation counsel and that he prepare the necessary paper for release. It was so ordered.

A letter was then read by the clerk from Engineer A. J. Gavett, which stated that the outfall sewer contracted for by John Marsden was commenced July 10th, 1895, and since that time the average number of feet of pipe laid each day was about 65½ feet. He thought, as did also Mr. Frost, that the work was progressing too slowly. The latter thought more men should be employed and felt that the city should take steps to push the work. On Mr. Dumont's motion the city clerk was authorized to send Mr.

FAKING WITH CASTILE SOAP.

A SWINDLE BEING WORKED ON UNSUSPECTING HOUSEWIVES.

Two Individuals Who Talk Smoothly and Claim to Represent a Local Druggist—Promises That Fail to Materialize.

Another big swindle is being worked on Plainfield householders and castile soap is the excuse. Two young men have been visiting many of the residences in town, representing themselves as either from Hebard's Crescent pharmacy or New York dealers. They had with them what they claim to be a superior quality of castile soap which they wished to introduce. They offered a box of twelve cakes for a dollar, but said if one dozen were bought they would make the buyer a present.

They had learned the names of a number of Plainfield people, and used those of several prominent physicians and citizens who, they said, highly recommended the soap. In some cases they left the soap as agreed, and in others promised to bring the other dozen next day.

When The Daily Press reporter called at Hebard's pharmacy this afternoon, he found Mr. Hebard out investigating the case, but the clerk said that a number of inquiries had been made, but that they had not sent out or thought of sending out any agents, and that the affair was a swindle from beginning to end.

When Mr. Hebard arrived he said that he had seen the soap and that it was not castile soap at all, but was as far as he could judge, a common white hard soap, scented with sassafras, but perfectly harmless. The description of the swindlers could not be obtained except that both were young men and one wore a white straw hat and the other a brown derby. The men have been at work all the morning and managed to cover the greater part of the city.

The number and amount lost by their victims is not known, but it is supposed to be quite extensive.

WALKED INTO A SEWER TRENCH.

A Horse Falls in a Trench on Central Avenue.

It was quite a surprise for Mr. Johnson, of Martinsville, last evening when he saw his horse disappear from his usual position in front of his buggy. Johnson was driving down Central avenue where the house connections are being laid. The red lights denoting danger were placed in the centre of the street and, seeing that the work was apparently being done on only one side, Johnson started down the other. He only got as far as the Manning building when his horse stepped into a trench and went down.

A large crowd gathered and, after a good deal of work, the animal was placed in such a position that he could get out alone. The buggy was not injured, but the horse had his leg badly wrenched.

Milkman William Debele, of 113 Somerset street, met with an accident between five and six o'clock this morning, while delivering milk on Elmwood place. He was driving out of the latter thoroughfare towards Front street and when he reached the corner, he attempted to cross the street railway tracks near a point where excavation had been made for a manhole.

The horse was not able to pass the point in safety, and in consequence went astride the opening and the track, sinking in the mud a considerabe depth.

It was at first thought the animal had fractured a leg, but the harness and shafts were the only things broken.

A suit for damages will probably result.

To See the Yacht Race.

The great topic of interest to the sporting world, and to the general public for that matter, at present, is the coming yacht races for the America's Cup. The third of the series will occur on Thursday, and for those who wish to see it a splendid chance is offered. The sea-going tug C. E. Evarts, one of the largest and stanchest in New York harbor, will carry a party of seventy to watch the Defender try to win. A special car leaves Plainfield at 7:30 a. m. that day for those that wish to go. For further information apply to Edward Nelson, North avenue station.

Coming Marriage Announced.

Mrs. Ephriam Holbrook Depew, of 346 Franklin place, announces the coming marriage of her daughter, Miss Louise Depew to Stuart Hayt Patterson, of 19 East Seventh street, which takes place Wednesday evening, September 18th, at seven o'clock in Grace P. E. church.

CRACK SCORES CHALKED UP.

CLIMAX GUN CLUB MEMBERS SHOOTING A REVELATION.

Neaf Apgar Smashes Ninety-Eight Out of a Possible One Hundred—Other Big Percentages—Summary of Events.

With good aim and steady muscles the Climax Gun Club members chalked up some crack scores at their monthly shoot at Benner's grounds yesterday afternoon. The weather was clear and bracing and the way the Empire targets were smashed was a revelation to even the old shooters who thought they knew the abilities of the best men from A to Z. In the club handicap sixteen members participated, and the shooting of Apgar was astonishing, he smashing 98 out of a possible 100, of which 10 were double rise. Those that made averages of 80 per cent. or over were Keller 94, Smith 91, Brantingham 90, Erhardt 88, D. Darby 88, Manning 86, Grier 82.

Monthly club handicap, scratch men shooting at 25 Empire targets, thrown at unknown angles: Apgar scratch 25; Brantingham scratch, 25; Smith scratch, 23; Keller scratch, 23; Erhardt scratch, 23; D. Terry allowance 1, broke 19; Manning 2, broke 22; Edwards 5, broke 19; Woodruff 2, broke 18; Swody 6, broke 23; Singer 10, broke 29; "Williams" 4, broke 22; D. Darby 5, broke 25; Goodman 6, broke 14; Stephenson 10, broke 20; "Grier" 8, broke 30.

Event No. 1, Empire targets, unknown angles—N. Apgar, 10; T. H. Keller, 9; C. Smith, 8; E. "Edwards," 8; R. H. Manning, 8; T. Brantingham, 8; L. R. Erhardt, 7; V. Swody, 7; A. Woodruff, 5; W. Singer, 5.

Event No. 2, 10 Empires, same conditions—Apgar, 10; Erhardt, 10; Woodruff, 10; Keller, 9; Smith, 9; Edwards, 9; Swody, 8; Manning, 8; Brantingham, 8; Singer, 6.

Event No. 3, same conditions—Smith, 10; Apgar, 10; Erhardt, 10; Keller, 10; Woodruff, 9; Manning, 9; Brantingham, 9; Edwards, 7.

Event No. 4, same conditions—Keller, 10; Smith, 9; Woodruff, 9; Manning, 9; "Grier," 9; Apgar, 8; D. Terry, 7; Erhardt, 7; D. Darby, 7; Stephenson, 5; Goodman, 3.

Event No. 5, five pairs of doubles—Apgar, 10; Smith, 10; Keller, 10; Erhardt, 9; "Grier," 5.

Event No. 6, special 25 targets, unknown angles, two prizes—Apgar, 25; Keller, 23; Smith, 22; "Grier," 22; Erhardt, 22.

SAID HE WAS STRUCK.

A New Market Man Makes a Serious Charge Against Honan's Men.

A man by the name of Hallet, of New Market, was driving towards Plainfield on West Front street yesterday afternoon in company with his son. He came where the work on the sewer trench had begun, but as the street was not blocked off, he went on. According to his statement, when he got inside the contractor's men would not let him out again and struck him repeatedly, he alleges, before he could escape which he finally did. He complained to the police and steps will be taken to punish the offenders. A resident of the neighborhood stated to a Daily Press reporter this morning that a similar occurence took place yesterday morning.

Thomas to Ride the Goat.

The Daughters of Liberty will meet tonight. Several applications are expected and the goat has been fattened up and is in readiness for the arduous task of carrying H. S. Thomas, of the News, through the ceremonies. We'll try and be on hand, Thomas, and guarantee to endeavor to give you the full worth of your money.—Dunellen Call.

Peaches Tomorrow.

J. A. Smith & Bro., the grocers of 125 West Front street, receive tomorrow the largest shipment of peaches of the season. They advise housewives to purchase tomorrow for canning or pickling, as they will not be cheaper or better this season. The assortment will be large and the prices will be as low as possible. Call early and see the sidewalk show.

—There are now eleven patients at Muhlenberg Hospital.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C.A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ANXIOUS TO KICK THE PIGSKIN

A FOOT-BALL LEAGUE FOR THIS SECTION OF JERSEY.

The Matter Informally Discussed at Westfield Last Night—Plainfield Could Put a Crack Team in the Field.

From all appearances it looks as if Plainfield was going to see some good football playing this fall. The Westfield enthusiasts have been thinking for some time time of forming a league with teams from the surrounding towns and play for the championship of this district.

Last evening the Westfield Football Association invited delegates from Roselle, Cranford, Scotch Plains, Dunellen and the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. to meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at Westfield to discuss the question informally. All those invited, except Scotch Plains, either sent a delegate or sent word. Charles B. Morse acted as the Plainfield delegate.

The sentiment of the meeting seemed to be heartily in favor of a league modeled something on the plan of the Inter-collegiate Football Association and to allow no one to play on the teams except members of the society to which the team belonged.

As Plainfield is much larger than any of the other places the Westfield committee wanted a Y. M. C. A. and not an all-Plainfield eleven.

It was thought that the games should begin about October 1st. It was finally decided that each of the six clubs invited should, if possible, send three delegates to meet at the Westfield Y. M. C. A. rooms at eight o'clock next Thursday evening fully empowered to organize the league so that the schedule and rules could be decided upon at once.

A DASH FOR LIBERTY.

A Prisoner Escapes on West Front Street, But is Finally Captured.

If he had been some American explorer, captured by a heathen tribe, that made such a brave fight for freedom on West Front street yesterday afternoon, his story would have furnished material for many newspaper and magazine articles, and would have been spoken of as a brave dash for liberty and worthy of success. But as it was only a rooster that escaped from Ulrich & Blatz's market, no one thought anything of it. The plucky fowl in some manner escaped into the street under the blue sky and thought he was safe but, alas, he was not. A crowd of yelling men and boys chased him up and down the street until he saw the door of the store of the Grand Union Tea Company standing invitingly open. There was a flutter of wings, a smashing of glassware as the frightened rooster dashed into the street leaving a wreck, valued at $3.38, behind him. Again he flew this way and that with his pursuers still close behind. There being no other tea store to reach he tried T. E. Morgan's news stand, and tried to hide behind a copy of The News that lay there. The News was too thin, however, and Joseph Blatz soon captured the escaped prisoner.

On Politicians' Hill.

Politicians' Hill at the Waverly Fair yesterday was thronged with a big galaxy of the great stellar lights of Jersey statesmen, who discussed, soliliquized and prophesied in a political way all the day long. John Kean was the biggest man there, so they say.

The gas, water, electric light, sewer, etc., etc., magnate of Elizabeth said he was sure of the Gubernatorial nomination, Foster Voorhees' prospects were bright, Ex-Senator Griggs was also sure he was going to capture the nomination and Senator Rogers was was equally confident.

Augustus Cutler was about the biggest Democrat there. The Republicans greatly outnumbered the Democratf. Among the Plainfielders at the fair were James E. Martine, Wallace Vail, David J. Carney and William Nelson.

—Fred Mildenberger, who had his left leg amputated at the hospital some time ago, was discharged today, having fully recovered.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

MASSACRE OF CUBANS

Women and Children Not Spared by Spaniards.

Insurgents Butchered in Cold Blood and Women Killed Outright—Details of the Alleged Slaughter Exceptionally Revolting—Rebels Cut Telegraph Wires.

New York, Sept. 6.—Reports have just been received at Cuban headquarters in this city of the massacre of a body of insurgents at the town of Baire, in the province of Santiago de Cuba, on August 31, by a detachment of Spanish soldiery under Garrido. Not only were men butchered in cold blood, but women and children were not exempt from the fury of the Spanish troops, and several women were killed outright. The details of the alleged butchery are exceptionally revolting. Garrido is known as a bloodthirsty fighter.

WORK OF INSURGENTS.

Railway Depot Burned and Telegraph Wires Cut in Cuba.

Havana, Sept. 6.—The railway station at Sitio Grande, in the Sagua district, was set on fire at noon yesterday by rebel bands under the leadership of Masferrer and Betancourt. The insurgents also cut the telegraph wires. There were no troops at the place.

Spaniards Still Claim Victories.

Madrid, Sept. 6.—The Imparcial's dispatch from Havana says that General Linares, at the head of 1,200 government troops, fought a battle on Saturday with a force of rebels under Tejada, near Ramon y Anaguas, in which the insurgents were defeated.

TWO MILES OF FLOWERS.

Gov. Morton Reviews the Great Floral Parade in Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Over 5,000 people from all parts of the country poured into Saratoga to witness the great floral fete yesterday afternoon. The procession, over two miles in length, included more than sixty carriages, about thirty-five floats, hundreds of bicyclists and many ladies and gentlemen on horseback. All were decked with flowers. Governor Morton, who rode in the parade in a carriage with Village President Sturges, and who also reviewed the procession, was applauded to the echo. The floral ball took place in Convention hall last night and was attended by more than 6,000 people. The following prize awards were announced by the judges at the close of the parade: Handsomest decorated bicycle, John B. Yates, New York Athletic club, first; W. H. Bonnet, Saratoga, second. Ladies wheels, Miss Matthews, Saratoga, first; Miss Reeves, Saratoga, second. Bicycle costume, Miss Miner, New York, first; Miss Cluett, Troy, second. Handsomest float, Delaware & Hudson Canal company, first (a complete locomotive, an exact reproduction of their famous engine No. 210); association float, second. The "Standard Lanciers," composed and adopted by the American professors of dancing, and Trilby two-step waltz, also adopted by them, was introduced and danced at the ball. Forty members of the professors' society took part.

PROF. MOORE MAY BE NAMED.

A Columbia Professor as a Possible Supreme Court Judge.

Washington, Sept. 6.—It is said here that President Cleveland has the name of Professor John G. Moore, of Columbia college, New York, under consideration in connection with the existing vacancy on the supreme court bench. Professor Moore is now engaged in the compilation of a history of the arbitrations to which the United States has been a party, by special direction of Congress. He has announced to the state department the probable early completion of that work.

THE FLORIDA ORANGE CROP.

Very Small on Account of Last Winter's Frost.

Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 6.—Secretary Turner of the Jacksonville Fruit exchange estimates the crop of oranges in the state at not over 100,000 boxes, against 5,000,000 for the season of 1893-1894. The greater portion of the crop this year will come from the Manatee river section, on the Gulf coast, where the freezing of the last winter did comparatively little damage. Cincinnati fruit dealers have already bought the entire stock of the region.

Marlborough Will See the Cup Race

Newport, R. I., Sept. 6.—Among the large number of summer residents and visitors who went to New York last evening to witness the America Cup races were the Duke of Marlborough and Lady Rachel and Lady Aileen Wyndham-Quin, daughters of Lord Dunraven, who have completed their respective visits at this place.

Jersey City's Water Contract.

Jersey City, Sept. 6.—The Jersey City finance board late last night concurred in the award of the water contract to the Jersey City Water company by the street and water board. Speeches against the award were made by Congressman McEwan, President Condit of the board of trade and Joseph A. Dear.

Chicago's Schools Overcrowded.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Eleven thousand children in the city are without adequate public school accommodations. All the school buildings are crowded, many of the rooms are stuffed beyond the usual limits and applicants have been turned away.

Search for Foster a Failure.

Zurich, Sept. 6.—The police of this city have informed the federal authorities that their search for William R. Foster, jr., who is wanted in New York for falsifying his accounts to the extent of $193,000, has been fruitless.

Gen. Valentine Kautz Dead.

Washington, Sept. 6.—A telegram received at the war department from Seattle, Wash., announces the death there of brigadier general Augustus Valentine Kautz. He was born in Germany.

Deputy Sheriff Accused of Murder.

Omaha, Sept. 6.—Deputy sheriff Vic McCarty of Sarpy county is under arrest on the charge of murder.

SNOWSTORMS ENCOUNTERED.

A British Ship Nearly Founders in Lower Latitudes.

San Francisco, Sept. 6.—Capt. Sanders of the British ship Machrihannas, just arrived from Swansea 144 days out, reports that unusually severe weather was found in the lower latitudes and that his vessel came near going to the bottom. On June 11 the ship ran into a very heavy sea accompanied by a violent gale and a severe snow storm. The decks were full to the rails with slush and water and the ship labored heavily. From June 12 to June 21 fearful hurricanes were met with. The crew were washed out of the forecastle, the booby hatch stove in, the lifeboats carried overboard and the rails, stanchions and even the bridge were torn from their sockets. On June 21 a blizzard set in and the ropes and running gear were frozen up, the ship drifting helplessly, clad in a glistening coat of ice. Finally the men were set to work with hammers and belaying pins and the running gear was partially cleared of ice. Storms and blizzards continued up to July 4 when the weather moderated. The balance of the voyage was uneventful.

A TURKISH CANARD.

Rustem Pasha Denies Sending the Alleged Salisbury Warning.

London, Sept. 6.—Rustem Pasha, Turkish ambassador to Great Britain denies the authenticity of the dispatch purporting to have been sent by him to the Turkish minister of foreign affairs, in which was given an alleged account of an interview between him and Lord Salisbury, the British prime minister and secretary of state for foreign affairs, regarding the proposal of control by an international commission over Armenian affairs. Rustem Pasha says that no such dispatch has been written by him.

Kurds Attacked.

Constantinople, Sept. 6.—The grand vizier has dismissed a number of officials of Mush who have been found guilty of extorting taxes and treating Armenians with severity. At Bitlis a body of gendarmes attacked a band of Kurds who had been committing depredations in the Mush district. The Kurds sustained serious losses and were compelled to surrender the property of the Armenians which they had seized.

TO HIDE A MURDER BY TRAMPS

Charred Remains Found in a Barn Burned by Incendiaries.

Norristown, Pa., Sept. 6.—A large barn beloning to the Pennsylvania Railroad company in Plymouth township was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. It is believed that the barn was set on fire by tramps to hide a crime. Several of them got into a fight and the charred body of one of them was found in the ruins. It is believed he was murdered.

Eight at Least Perished.

It was discovered later that at least eight tramps met their death by the burning of the barn. Six bodies have already been recovered and the debris has not all been cleared away. The barn had been the rendezvous for tramps for years and as many as seventy-five have slept there at one time.

AN HISTORIC ELM.

Succumbs to the Woodsman After 372 Years.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 6.—A historic elm tree at Plymouth, three miles from here, was cut down yesterday for fear it would collapse during a heavy blow and cause damage. The elm was voted on March 2, 1774, by the town meeting as a place of public rendezvous, and was then referred to as "The noble tree upon which our ancesters have gazed." Subsequently to 1774 it served as an auction mart, village market and whipping post. A count of the rings upon it showed that the tree was 372 years old.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

The British House Will Assemble Again on Nov. 15.

London, Sept. 6.—Parliament was prorogued yesterday afternoon until Nov. 15. At 2:15 the members of the house of commons in a body, headed by the speaker, proceeded to the house of lords, where they heard the queen's speech formally proroguing the two houses. The commoners then returned to their own chamber, where the session was closed with the customary handshakings and expressions of good wishes.

HERBERT TO TALK MONEY.

He Will Make Three Speeches in Alabama This Month.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Gov. Oates of Alabama called on Secretary Herbert at the navy department yesterday and invited him to deliver a few speeches on the money question in Alabama. Mr. Herbert will probably make three speeches, the first about September 25. Two will be delivered at Montgomery and Birmingham and the other at some place in the district which Mr. Herbert represented in congress.

READY FOR THE RACE

Final Touches to Defender and Valkyrie.

Officially Measured in Erie Basin To-Day—Time Allowance Will Be Announced Late This Afternoon—Both Boats Lightened Considerably—Little Betting on the Race.

New York, Sept. 6.—Everything is ready for the first race of the international yacht contests for the America's Cup to-morrow. The Valkyrie was floated this morning at 8 o'clock, but did not leave the basin, awaiting the arrival of the Defender, that the measurements of both boats might proceed. The American boat left New Rochelle at 10 o'clock this morning and will be floated at Erie basin to submit to the official measurer's tape. As soon as the measurements are completed the Valkyrie will be towed the Horseshoe where she will anchor and remain to-night. The English boat's top sides are now a dazzling white relieved by a narrow gold band near the rail. Her underbody has been given a coat of black varnish and pot leaded. An extra width of copper plate was added above the copper already on her keel. Designer Watson stated that the cutting away of the hull abaft the rudder post will decrease the load water line about one inch. On board the Defender are the riggers who arrived from Boston yesterday. They are busy overhauling the rigging. They will remain with the yacht until after the races are over.

Time Allowance.

The time allowance which Valkyrie will allow Defender will not be announced until late this evening or tomorrow morning. It is believed that the alterations to the English boat will reduce the first estimate considerably and that only a few seconds will be the difference. The measurements of Defender, which were made just before trial races, and have been carefully guarded by the committee ever since they were taken, are as follows: Load water line length, 89.85 feet; sail area, 12,180 square feet; racing length, 100.10 feet. The yacht therefore is smaller than was expected, and there is no danger that she will exceed the ninety feet which is, according to the deed of gift of the America's Cup, the greatest load water line length allowed. The syndicate owning the boat were not satisfied with that, however, and concluded to make her lighter still, as she was apparently stiff as a house in a heavy blow. The new mast was therefore shipped and a steel boom fitted in the place of the wooden one which had been in use up to the time of the first of the trial races. Besides this the water tank, waste tank, doors, bulkheads and some flooring have been taken out to lighten her still further, and it is confidently expected that her racing measurements will show much improvement.

Both Boats Made Changes.

As the Valkyrie has also made important changes looking to the reduction of time allowance only a rough guess can be made, before the official announcement of the time which will be allowed Defender. As Valkyrie may be a trifle less than ninety feet on the load-water line it is probable that the time allowance may not exceed twenty-five seconds. There is a proviso in the agreement that any excess of load-water line length over eighty-nine feet shall be counted double in estimating time allowance, but as both boats are more than that length they are about equal in that respect.

Little Betting.

There have been very few bets made on the result of the race to-morrow, or on the final outcome. There seems to be no lack of American money, but few are to be found who care to risk on the English boat. Bets that have been made were all with odds in favor of the Defender.

OFF FOR FISHER'S ISLAND.

The North Atlantic Squadron Leaves Boston Harbor.

Boston, Sept. 6.—The cruisers New York, Minneapolis and Raleigh, which have been in the harbor during the last five days, started yesterday for Fisher's island, where drills will be held. The cruisers will be joined at Fisher's island by another section of four vessels, completing a squadron, and the fleet, under command of Acting Rear-Admiral Bunce, will have heavy gun practice and naval brigade drill on shore.

Mill Burned After Four Attempts.

Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Heary & Cummings saw and planing mill was burned yesterday afternoon; loss $10,000; insurance $7,000. This mill was burned some months ago and rebuilt. Since then three unsuccessful attempts had been made to burn it, but a fourth was successful.

To Fill a Vacancy in Congress.

TAKING CHANCES.

WOMEN ARE CARELESS.

They Over-Estimate Their Physical Strength. Advice to Young Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Women are very apt to over-estimate their strength and overtax it.

When they are feeling particularly well, they sometimes take chances which in the long run cause them much pain and trouble. This is due largely to their not fully realizing how delicate their sensitive organism is.

The girl who has just become a woman can hardly be expected to act wisely, everything is so new to her. She, however, should be told; and every woman should realize that to be well her "monthly periods" should be regular. Wet feet, or a cold from exposure, may suppress or render irregular and fearfully painful the menses, and perhaps sow the seed for future ill health.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will ever be the unfailing remedy in such cases as well as all the peculiar ailments of women. Millions of women live to prove this. Mrs. M. L. Verrill tells plainly what it has done for her:—

"I will write you a few lines to tell you what my troubles were before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It was the same old story,—my back and lower part of my abdomen and painful menstruation. Of course it was female weakness. The doctors (I have tried five different ones) called it chronic inflammation of the womb.

"I had leucorrhœa for over eight years, ulcers on the neck of the womb, terrible headaches and backaches. Your medicine completely cured me." — Mrs. M. L. Verrill, 223 Newell Ave., Pawtucket, R.I.

$5800 in Gold Drowned Each Man.

At the burning of a steamboat on the Hudson river forty years ago, many of the passengers were drowned. Among the bodies brought up from the bottom of the river by grappling was that of a man known to have been an excellent swimmer. Around his waist was a belt containing nearly $800 in gold. That told the story.

"In old and chronic cases of indigestion (dyspepsia or gastritis—it is all the same) the sufferer develops a great variety of symptoms and often dies—poisoned by the products of his own torpid and inflamed stomach. His food, instead of being digested, and so furnishing strength and physical substance, ferments and putrefies within him. The chief process of life is arrested at a vital point. The more he eats the worse off he is. And yet unless he can be fed he must also perish. People do so die, daily by thousands, but we doctors seldom have the moral courage to give the cause its true name lest we should be laughed at for our inability to cure so 'simple' a thing as indigestion. Simple? Why, it is the capstone of all complaints—and the mother of most of them."—So writes a famous English physician.

The sufferer's friends often advise him to cheer up; to throw off his lethargy and eat freely. Bad advice. He knows better. "No," he answers, "I cannot; my food does me no good." He is right. Food now is gold in the spent swimmer's belt.

Take light nourishment, followed immediately by a dose of the Shaker Digestive Cordial—a new and radical remedy discovered and prepared by the Shakers of Mt. Lebanon, N. Y.—the essence of medicinal herbs and plants cultivated by them alone. Then continue with it. Relieves at once and soon cures. Pleasant to the palate and adapted to all constitutions. IN THE PATH OF FIRE

Several Jersey Villages in Great Danger.

Forest Fires Now Within a Short Distance of May's Landing—Hundreds of Men Fighting the Flames. The Little Village of Eldora Also in Peril of Destruction.

Mays Landing, N. J., Sept. 6.—Considerable excitement prevails here because of the nearby approach to the north end of this end of the forest fire. The flames are now within half a mile of here and hundreds of men are out fighting the fire. Hundreds of women and children have gathered near the farm of Joseph L. Veal, which it is not likely can be saved. A large number of men have left their work in factories and have gone to protect their homes. If the wind continues in its present course several houses are certain of destruction. The destruction of timber has entailed a heavy loss.

Eldora Threatened.

Cape May, N. J., Sept. 6.—The forest fire which broke out near Tuckahoe on Tuesday is still burning, and the area of blazing timber is now two miles in width. The village of Eldora, which has two small paper mills and about 200 residents, is right in the path of the flames, and can hardly be saved from destruction.

Almost Surrounded by Fire.

Vineland, N. J., Sept. 6.—This place is almost entirely surrounded by the forest fires, and is in great danger. This morning sparks from the fires carried by the wind are falling over the place. In all the surrounding villages the residents are fighting the flames by back firing.

Another Fire Breaks Out.

Egg Harbor City, N. J., Sept. 6.—Another forest fire broke out here last night and is burning savagely, the flames being blown by the wind in the direction of Weymouth, a thriving village a few miles from here.

A YOUTHFUL TRAVELER.

Carl Seemenn, 6 Years Old, on His Way from Mecklenburg.

New York, Sept. 6.—Carl Seemenn, aged 6, arrived here yesterday on his way to Monterey, Cal., from his home in Mechlenburg-Strelitz. He was alone and could speak no English. He was dressed in a suit of blue flannel, carried a neat little cane and wore an up-to-date straw hat. The child is ticketed very much as a case of dry goods would be. On his right arm is sewed a piece of canvass on which is written his name and destination. He has through tickets to Monterey and twenty-five dollars in his purse. Last night he stopped at 24 State street in charge of the manager of the Mission house at that address. He starts on Saturday for Monterey.

GEO. S. PARKER DEAD.

Proprietor of a Well-Known Congressional Faro Bank.

Washington, Sept. 6.—George S. Parker, for a long time the head of a well-known congressional faro bank and gambling club near 14th and Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, and one of the best known men of his class in the United States, is dead of paralysis. He was a man of unassuming manners, of wide acquaintance among public men—a typical representative of the best qualities of the old-time southern sport.

1,000 MILE BICYCLE RIDE.

Shabel Expects To Cover the Distance in 58 Hours.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon Ferdinand Shabel, the long-distance French champion, commenced his 1,000-mile bicycle journey against time on the Island track. He is in perfect condition and expects to ride the first twenty-four hours without dismounting. He started off at a twenty-mile per hour clip, and expects to cover 1,000 miles inside of fifty-three hours, including all stoppages.

WILLIAM'S TRAGIC ACT.

Released from Jail He Killed His Wife and Himself.

York, Pa., Sept. 6.—A double tragedy was enacted at Pleasureville yesterday when William Beaverson, who deserted his wife six months ago and served time in the county jail, was released. He went to the place where his wife was staying and put a bullet through her, resulting in her instant death. He then placed the revolver to his head and killed himself by putting a bullet in his own brain.

Game called at end of sixth inning on account of darkness.

French Expenses in Madagascar.

Paris, Sept. 6.—The Matin announces that the chambers will, upon reassembling, be asked for an additional credit of 50,000,000 francs on account of the Madagascar expedition.

More Gold for Export.

New York, Sept. 6.—W. H. Crossman & Brother say they will withdraw to day $1,000,000 and perhaps $1,500,000 in gold from the sub-treasury for shipment to Europe to-morrow.

Lavigne and Griffo Matched.

New York, Sept. 6.—George Lavigne and young Griffo have arranged to fight within three weeks' time at the Empire Athletic club, in Maspeth, L. I., for a purse of $5,000.

Soldiers and Sailors Monument.

Monticello, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The sailors and soldiers monument was unveiled in the park here yesterday afternoon before of dense crowd of spectators.

Gen. Harmon Leaves for Cincinnati

Washington, Sept. 6.—Attorney General Harmon has gone to Cincinnati. He will return next week.

THE BOMB WAS HARMLESS

But the Paris Rothschilds Are Badly Frightened.

Paris, Sept. 6.—Although the attempt yesterday to explode a bomb in the banking house of the Rothschilds has created the greatest excitement among the officers and employes of that institution, it being the second outrage of a similar nature attempted on the Rothschilds, it has been learned that the bomb used by the anarchist yesterday was comparatively harmless. It was a primitive sort of affair, having been made out of a tin that had contained cocoa. The top was tied on with a piece of wire and a hole had been punched in the tin to admit the fuse. The contents were gunpowder and chlorate of potash, but contained no projectiles.

Looks Like Pawels.

M. Puybaraud, the police official who examined the prisoner, was struck by his resemblance to the anarchist Pawels, who was recently killed by the explosion of a bomb he was carrying with the intention of causing an explosion in the church of the Madeleine. He said he would not be surprised to learn that Pawels and the prisoner were brothers. The prisoner is of medium height. His face is pale and he has an abnormally developed forehead. He is also shaven, except a short mustache. It is supposed that the prisoner is a barber, a razor, brush and soap box having been found in his pockets. Immediately after the detective seized him he drew the razor and attempted to kill himself by cutting his throat. He said he only intended to use the bomb as a protest against the proceedings of the bankers, and that he did not intend to injure any one. Later he indulged in the usual anarchists boasts, declaring that others would succeed where he had failed.

PROBING THE MYSTERY.

Police Make Progress in the Bliss Poisoning Case.

New York, Sept. 6.—The police have discovered and located the little girl who accompanied Gracie Fleming, granddaughter of Mrs. Bliss the poisoned woman, and daughter of Mrs. Fleming, the woman accused of sending the poison, when she took the chowder to her grandmother. Both the children have been closely questioned by the coroner and, it is said, their stories make it very dark for Mrs. Fleming. An investigation of the personal history of the accused has brought out unpleasant disclosures, one relating to a liason she formed when only a girl of 18 with her mother's coachman. She followed him about and wrote letters to him at all times and in her extenuation blamed her surroundings.

INFATUATED WITH IT.

General Harrison Negotiating for Property at Old Forge.

Old Forge, N. Y., Sept. 6.—Gen. Harrison has about made up his mind to spend his summers at this point in the Adirondacks and he is negotiating with Dr. Seward Webb for a number of lots hereabouts. Whether he will build a cottage on First lake or at Big Moose lake has not been decided upon. Some time ago he endeavored to buy the land around Big Moose lake. The property is owned by Dr. Seward Webb and contains about 10,000 acres. Nearby are excellent fishing and hunting grounds. If he cannot get the Big Moose property he will accept lots on First lake. These lots are near Dodd Camp. Gen Harrison has become infatuated with this part of the Adirondacks, and his stay here this summer has done him great good.

THE CZAR IN DANGER.

Police Guarding Him at Every Step Against Nihilists.

Berlin, Sept. 6.—The Lokal Anzeiger's correspondent at St. Petersburg confirms the statement recently published that in consequence of the activity of the nihilists it has been found necessary to guard the czar's every step as completely as the movements of his father, Alexander III., were guarded by the police at the most perilous period of his reign. The czarina, whose accouchment is expected in October, is suffering from extreme nervousness in consequence of the danger threatening the czar.

PETER STYERS DEAD.

The Oldest Engineer in the Country and Never Had an Accident.

Bethlehem, Pa., Sept. 6.—After suffering six months from gangrene Peter Styers, aged 73 years, died yesterday. He was recognized as the oldest engineer in the country and had run locomotives on the Lehigh Valley, Reading and Jersey Central roads for forty-six consecutive years. He never had an accident. Railroaders compute that Styers has run locomotives a distance equivalent to forty times around the globe.

Against Local Option.

Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 6.—The State League of Republican clubs yesterday endorsed the action of the New York police commissioners in enforcing the excise law, and expressed themselves as heartily in favor of preserving the American Sunday. An effort to secure the endorsement of local option failed.

For the Loss of a Hand.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 6.—Mrs. Mary G. Doody of this city will to-day bring suit against the New Haven Street Railway company for $10,000 for the loss of a hand as alleged through the company's negligence.

Sullivan County Fair.

Monticello, N. Y., Sept. 6.—At the Sullivan County Fair grounds yesterday the crowd numbered at least 10,000 people who were attracted there to hear General Palmer, secretary of state, address them on agriculture.

New England Increases Wages.

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 6.—The freight handlers and clerks of the New England railroad in this city and, it is understood, all along the line, have been notified of an increase in wages of 5 per cent.

Valuable Horse Shot.

St. Louis, Sept. 6.—Fandago, a $5,000 3-year-old and winner of the Tennessee derby at Memphis, was shot yesterday to save him from a lingering death from disease.

New Swimming Record.

Glasgow, Sept. 6.—Martin yesterday swam one hundred yards in one minute, seventeen and one-fifth seconds, beating the record for the distance.

CHILDREN FOR CANADA

Three Hundred Orphans To Sail from Liverpool.

Another Consignment from Dr. Barnardo's Home for Waifs—One of the Greatest of English Charities. How It Originated and What It Has Spread To.

London, Sept. 6.—One hundred and forty-five boys and 156 girls from Dr. Barnardo's Home for Orphan and Waif Children started last evening from Liverpool for Canada where homes have been or will be found for them. Dr. Barnardo's homes constitute one of the greatest of English charities. The work was begun in 1866 by Dr. Barnardo, at that time a young medical student attached to the London hospital. His attension was especially attracted to the condition of homeless children throughout London by the pitiable story of a young waif in a ragged school. On his own responsibility he opened a small house in Stepney Causeway, and the pressing need of some such effort was soon evidenced by the numerous applications which began to flow in.

Enlarged Year by Year.

Year by year the homes have been extended and multiplied and their scope has been correspondingly enlarged. From the first the central principle has been that no destitute child, boy or girl, shall be refused admission, irrespective of age, creed, nationality or physical defects. At present the homes, including an adult and evangelistic mission branch, comprise 51 distinct institutions, of which 36 are situated in London, 1 on the Island of Jersey, 9 in the English counties, 1 in Scotland and 3 in Canada. There are 1,000 inmates in the village home at Ilford, Essex, which contains 52 detached cottages and is solely devoted to the up-bringing of girls on the family system, under "mothers."

Many Sent to Canada.

The boys are reared in branch homes according to age or boarded out in rural districts under the supervision of local committees and of lady visitors. About 1,500 boys and girls are now so boarded out. Industrial training is imparted to the older boys in the homes, fourteen different trades being taught in the shops at the Stepney Causeway. An emigration agency furnishes an important adjunct to the work. After training, many of the boys and girls are placed out in situations throughout the United Kingdom; but every year some 500 selected inmates, who have proved themselves honest and industrious, are sent to the colonies, chiefly to Canada, where two distributing homes in Ontario are now in operation. An industrial farm of 10,000 acres in Manitoba has also been acquired.

More Than 25,000 Cared For.

This is now being developed by older lads sent out from a special home, the Youths' Labor house, which is open to lads over seventeen years of age. Over 7,000 boys and girls have by this means been placed in colonial situations, and of these 98 per cent. have proved successful. More than 25,000 children of all ages, from babies in arms to the threshold of adultage have passed through the homes. Experienced agents are at work day and night in the slums searching for and rescuing homeless children from the common lodging houses and the streets. Close upon 5,000 boys and girls are now in residence in the English homes, and fresh cases are being admitted at the rate of from fifty to sixty per week.

WAS HER HUSBAND SO BRUTAL?

Mrs. Duval, Wife of a New York Broker, Seeks a Divorce.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 6.—The Duval divorce case, which was heard by the late Vice-Chancellor Green and not finished, was continued in chancery chambers in this city yesterday before Vice-Chancellor Reed. Mrs. Duval wants a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. The Duvals resided at Atlantic Highlands and are well known there. The defendant is a New York broker. Mrs. Duval, the plaintiff, was on the stand and testified that her husband brutally beat her and tried to smother her with a pillow in 1892. Mr. Duval claims that his wife is of unsound mind and is not responsible for the charges she makes.

KU-CHENG INVESTIGATION.

Proceeding Satisfactorily—A Number of Convictions Made.

Shanghai, Sept. 6.—The inquiry into the massacre at Ku-Cheng is proceeding to the satisfaction of the American and British consuls. There have been a number of important convictions. Among those condemned are some of the ringleaders of the riot.

Contract for a New $100,000 Mill.

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 6.—The Glenark Knitting company has decided not to await the outcome of the request for exemption from taxes, but awarded the contract for building the new yarn mill in this city which will cost nearly $100,000. The mill is expected to be in operation in the spring.

Ex-State Senator Gibbs Married.

New York, Sept. 6.—Trinity chapel presented a brilliant scene last evening at 8 o'clock when the marriage was celebrated of Miss Daisy Virginia Meade, only child of ex-Police Justice Clarence W. Meade, to ex-State Senator Frederick S. Gibbs.

Smith Convicted of Murder.

Albany, Sept. 6.—In the extraordinary oyer and terminer designated by Gov. Morton to try the three alleged Albany county murderers, Spain, Davis and Smith, the latter was yesterday found guilty of murder in the first degree.

Admitted as Naval Cadets.

The Republicans are doing most of the talking in a political way now-a-days.

Elizabeth actually has a public official who has refused an increase of salary.—Plainfield Press.

That is easily explained. He is a Democrat, a friend Press. No Republican would be guilty of such a thing, we admit.—Elizabeth Herald-Democrat.

There seems to be a disposition among certain Republican newspapers to ridicule the candidacy of Hon. Augustus W. Cutler. In our opinion Mr. Cutler is about the most formidable candidate the Democrats could name and his strength should not be underestimated.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The statements made by a local liquor dealer to a Daily Press reporter last night, as recorded in the news columns of the paper, are, indeed, startling, if true. A crusade of licensed liquor dealers against unlicensed will be a novel movement, and if carried out as intended may become sort of a dog-eat-dog affair.

The impression gains ground that there will be no international money conference and consequently, that there will be no independent action by the United States relative to the fixing of the ratio between the two metals used as currency. News comes from Berlin that owing to the recent declaration of Mr. Balfour indicating the improbality of such a conference the German government is reconsidering its plan and it is now expected that the result of its deliberations will be adverse to the movement. This would seem to settle the question, for without the co-operation of England and Germany, international action is regarded as absolutely impracticable. —Trenton True American.

"Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue" with the wide-awake editors of the Plainfield dailies. The News complains about the filching tactics of the New Brunswick Home News in appropriating editorials from it without credit, and The Daily Press has the same complaint against the New Brunswick Times. "New Brunswick evidently has editors who are editors only because they have gall and scissors," is the very incisive comment of The Press, which comes none too sharply nor too soon. Laziness is not admirable, even in hot weather; but when it makes pretense of industry by stealing the work of the toiler, it is entitled to no toleration, and ought to be pilloried oftener that it is.—Clinton Democrat.

The progress of the ordinance looking to the extension of the street railway in this city is one of the most important acts of the Common Council in years. This extension matter has been hanging fire so long that it became a bane to every man who desired Plainfield to grow as it should and will with the electric cars permeating its thoroughfares. As the trolley road in Plainfield is today no one receives benefit sufficient to call it a benefit—it is merely an aggravation that we have not more of it. But the advancement of the ordinance, published elsewhere in the Daily Press of today, by the Common Council last night, and the announcement that the railway officials agree to its provisions, is something that looks like business. The work of making the extension as soon as the Council grants the franchise, which it seems probable will be done in a short time, cannot be commenced too soon. The benefits to be derived from its completion are manifold, and Plainfielders may well congratulate themselves on the bright outlook.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

One Plainfield Crack Left.

The tournament at South Orange was continued yesterday and Walz and Ryder were defeated in the play off of the match with the Miles Brothers. The latter had only one game to win which they did before the Plainfield boys had a chance to get into trim. T. U. Smith was defeated in the second round for the consolation singles by John Hobart, 6-0, 6-1, a very close set despite the score, every game being deuce. H. V. Ryder lost one set to Forbes and stopped the next at 3-3 on account of darkness. He finished today.

Prices Will Be Right.

Women in this city who have been desirous of securing first-class peaches will miss the chance of their life if they do not call at J. A. Smith & Bro.'s grocery at 125 West Front street tomorrow, for they will receive the largest assortment of the choice fruit that has arrived this season. Of course the prices will suit everybody, and all that remains is but to call and buy.

There Are Others.

Don't think because Newman Brothers only advertise their peaches that they are the only kind of fruit they have. Not by a good deal. Go tomorrow and examine their stock. Jersey melons, sweet potatoes, pears, everything that is in season, and the best of it too.

The benefits from the extension of the trolley are like the articles to be sold at an auction, too numerous to mention.

HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

Marsden a copy of Mr. Gavett's report and instruct him that the Council would take proceedings if the work was not pushed faster.

Mr. Marsden was present and stated that he could and would get the work done. That he had one gang of men now at work but expected another gang in a few days. He said that 1,900 feet of pipe had been laid, leaving 6,500 feet yet to be put down. There was no reason to fear that the work would not be done.

Mr. Fisk then presented the street railway matter, offering a map of routes to be filed. He also offered an ordinance, that will be found in another column, in regard to the proposed extension.

The ordinance was adopted on its first and second readings and ordered engrossed and duly advertised. It is the intention of Mr. Fisk, after two years of hard work, to put the extensions through this fall, which the company is willing to do. The ordinance will probably be adopted on third reading at the next meeting Monday evening, September 23d. Street Commissioner Meeker then reported through Councilman Fisk on a steam roller. He stated that after a thorough examination of the principal rollers he thought the Springfield, Ohio, roller made by Kelly & Co., was the best and suited to Plainfield. Mr. Fisk then offered a resolution that the Finance Committee be authorized to purchase the roller at the lowest figure and that they arrange for the extension of time on the payments for the same. It was so ordered.

Mr. Westphal called for the Sunday closing ordinance and moved that it be adopted on its third reading which was so ordered. The ordinance granting Mrs. Conneeley permission to conduct the liquor business formerly owned by her husband, now deceased, was called for by Mr. Moore, and on his motion was adopted on third reading. This gives Mrs. Conneeley the priviledge till the expiration of the license.

After Mr. Frazee reported the bills correct the council adjourned till Monday evening, September 23d.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH NOTES.

Items Concerning a Busy and Growing Congregation.

There was a large turn out on Wednesday night at the Methodist Love Feast. This energetic congregation is preparing for a season of revival meetings.

The Ladies Aid Society meet on Tuesday to organize for the fall and winter work. They are planning to give the friends of the church a series of delightful social meetings.

Next Wednesday night the praying meeting will be conducted by the Epworth League of the church. All the members are urged to be present.

Sunday morning, September 8th, will be a rallying occasion. Probationers will be received and several members by letter from other churches.

The Sunday school service will return to afternoon sessions on Sunday, September 15th.

The pastor is continuing his series of sermons on the Lord's Prayer which was interrupted by his being called away in July. Next Sunday morning he will discuss the fourth petition.

The Merry World.

The wonderful lead which Canary & Lederer's big burlesque, "The Merry World," is maintaining at the New York Casino, has been patent to the casual beholder during the past week by the repeated displays of the standing room sign in the lobby of that popular theatre. The prosperity of the attraction has perhaps been largely quickened by that exhilaration which a promising new-born season always incites. "The Merry World" is indeed profiting liberally on the patronage with which the influx of returning summer strollers are felicitating metropolitan managements.

A Golden Opportunity.

Plainfield housewives will have a golden opportunity tomorrow to purchase the finest peaches the market affords. J. A. Smith & Bro., the grocers of 125 West Front street, will receive the largest shipment of this favorite fruit thus far recorded. The prices will be all right and everyone will be satisfied.

—Special sale of school supplies at Harpers. See ad.

—Rev. B. W. Hand will preach at the Liberty Street mission this evening.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SAMUEL DALLY'S WILL FILED.

No Provision for the Widow, But She Gets Dower Rights.

New Brunswick, Sept. 5.—The will of the late Samuel Dally, of Woodbridge, who left a fortune to William Dally, his grandson of Plainfield has been filed with Surrogate Furman. Mr. Daily has been estimated to be worth about $500,000. The will was dated Dec. 22, 1887, and was witnessed by Warren Drummond and Charles Drake, of Woodbridge.

Mr. Daily figuered before the public during the past four years owing to his family relations. Upon the death of his first wife he married again. His second wife was a young woman. Soon afterwards his children made application to have a commission appointed to inquire into his sanity. They adjudged the man sane. A second commission was secured by the family, and this time the man was adjudged insane, and a guardian was appointed.

The will which Mr. Dally left was dated previous to the time that he was adjudged insane. In it he leaves his valuable city lands to his daughters and their children. The will provides for the sale of his property, and contains a clause providing that if any of the heirs protest against the will they shall get nothing of the estate. It does not make any provision for the widow, but she will be entitled to her dower right, which is one-third of the income from the real estate. The executors are Ephraim Cutter and Charles W. Drummond.

Enjoyment at Hyde's Grove.

The last of a series of three picnics of the German Lutheran church was held in Hyde's Grove yesterday. The day was spent very enjoyably in games and other amusements while the most enjoyable part of all picnics, the refreshments, occupied an important place in the proceedings. The fish pond was very successful in furnishing enjoyment. About fifty were present and there is $17 profit in the treasury as a result of the three picnics. The committee in charge was Miss Schmidt, Mrs. Hummel and Miss Daumling.

Work Begun.

The contracts have been awarded for the Powlison & Jones building and ground was broken this morning. C. W. Lines, of this city, was given the mason work, the carpenter work is to be done by Charles M. Wilson, of this city, and the contract for the iron work taken by Peter Wilks, of Trenton. The cost of the new building is estimated at about $22,000, and it is expected that the building will be finished by March.

The Misses French Entertains.

A very pleasant time was spent last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French on Craig place when their daughters, the Misses Maude and Edna French, entertained a few intimate friends. Games were played chiefly, after which refreshments were served. Those present were Bessie Valiant, Nellie Valiant and Ethel King.

Seventeen New Members.

There was a general meeting of the congregation of the German Lutheran church Wednesday evening and fourteen new members joined the church, making a total of about seventy. Messrs. Eber and Yaeger were elected trustees.

A Novel Gathering.

A corn roast was given at the home of Nathan Randolph, of Park avenue, last evening. A most enjoyable evening was spent and all present declared the corn roast as the best of all social gatherings.

Republican Primary.

The North Plainfield Republican primaries will be held Saturday evening, September 14th, at eight o'clock, in the basement of the North Plainfield school house.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Marshal Wm. Wilson, of the borough, now rides a wheel.

O. S. Bunnell will hold his next night meet at the Tioga track, Philadelphia, on next Monday evening.

A bicycle built for three passed through Plainfield this morning, propelled by two men and one woman.

Wm. Townley has decided to ride a 86 gear the rest of the season. It will be the only one in town off the track.

Charles Lister has a novelty in a cycle lamp that is bound to be a success. It weighs nine ounces and will burn any kind of oil. It is an ornament to any wheel.

Benj. R. Force and J. VanEps returned Wednesday afternoon from their cycling trip to Philadelphia. They started last Sunday and have enjoyed themselves all the way.

Miss Eleanor Williams, of West Seventh street, is entertaining her friends with rides on a Wolfe American duplex, the latest thing in cycling, where the two riders ride side by side.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—It is likely that the Watchung avenue extension will be finally acted upon this evening by the Borough Council.

—The W. C. T. U. will hold their annual all-day meeting Thursday, October 31st, in their rooms on Watchung avenue.

—The hind wheel of a coal wagon belonging to DeWitt C. Ivins & Co., was dished in the car tracks on West Front street near Liberty street this morning. The coal had to be taken away in another wagon and the damaged one repaired.

—E. Leroy Meyer, of Cartier's Dancing School of Fourteenth street, New York, will open a dancing school in this city on Tuesday of next week. Mr. Meyer had charge of the dancing at the Coleman house last winter. His ad appears in The Press.

—The appointment by Judge Rice, of Middlesex county, of witnesses to the hanging of Joseph Aragio and Anello Spina, the Italians who murdered Antonio Prisco, a New York padrone, has created no little interest. This will be the first hanging that has occurred in that county in twenty years. It is probable that some of the witnesses will decline their task.

—George O. Stevens keeps a coal yard at 747 West Front street and the coal yard at 747 West Front street keeps George O. Stevens.

DOROTHY'S DRIVE.

The contest raged in South Bilkshire with a fury unparalleled even in that sturdy English constitnency. The Tories did not want to fight; but, by Jingo, if they did—! and the Radicals of Rottenham had for years only wanted a man to lead them. They had now found him in Mr. Jeremiah Clink, of Sharpus & Clink, solicitors. His firm had long acted for one of the leading "trade protective societies" in Rottenham, which gave him power in quarters where he wanted popularity, and with the rest of the constituency his success surprised every one, including himself.

Having cultivated mustard and cress from boyhood, first on his sponge, and subsequently in an old chocolate box, and having recently developed a pear tree and a potato patch in his back garden, he posed as an authority in matters agricultural, and promised more in the name of his party than any candidate had ever promised before. The agricultural laborer was attracted by what he understood to be the prospect of free land for the asking: and Rottenhamites, who had been contented with six geraniums in flower pots and a tom cat, now dreamed of acres of fertile soil, tenanted by the contemplative cow and the prolific—or, as a local speaker phrased it, "profligate"—pig.

Sir George Redworthy, who had represented the constituency in the Conservative interest for fifteen years, felt that that he had his work cut out, and he buckled to like a man. It was annoying to be interrupted at such a time by domestic questions; but love, which laughs at locksmiths, jeers at politicians, and his eldest son and Miss Dorothy Ditchford, the rector's daughter, selected the morning of the nomination day for informing him that they had resolved to become man and wife at an early date, subject to his consent.

Needless to say Dick Redworthy met with a very unpleasant reception when he broached the subject in the library after breakfast, and that Dolly Ditchford entered it an hour later to see what she could do.

She was a great favorite with the old gentleman, but he had never before regarded her in the light of a future daughter-in-law. Time flies, and he had always thought her a child. After ten minutes' talk with her he knew that if she was only just out of her teens she was a child no longer.

"Well, my little girl," he said good humoredly, "if I get in again, and the party are in power, I dare say I can get them to give Dick something to keep him going till I am under the daisies. I never asked them for anything before."

"But suppose they don't get in," said Dolly, ruefully.

"Well, you'll have to wait; but mind, I can't have any engagement till the election is over. Meanwhile, you make everyone in the parish vote right, and you'll have done your best to help, eh? They won't be able to say 'No' to you. My agent tells me I shall only win by a few, if at all;" and Sir George took up his pen. Dolly went to the door, hesitated and came back.

"Sir George," she said shyly, "if you get into Parliament, may we be engaged, anyhow?"

"Bless my soul," said Sir George, looking up, "if I keep my seat, though, I don't know what I won't consent to; if I lose it I advise Dick and everybody else to keep clear of me for a bit."

If was a tug-of-war with a vengeance and there were many interests to be considered. "Sir George's ticket at the Army and Navy Stores is Number ——" was the placard which met the worthy baronet one day in Rottenham, borne by a dozen sandwich men, with all the small tradesmen rushing to their doors to look at it. "Ask Mrs. Clink where she got her red silk stockings" was the counterblast which brought matters level. Dorothy Ditchford had met the Radical candidate's wife in the hosiery department at the stores a few days after it war known that Mr. Clink would stand, and that scarlet would be his color, and Dorothy had an observant eye. Her own blue and orange hat was a dream, worked out under her own directions by a Rottenham modiste.

It was in the window for three days, and she saw herself distantly reflected by the belles of Rottenham at every turn. When she had done the parish she went further afield, and the Rectory pair did some hard trotting in those few fleeting days. "They all say they think they'll vote for your father if I'll drive them to the poll. Some of them can't walk, poor old things," said Dorothy; and she lined the family wagonette with brown holland and decked it with blue and yellow, while the horses' blinkers could not be seen for ribbons. They were a sober pair of nags, but with her on the box they did wonders on the great day. The effort, however, was reserved for the evening, when the men got home from work.

"Shall we be there by 8?" asked Dorothy, as Dick Redworthy dashed past her in his dog cart, nearly swinging two of his father's stanchest supporters into space as they turned into the Rottenham road. "We've got a grand load—nine votes, seven of whom I thought were going the other way."

"I don't know that there's much hurry, miss," said the old man who was standing behind her—he was Sir George's head keeper. "Bill Stumps says this lot's wrong 'uns all through, and I reckon he's right."

"Wrong 'uns?"

"Yes, miss. They've got the Squire's colors on to get you to drive them to the poll. That's their little joke, that is," said old Harry Blackwater, grimly: and Bill Stumps, the under keeper, nudged him and told him not to make a row. But the men behind were all singing a patriotic song loudly and merrily. Miss Ditchford thought she caught a few words in it which were not in the original when she composed it.

"I won't drive them," she said, between her set teeth, "I'll up.

"Better be careful, Miss; they're a desprit lot, and there's only two of us," said Bill Stumps.

Dorothy set her lips; she was not in the habit of feeling afraid.

"Ain't there any ancient water to be collected up Deadman's Hill way, miss?" whispered Bill Stumps, with a grin.

Dorothy laughed too; round went the horses into a narrow lane, and up an incline dignified by the name of hill.

"Hi, miss! you're going the wrong way," cried John Bradds behind her. He was a cobbler from Clay lane, and a Radical as she thought till she found him waiting to be taken to the poll with a blue-and-orange rosette in his hat.

"You're going wrong! Turn around or we'll be late!" cried some one else.

"Can't turn," said Dorothy, decisively, glancing at the hedges on both sides of her. Presently the road got wider, and she had to acknowledge she could turn.

"Tip the whole cartload into the ditch, miss," whispered Bill Stumps; "I'll take care o' you."

But she reflected that the hedge was low and the field beyond flinty, and to turn a van load of poachers out in cold blood was one thing; but when it included rolling with them, even in the protecting grasp of tobaccoey Bill Stumps, it looked an unpleasant prospect. And she drove back into the Rottenham road, thinking with satisfaction as she glanced at the tiny watch in the bangle which Dick had given her that morning, that five minutes were gone, and it was 7:45, and a good mile from the polling station.

They were shouting to her to hurry up, led by John Bradds, the cobbler, and Bill Stumps and the head keeper were turning round to face the angry men in the wagonette. She was glad she had allowed no one on the box beside her. The hedge was soft and green. Would an upset hurt her very much? There was a good deal of holly just there. But the question was not left entirely for her to settle. What was it coming up behind? There was a Radical horse dealer at Rottenham (a 'coper' Dick Redworthy called him), whom Sir George had once fined for an assault. He had been taking voters to the poll all day in his biggest four-horse brake.

Up it came, brimful, at a furious pace behind her, with Mr. Crookinger himself on the box.

"Out of the way there," he shouted, while those behind him jeered and hooted at St. George's colors.

"You've plenty of room," said Dolly to herself, and she did not give way an inch.

"Out of the way!" they yelled.

"Stick to it, miss," whispered old Harry Blackwater, and Bill Stumps grinned from ear to ear.

She says she did not pull to the right, but some of them say she did; and she certainly looked round as the leaders came up; but she kept her pair back, and they had not been doing more than a steady six miles an hour for at least 300 yards when Mr. Crookinger let his horses go with a curse. There was a grinding crash, and in the next second Dorothy Ditchford was looking as distinguished as she could in the middle of a privet bush, hoping that the horses were not going to kick, and that her father's carriage was not injured. It had two wheels in the ditch, and the other two were spinning round aimlessly clear of the ground.

"I'm afraid they were in time," she said to Dick Redworthy five minutes later, when he picked her up with his dog-cart. "They had ten to it in, according to my watch."

"Then I'll lay against them, Dollie," he said. "I put that little watch five minutes slow just before I gave it to you, to keep you longer with me."

"Oh, Dick!" she said, "how could you?"

And she said "Oh, Dick?" again next morning when he galloped up to the rectory to say that Mr. Crookinger's brake had driven up the night before at exactly 30 seconds past 8, and that the poll had been declared with a majority of twenty-three in Sir George's favor; and she added:

"There were twenty at least in the big brake, and I had seven of them in the wagonette."

So the engagement was announced that day.—St. James' Budget.

His First Dispatch.

When the electric telegraph was a new thing its operations were a complete astonishment to many thousands of people who, if they had heard it talked about had scarcely heeded what they heard. Many were incredulous and refused to believe that messages had been sent by wire even when the messages were in their hands. Such exclamations as these were common:

"That a message from my son John? I know better. That isn't John's handwriting."

Even well-informed people were astonished at the invention. Mr. Joseph Jefferson, the comedian, has lately told the story of his first telegraphic message.

"I received it in Cumberland, Md.," he says. "I could not believe it, but there it was—a reply to my letter of the day before. I called at the office to inquire if it were really so.

"A group of people had collected about the operator, all wearing a look of surprise and incredulity. We began showing one another our dispatches, and looking with awe at the mysterious little machine that was ticking away as if worked by some spirit of the other world.

"The whole town was excited. If I were now to receive a message from the planet Mars I could not be more astonished than I was on that day."—Youth's Companion.

Purity in Politics.

Being certain pages from the life and strange adventures of Sir Nicolas Steele Bart. as related by his valet Hildebrand Bigg.

IV.

"Good God," said I, half aloud, in spite of myself, "what are you doing in there," and then, as I'm a man, I began to tremble. But Jim had already turned on me.

"Bigg," cried he, "you're playing me double. What's Nicolas Steele doing in there?"

"Ask me another," said I, "it's a thing I can't tell you."

"But I can," said he, and he was angry, too; 'he's gone to get Grey out and claim the money."

"Jim, shut your mouth," said I, "and don't make him out the biggest fool alive."

"You're playing me false," cried he, raising his voice sillily.

"No such thing," said I, "and look here, I'll prove it. I'm going in after him."

"You are?" exclaimed he, "then I'll say 'good-evening' to you."

"Jim," said I, "don't you see it may be a matter of life or death with him? Help me in this and I'll give you another hundred."

"Help you—how can I help you?"

"I'll tell you in a word. Run into the beer-shop there and bring all the men you can find to these leads. Promise them twenty francs apiece to shout when I call to them. They'll do it quick enough if you say the police are with us on the other side."

"But you, yourself?"

"I'm going to throw these steps across the gap there, and force that window. After that, I'm trusting to bluff."

"You take your life in your hands," said he.

"Don't you trouble about that. You get the men. Quick's the word for this job."

He didn't wait for any more, but tumbled down to the shed again, and when I'd waited five minutes and had seen him come out with half-a-dozen loafers at his tails, I dragged the steps up to the wall, and then used them to bridge the gap which lay between the little window and myself. Luckily, the sill was old and broad; and though the window itself was not more than three feet square, it was unbarred. At any other time, I might have been a bit giddy clambering across that gap, for there was a drop of near twenty feet below me, but there were too many things running in my head to let me think of that, and half a minute hadn't gone before I'd forced the window with my pocket-knife and dropped into a narrow passage on the second floor of the Maison d'Or.

Ten seconds, perhaps, I stood to assure myself that I was all right. Then I drew my revolver and putting it to the full cock, I began to look about me. It was plain in a minute that I was in a passage with doors opening down one side of it. The glimmer of a light showed at the far end; but elsewhere it was all dark, and what was more, strangely silent. The air itself was heavy, like the air of a bakehouse. I had to gasp for my breath; there was a choking sensation in my throat which nearly made me faint. Stinking fumes, like the fumes of stale opium, filled all the corridors and seemed to exude the rooms. I staggered under the power of them, and had to bite my lips to prevent myself coughing.

So far as furniture went, there was little that I could see in the passage. A heavy carpet was soft to the feet, and thick curtains, made of some soft stuff, were hung over the openings to the doors. Yet what appeared more curious than anything was the queer silence in the place. While I stood there, half-choking for my breath, and half-hidden behind one of the thickest of the curtains, I didn't hear so much as the creak of a door or the fall of a foot. The house might have been a dead-house with spectres for tenants.

You may ask me, fairly enough, what I had meant to do when I crossed the gap and forced my way into this queer place. I can only answer that I know no more than the dead. What I did was done on impulse. It was only when I stood in the passage and heard my heart beating like a machine that I began to think what a fool I had made of myself. And I must have stood there five minutes, afraid to go on, afraid to go back, when all of a sudden some one else decided for me. A door opened not two yards away, and out walked Sir Nicolas Steele and a little Frenchman. They were talking together angrily; and they went straight down the passage and turned the corner where the light was.

Though the door of the room from which they had come had only been open for a moment, I had seen a sight strange enough to have upset a stronger man than me. In a great Eastern-like room, all lit up with queer-colored lanterns, and having a fountain of water splashing in the middle of it, some twenty men were lying on little beds. Most of them looked to me to be dead with sleep, but one was raving, with his face buried in his pillow, while another seemed to be crawling on his hands and knees to the water which bubbled under the dome. The door was only open a second, as I say, but the view behind it gave me a shiver, and the shiver was still on me when, treading like a cat, I followed my master down the passage and came within a yard of him at the corner of it.

I was now near by the light, but curtains, hung crosswise in the passage, hid me well enough. I could see from my place that Sir Nicolas was arguing with the Frenchman at the top of a little flight of iron stairs. When they had talked for about a minute the Frenchee pointed to a door at the bottom of the flight, and my master made a step downwards as though to reach the door. But his foot was hardly on the stairs when something happened which sent me as stiff as a corpse, and drew from me a cry which might have come from a madman. The stairs which I had seen a minute before, I saw no longer. They had swung away under my master's touch, and with another cry joined to mine, he went headlong down to a black hole below.

What happened in the next few minutes I can hardly tell. I remember, perfectly, that the Frenchman stood for a minute glaring at me, and hissing words between his teeth. Then he pressed a knob on the railings at his side, and the staircase swung back into its place again.

So astonished was I to see what he did that I never thought of the danger to myself; and before I knew where I was he had gripped me, and we went rolling over and over on the floor together. Strong man as I am, I don't think that I've ever been so near to death as I was that night. Now up, now down, with the cold sweat on my forehead, and the devil's fingers tearing the flesh out of my neck. I halloaed to Jim to help me and fought the Frenchman through. When I had done with him at last, I was covered with blood—but it was Jim who pulled me to my feet, Jim and Michel Grey, who stood, half dressed, and half-drunk, with two gendarmes in the passage.

The noise and din which followed this business is not to be described by any man like me. While I stood half-blinded, and with roaring sounds in my ears, gendarmes seemed to be filling all the Maison d'Or. But I had wits enough about me to think of what might be, and the first words I spoke were to Jim.

"God knows whether he is alive or dead," said I, and with that I hallooed to the gendarmes and showed them the swinging staircase. Five minutes after, we were down in a filthy cellar in the bottom of the house, standing over the motionless body of my master. But his groans told us that he lived, and when lights were brought we knew to what he owed his life. He had fallen on the dead body of another victim of the Maison d'Or.

* * * * * * * *

Well, that's the story of the phantom staircase, though there are some things left you might like to know. How did Sir Nicolas Steele come to the shop, for instance? Why, it appeared that after they'd got Grey into the house, which was one of the largest and one of the lowest dens in Paris, they'd kept him drunk with the drug, in the hope that he'd add money to what they'd robbed him of. On the day Jim and I set out for the cabaret, Grey had sent a messenger down to the Hotel de Lille to get some of his traps and things Sir Nicolas came across this messenger and bribed the whole tale out of him. After that he didn't want to lose a minute tracing the man, and he went straight off to Montmartre, leaving word at the police station of what he'd done. The police had long been watching the shop, and when they heard that an Englishman was going there, they sent gendarmes after him—and lucky, too, or this story would not have been written.

How Sir Nicolas was so foolish as to stand between us and the chance of a reward, I only learned when he came to consciousness, nine days after we took him off the dead man's body in the cellar.

"And didn't I begin to be afraid of the whole thing," said he; "sure, the police were watching me night and day as if I was a murderer Reward, or no reward, I was glad to have done with it."

And that was the truth, though old Jonathan Grey, after he'd heard what the police had to say, paid over every shilling of the money he'd promised. What's more, he gave me a hundred more for myself. But he was out of Paris while my master lay unconscious on his bed; and though Dora Grey cried enough for three, her studies in painting closed on the spot.

"AN EXTRA HUNDRED FOR MYSELF."

The Maison d'Or is pulled down now. The city people took it last year for a new road they were making. I've no doubt myself that many a good man walked down those stairs to his death. A more cunning trap you couldn't find. We proved, when we went up some days after the thing happened, that the whole flight of steps swung on a hinge at the top. It was caught at the bottom by a bit of the landing which projected, and which a spring held in its place. And it was a better weapon for a rogue than any knife or pistol.

(The end.)

HANDLING BOA CONSTRICTORS.

The Trick by Which the Serpents Are Managed Without Danger.

Snake dealers in South America have a fine contempt for their squirming and venomous wares, though it is sometimes difficult to induce ship captains to carry them as freight.

The snake dealers handle the boa constrictor with great deftness. This serpent bites, but its bite is not venomous, so that the chief danger to the handler is from the serpent's enormously powerful muscles. The dealers have learned that the boa, to be really dangerous, must have a fulcrum in the shape of something around which he may coil his tail.

The boa is, in fact, a lever in which the ordinary arrangement is power, weight, fulcrum. Knowing this, the dealers drop a soft hat over his head, that he may neither see nor bite, and then snatch him so suddenly from his resting-place that he has no opportunity to brace himself by seizing a fixed object with his tail. After that the essential thing is to see that he is not brought within distance of any such object.

A snake dealer on board a Brazilian steamer the other day was occupied in transferring his boas from one box to another. He opened the box an instant, dropped a hat over the head of one of the creatures, snatched it from its fellows, and, rushing across the deck, dropped it into the other box. The thing looked so easy that a deck hand, waiting until the snake owner's back was turned, essayed to repeat the act. He neglected to use the hat, and with a yell yanked a great snake from the box with its fangs fixed in his fingers. Not daring to let go, yet fearing to hold on, he began whirling the snake about his head, meanwhile dancing wildly over the deck.

The snakeman managed to capture the reptile and box it in security. Then somebody expressed concern for the rash deck hand, to which the snake owner answered:

"What, him? He's all right! But think of my snake! He's worth twenty of that mug!"

ALMOST BACK TO LIFE.

An Encouraging Test on the Day Following the Drowning of a Boy.

The Cleveland Leader says that at Heffron's undertaking rooms an effort was made recently to bring back to life Louis Fisher, aged 9 years, who was drowned in the lake on the previous afternoon.

Dr. Whitney, a physician living on Wilson avenue, claims that he himself was drowned at one period of his life, and after being dead more than an hour animation was, by a certain method, restored. Dr. Whitney has for some time desired to put this process to another test, but never availed himself of the opportunity until yesterday. His theory is that a corpse can be resuscitated, providing there are no internal injuries, by placing the entire body, except the eyes, nose and mouth, in a bath of water heated to a constant temperature of 110 degrees Fahrenheit, and leaving it there for at least five hours.

An ordinary bathtub was used yesterday. When the water had reached the proper temperature, Dr. Whitney and his assistants carefully deposited the body in the tub.

It was then almost eleven o'clock in the morning, and from that time until four o'clock, when the experiment was given up, the condition of the corpse was studiously watched by Dr. Whitney.

Although the experiment was a failure, at times the blood was started to circulate, and the face and lips assumed their natural color. It is said that the heart was felt to throb several times. When the test was over Dr. Whitney claimed it was not successful because the boy's body was rolled over a barrel after the drowning, thus causing internal injuries.

A Nose for News.

Just before reaching the North Carolina line I came upon a squatter's cabin, with the squatter himself smoking his pipe at the door, and when I turned in to ask him for a gourd of spring water he cheerily called out:

"Howdy, stranger; what's the news?"

"Well, it looks like war in Europe," I answered, as I sat down beside him.

"I don't keer nuthin' 'bout Yurup—what else?" he replied.

"They think think the cholera may reach us this year."

"Dod rot the chalera! Ain't there nuthin' more?"

"Perhaps you have heard about the great coal mine disaster in England?" I asked.

"No, and I don't wanter."

"But you asked for news."

"Sartin I did, and I want news. I wanter know if the price of terbacker has riz. I wanter know what moonshine whisky is wuth down in Knoxville. I wanter know if you'n has met up with anybody who has killed one o' them dodrotted revenew fellers lately. I wanter know why in sin the owner of this ornery patch o' land don't come down yere and drive me off and rouse up my pestiferous ambition to get a move on me! If you've got that sort o' news, stranger, spit 'er out and make me happy. If you hain't, why, jog along to Bill White's place, and leave me suck this old pipe and keep on with my thinkin'!"—Detroit Free Press.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 5, 1895.

AN ORDINANCE

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and also concerning the compensation to be paid by said Plainfield Street Railway Company to the City of Plainfield.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield:

1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue through Watchung avenue to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at Netherwood. Also from Watchung ave., through 4th street to Grant ave.

2. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue through Front street to the city line at Dunellen.

And in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city Sept. 5, 1895, entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turn-outs, poles, etc., of Plainfield Street Railway Company's extension, dated, Sept. 5, 1895", to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance; and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys under and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to; the same being such restrictions and regulations as the common council hereby deem requisite for the public interests, as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may be hereafter enacted by said common council. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the City Clerk by said company, and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Sec. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of the street, and shall construct the tracks, switches, turnouts and poles in the manner and at the points and places indicated for the same on said map.

Provided that the committee on streets have to determine the length and location on the turnout on Watchung avenue near North avenue, and also have power to locate the track of said railroad on the East side of Watchung avenue from present terminus to and beyond the railroad bridge if said committee deem such location best for all interested.

Sec. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets, the paving or other surface materials of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double tracks or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks" shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of a street, the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's tracks and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervision of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinabove specified may be done or made by or under the direction of said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repair, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Sec. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its officers, servants, agents or employes shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the same as aforesaid; in which latter case the said company shall pay its pro rata of the expense of the removal of said snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for every city block on which any such violation shall take place, but said penalty shall not aggregate more than one hundred dollars in any one day; said penalties to be paid to the city by the said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employees so offending for each and every offence.

Sec. 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations, provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city, entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars", approved April 27, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as a part of this ordinance.

Sec. 6. That the guage of the tracks of said company to be hereafter laid shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the other tracks of said company already laid may be made of the same guage. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the common council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity, and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs, and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than ten miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks.

For violation of any of the provisions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue not exceeding one hundred dollars on any one conviction.

Sec. 7. That said company shall on or before the first day of December, 1895, equip each street railway car by it operated or run within the city of Plainfield, with fenders of the most improved pattern, to be selected by a commission of 3 appointed by the Mayor, and so attached to the car as best to protect from injury persons of vehicles using the streets or riding on the said cars; that after said last mentioned date no street railway car, the motive power of which is electricity, shall be operated or run upon any of the streets of said city, unless such car is equipped with fenders as above required, and in case any such car is operated or run contrary thereto the said company and every person or persons who shall either as president, manager, conductor or motorman or otherwise be engaged in so operating or running any such car shall be deemed to have violated this section and on conviction shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each day during which such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one conviction.

Sec. 8. The said company shall build or construct its extensions in the order specified in Sec. 1 and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route one of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within nine months next after the passage of this ordinance, and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route two of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within twelve months after the passage of this ordinance; or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid daily and every day, for the space of three consecutive months, all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance, shall thereupon cease and determine, and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such right, power and privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases the common council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the federal courts in New Jersey, shall not be included within the 9 and 12 months within which the said extensions are to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Sec. 9. The said company shall for each and every mile of street occupied by its tracks laid already or that shall hereby be laid by said Company, whether under the provisions of the ordinance hereinabove referred to, approved April 27, 1891, or the amendment thereof approved May 4, 1892, or under the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks", approved Oct. 4, 1892, or under this ordinance, or under any other ordinance, and also for every mile of street occupied by tracks that may be owned or operated or that may be hereafter owned or operated by said company within the limits of the city of Plainfield, pay or cause to be paid to the collector of taxes of said city for the use of the said city, the following sums, to wit: For the year beginning Jan. 1, 1896, fifty dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1897, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1898, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan 1, 1899, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1900, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1901, one hundred and twenty-five dollars a mile, for each and every mile of track; said payments to be made each and every year on on or before the last day of each year.

For the years succeeding that beginning 1901 the said company shall pay at the same rate as for the year 1901, provided that when the gross receipts in any one year from the entire system within the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield shall equal or exceed eighty thousand dollars, then for that year and annually thereafter, the said company shall pay annually to said city collector for the use of said city five per cent. of the gross earnings of said company, and said gross earnings shall be construed to include all earnings of said company and full proportion on all earnings on through traffic to be calculated according to the proportion between the entire length of the journey and the number of miles travelled within the limits of the city of Plainfield or the borough of North Plainfield or both as the case may be. That to enable the city to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of said company the books of the company shall be open to inspection by the finance committee of the common council or such other person or persons as the common council shall for that purpose designate.

The payment provided for in this section shall be in lieu of all license fees for cars, whether provided for in prior ordinances or not, and is intended to be in the nature of a franchise tax.

Sec. 10. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks, and that no luggage other than hand luggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company or and other cars passing over said tracks. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prevent the company from carrying U. S. mail. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company, and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any of said street corners, and said company shall cause the cars to come to a full stop and sound the gong or bell immediately before turning any curve on road now constructed or to be constructed. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Sec. 11. That in case said company shall lease its tracks or any portion of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company will cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer, a stipulation and agreement and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or attempted to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto, and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer to be made, so that no persons or corporations shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions as herein provided.

Sec. 12. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby, shall as a condition precedent file with the city clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company required to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns, of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Sec. 13. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the common council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by the said company, its successors or assigns.

Sec. 14. The company shall file with the city clerk, within thirty days next after the passage of this ordinance, their acceptance, under their corporate seal and signed by their president, of the terms and provisions, restrictions, and regulations hereof, and every one of them, and, in default thereof, it shall be understood and held that they decline to accept the same, and thereupon all rights, powers and privileges, to them granted hereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

ROMANCE OF PASSAIC VALLEY

A MARCH ELOPEMENT PROVIDES AN AUGUST SCANDAL.

Old Standing Love Match—Two Families Meet at the Harvest Home and the Wife of One and Husband of the Other Depart.

The sequel to an old standing love affair comes rumbling down over the hills and dales of Watchung spur from the usually queit Passaic Valley that is as romantic as the fiction of Rider Haggard. It is an elopement, and odd as it seems the fair one of the eloping pair herself eloped only a short time ago with the man whom she now leaves behind.

Last winter a traveling artist by the name of Schofield came strolling along the quiet lanes that hedge the Passaic. Like all artists he was poor in a financial way. It was cold and the wintry blasts blew with great frigidity through the clothes of the artist. The field for occupation at his easel was not large in the rural community and so the man of the pencil and brush was obliged to seek a livelihood at the first thing that turned up. He applied to Daniel Walding, a substantial farmer of the Valley, for something to do. The agriculturist took the wandering man in. In the family was a pretty, vivacious young girl of sixteen summers, the daughter of farmer Walding. The maiden,s name was Etta. The artist had been in the family but a short time when a friendship sprang up between the stranger and Miss Etta that was something more than acquaintance of meeting one another and casually passing the time of day.

The love affair between the two finally became so pronounced that the parents frowned with no degree of uncertain displeasure on the proceedings. The stern parents insisted on the daughter breaking off her match with the artist, but the artist was persistent, and with the idea that "all is fair in love and war," he failed to heed the admonitions of the people who had taken him in from the wintry blasts and made a place for him in the family circle.

One day in March Miss Etta went to New Providence, ostensibly on business, but shortly after was joined by the beau artist. The couple had evidently planned the affair nicely, for the coup d'eat was a ceremony performed by Rev. Mr. Bice that made two hearts beat as one. The groom, of course, was financially depressed, and to the reverend gentleman he told his tale of woe at the moment he was supposed to be happiest. In plain words he was broke and could not pay the accustomed fee. But his intentions were good, and after a brief conference the minister, it is said,broached the proposition to him that when harvest time came he should assist him to dig his crop of potatoes, which had just been planted.

Now this sort of work is not the most desirable for a man of artistic inclinations, but what could the poor man do.

He agreed to the proposition. With his bride on his arm and joy in his heart the artist started for the home of Farmer Walding.

The reception the couple received was not such as to make the matrimonial sea as calm as they had anticipated. The parents, so it is said, refused to permit them to reside under the parental roof.

The couple rented a house in the neighborhood and have managed to live nicely together, the husband earning a living by making sketches and disposing of them to rural inhabitants and city boarders.

The first ruffle that appeared in their apparently happy life was a wave so big, startling and unexpected that it has disrupted two homes, and set the Passaic Valley in the throes of excitement.

Thursday of last week the Harvest Home was held at Smalleytown, and in common with the rest of the people of that section Mrs. Schofield went to enjoy the festivities. There she met James Van Osten, who had also come with his wife and child. Jim, as all the country folks called him, was an old time beau of the now artist's wife. Since the marriage of the Passaic girl and traveling artist the two couples have visited one another frequently but between Mrs. Schofield and Van Osten no particular intimacy was observed, though they were considered fast friends in the sense that they had known each other a long time.

The two met at the picnic grounds on the Harvest Home day, and while they were friendly towards one another, nothing was observed out of the way in their actions.

Early in the day Mrs. Van Osten went home with her child, and retired early in the evening, not expecting her husband in until quite late at night. The next morning she awoke to find her husband was not at home.

She did not remain long in doubt for a shot time after, Schofield was around inquiring after his young wife, who had not returned home the night previous from the picnic.

An investigation quickly followed, when it was discovered that Van Osten had drawn his money from Israel Coon, for whom he was foreman, and had left for parts unknown with the artist's wife.

Mrs. Van Osten is left without means of support, but declares that she can support herself, and that the perfidy of her husband is sufficient for her to have nothing further to do with him, even if he should come back.

Schofield looks at the action of his wife with more charitableness and says that he will take her back if she only will return, but with Van Osten, he declares he will invoke the law to punish him for destroying his home.

The minister's potatoes are now ready to dig, but the artist says that he must first find his wife, or else the potatoes will have to be dug by someone else.

In a word the neighborhood has not been in such a turmoil since the days of Dominee Dill s episodes.

BUSINESS COLLEGE COMING.

Rev. A. A. Phelps Will Soon Establish Another Educational Institution.

Very few towns in the east, as large and lively as Plainfield, are without a business college. Such a school is to be opened in this city on the first day of October. Rev. A. A. Phelps, A. M., an alumnus of Syracuse University, has just come to inaugurate the enterprise. He has had considerable experience as a speaker, writer, and educator, and comes with the very best indorsements from many parts and parties.

Mr. Phelps is now searching for suitable rooms, which will be neatly furnished with every convenience. Competent teachers will be secured, and the best systems of book-keeping and shorthand will be adopted. The English branches will also be thoroughly taught, for the benefit of young men and women of neglected education. The instruction will be mainly personal, thus saving the student all embarrassment. The college will be run five days and four nights a week.

Ex-President Harrison.

Ex-President Harrison has recently demonstrated his possession of a good eye by bringing down a deer at long range. He has preserved his keenness of sight by timely attention to his eyes, an example which you should follow by a visit to Collier's, 103 Park avenue, where skillful authority on the care of the eyes will fortify you to retain their usefulness through coming years.

A General Sigh.

He sighed, she sighed, they both sighed, side by side, as they thought of Tier's special candy sale they were missing this evening. The sale includes all kind of candy. Tier has a fine stock of clove drops, the favorite of the Plainfield young people.

A Bright Student.

Isaac Titsworth, of the class of '95 in the High School, has secured a scholarship at Rutger's College and will leave his home in New Market in a short time to begin his life at college.

Gus Frazee Out Again.

"Gus Frazee, Plainfield's veteran package expressman, left the hospital yesterday on crutches and is at the home of his son Whitney on West Second street.

A Dunellen Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Mabel Burniston, of Dunellen, to W. J. Hamilton, Jr., of Hackensack, will take place at the bride's home, Dunellen, on Thursday, September 19th.

Cracks to Practice.

Larned and Wreen, the would-be champion and the ex-champion tennis players of the United States, go to Orange next week to practice for the coming tournament at Philadelphia on the 12th.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE CHIEF'S RIG IN THE SEWER

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF MR. DOANE AND DRIVER WOOD.

Driving to the Fire When the Horse Ran Into the Sewer Excavation Throwing Both from the Wagon—Mixed-up Affair.

"A midnight alarm" disturbed the quietude of the city last night and brought any quantity of people out on the streets. It was just about twelve o'clock when a Daily Press reporter approached Policeman Jos. Cooney at the corner of Front street and Park avenue. Philip Zimmer came running up Somerset street toward the officer and asked him to send in an alarm. He said that a lamp had exploded in his rooms on Somerset street and he could not extinguish the flames. Box 12 was immediately pulled and the department responded quickly.

On examination it was learned that an extinguisher would be sufficient to put out the fire. The damage was slight, as only a portion of a bureau and some carpet was burned.

Phillip Zimmer told a Daily Press reporter this morning that his loss would amount to $50, as there were several things burned up including bedding, clothes and laces. His goods were insured in the Home Insurance Company, with Van Buren & Timpson, for $350.

The most serious part of the affair happened when David Wood went after Chief Doane with the latter's horse and wagon.

Chief Doane met the wagon at the corner of Central avenue and Fifth street. They then drove up Central avenue toward Front street. The Chief cautioned Wood to be careful as there were excavations on that street, and in consequence the horse was driven along at a slow canter.

As they approached the railroad bridge the two men noticed the lights ahead near Second street, where sewer excavations had been made, but did not see one open near the bridge which was about six feet deep.

An immense quantity of dirt had been piled nearby on which was a lantern giving a very dim light.

The horse mounted the pile of dirt and slid into the opening. Wood was thrown out and severely bruised about the legs and back. The Chief also left the wagon very uncermoniously, but was not injured.

The horse fell in the narrow excavation, and how he was to be rescued was the question.

The Chief left the scene and ran to the fire leaving Wood and a number of men who had gathered to take care of the horse.

After the fire the Chief returned with First Assistant James Martin, Dr. Herbert Councilman Fisk, and several others. They worked hard for about a half hour when they succeeded in pulling the horse out of the hole with the aid of a long heavy rope, a pulley and a blanket.

The horse was taken to Roberts's livery where Dr. Herbert found that a bone under the left eye was broken. He removed the bone and took several stitches in the opening, and the animal will come through all right.

The wagon was not damaged at all. That someone was not killed is a miracle.

Chief Doane and Councilman Fisk summoned Dr. Endicott who went to Roberts's livery stable and examined Driver Wood. No serious injuries were discovered, though he was somewhat bruised.

Chance For a Bargain.

In about ten days Hand & McIntyre will sell at auction the property on East Sixth street, between Berckman and Central streets. There will be a chance to secure several fine bargains.

Benefit Entertainment.

An entertainment and dance for the benefit of the North Plainfield German School will be held in Saengerbund hall on Monday evening, October 7th.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE AVENUE TO BE OPENED.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ADOPT THE WATCHUNG EXTENSION ORDINANCE.

To Go Into Effect September 23d—Discussion Over the Macadamizing—Delinquent Tax Warrants to Be Issued.

In spite of the fact that there was little business of great importance to come before the Borough Council last night, there was considerable activity shown by the members present, which included Councilmen Lounsbury, Peck, Valiant, Smith and Schutt.

After the minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings were read and approved, a communication was received and filed from the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company which stated that they had purchased the Edison Electric Light Company's plant, were increasing their facilities and intended to give the borough first-class service.

The following statement of Clerk Arnold was read:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,712.50
Fire department		$ 537.42
Light account		697.19
Roads	1,831.97
Poor		200.00
	1,434.61
Total balance	$2,109.86

He also reported that $142.88 had been collected during the past month as fines, license money, etc. The report was received and filed.

Warrants were ordered drawn for the payment of the monthly bills, after they had taken the usual course.

Mr. Smith, from the street committee, said that the street commissioner had been busily engaged trimming the trees in the borough and had covered every street. A great many residents, he said, objected to the work, but it had been done in order to have better street lighting. He also stated that the work of macadamizing Prospect place would be started in a few days.

Mr. Peck informed Mr. Smith that he did not blame residents for objecting to the trimming of the trees, judging from the way some of the work had been done. He thought the street committee should authorize the work performed, instead of the street commissioner taking the responsibility to do it.

Mr. Valiant called up the Watchung avenue extension ordinance and on his motion it was placed on its second reading and adopted by sections.

Mr. Lounsbury offered an amendment to the latter part in regard to the matter of macadamizing the avenue, that it be done the same as other borough streets had been macadamized, that is, the residents along the avenue pay their proportionate share for the work. The ordinance was drawn up by Borough Counsel C. A. Reed, and on Mr. Valiant's suggestion Mr. Reed spoke in its behalf on that point. He said that it was the idea, he thought, to make the avenue one of the finest, and as it was the first street to be opened by the borough they should macadamize it. It ought to have a top dressing to make it passable. Mr. Valiant thought the borough as a whole should stand the expense. The idea expressed by Mr. Lounsbury was that it would establish a bad precedent. He said he would oppose the work being done by the borough. Mr. Smith said that it would cost more to macadamize Harrison street than it would Watchung avenue. He thought the borough should do the work.

Mr. Loundsbury's amendment was lost by vote, and on motion of Mr. Valiant the ordinance as a whole was adopted. It will take effect Monday, September 23d. Mr. Smith made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet Tuesday evening, September 17th. It was so ordered. A resolution was offered by Mr. Schutt to the effect that the tax collector draw tax warrants for the sale of borough property on which the taxes were now delinquent. It was adopted.

A motion by Mr. Peck that was carried was that $600 of the money received from the township be transferred to the fire department fund. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that was tabled to the effect that Mercer avenue between Duer and Grove streets be macadamized. It was thought that the funds would not stand the pressure at present. The Mayor suggested that the Finance committee meet the Clerk at an early date, go over the books and present a comprehensive statement of the borough finances at the next meeting. An adjournment was then made to Tuesday evening September 17th.

Benefits of the Trolley.

Ex-Councilman Leonard G. Spangenberg was in Brooklyn on Thursday, and rode on fifteen different street car lines for five cents.

PLAINFIELD AN AUTUMN RESORT.

Many Guests Gather at The Revere House to Spend the Autumn.

As a summer resort Plainfield does not attract a large crowd, but during the autumn and spring it would be hard to find a nicer place at which to stay. Already the fall visitors have begun to arrive and the Revere House is almost entirely filled. And those who do come are perfectly satisfied, both with the city and the management of the hotel.

George B. De Revere, the enterprising proprietor, has added music to the many other attraations, and every evening Miss Helen Hasbrook lends her aid at the piano. Last evening almost all the guests gathered in the parlors and spent the evening in singing and dancing. The winter promises to be a most successful one in the hotel.

SOMERSET'S SMOKER.

The Juniors Enjoy an Evening of Pleasure and Profit.

The members of Somerset Council, No 102, J. O. U. A. M., at their regular meeting last evening enjoyed a smoker and a good time in general. There was a good sized crowd present and excellent speeches were made by different ones. One new member was initiated during the evening. Emil Closs, of Newark, was present and delighted the members with funny and amusing sketches.

Refreshments consisting of watermelon and cake were served, and all present were furnished with corncob pipes and excellent smoking tobacco. The affair broke up at a late hour all being well pleased with the entertainment.

WHO'LL BE CITY JUDGE?

Four, Possibly Five, Republicans in the Field Thus Far.

The contest for the Republican nomination for City Judge promise to be a lively one. Ex-Judge W. R. Coddington has, by far, it is said, the best chance, but he is trying for the county circuit court judgeship. The candidates in the field at present for the City Judge nomination are Winfield S. Angleman and Geoge W. De Meza, of the Fourth Ward, Harry C. Runyon, of the Third Ward, and James P. Powers, of the First Ward. Powers, although in the race, has done no active work as yet. The other three are working after the nomination and an exciting fight for it is likely to result unless there is a sudden change in their plans.

All Next Week.

The Bubb Comedy Company will be at Stillman's Music Hall all of next week. The musical selections given by their challenge band and orchestra are alone worth more than the price of admission, while the plays produced are of the highest standard, being elaborately staged and handsomely costumed. The artists comprising the Bubb Company are all of high excellence, and includes among others Alfred Kelcy, the well-known comedian; Lillian La Rose, a beautiful and accomplished actress; E. M. Crane, and the famous Elmore children, who introduce up-to-date specialties. The price of admission, ten, twenty and thirty cents, should insure large audiences at each performance. Monday evening, "The Black Flag."

A Plainfield Man Honored.

Another Plainfielder has attained a high position in one of the large secret societies. W. W. Stratton, of East Third street, is the recipient of the honor and has just received his commission as State District President in the Patriotic Order Sons of America. Mr. Stratton has held several positions of trust in the local camp and now his worth has been recognized and he has been given a chance to rise in the general order. The commission papers are very handsome ones and are signed by the State President, George W. Smith.

Too Late to Take the Stratford.

James E. Martine this morning received a letter from Miss Bartholamew stating that she considered it too late in the season to warrant her taking charge of the Stratford.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LIVELY DAY IN POLICE COURT.

MRS. STEWART EXCHANGED HOT REMARKS WITH THE PLAINTIFF.

She Was Arraigned for Using Obscene Language, and She Impressed All that She Was a Talker—Other Cases.

The city court had another batch of the regular Saturday cases this morning. The first to come before Judge Coddington was Bridget Metchel. She got drunk last evening and had a general good time, but was sentenced to thirty days in jail to think over her sins.

Annie A. Station, known as Mrs. Stewart, was the next to appear on the complaint of James Donahue for using obscene language. Mrs. Stewart pleaded not guilty.

Charles H. Herring was the first witness, and he had not seen or heard any tough language or actions, although he had heard some loud talking in the vicinity.

The incident happened on East Front street last Sunday according to the complainant, and John H. Sayers, who lives near the scene of action, was next brought on the witness stand. When asked if he had heard any of the language said to have been used, he replied:

"I thought to myself, this is a little bit of a racket, and didn't pay any more attention to it. If I was to pay attention to all those little affairs around there, I should be in an asylum now."

And that was all Mr. Sayers had to say.

The next witness knew less about the quarrel than either of the others, Ike Shrader testified that he had heard a woman talking loud but could not understand anything she said. And when the prisoner began to talk, for she was the next on the stand, and got rather excited, the court did not blame Ike. Her version of the affair was that Donohue came into her house and insulted her and her daughter.

"You came in and abused me and my thirteen year old daughter," she cried, excitedly. "You come in and insult us."

The complainant denied it and then Mrs. Stewart's ire got the best of her.

"You're no good," she exclaimed at the rate of four hundred words a minute.

"You don't pay your rent but drink your money all up."

"That's a falsehood on the face of it," said the indignant man.

"Didn't you," she continued, "kick your own daughter four times about your yard?"

Then followed all that he had done for the last six months which she ended up by saying "and you ought to be strung up."

Judge Coddington then ordered the woman to her seat.

James Donahue next took the stand and said that he had been in the building where she lived with a friend looking at rooms and that she "hollered dirty words upstairs."

"Oh my goodness," exclaimed Mrs. Stewart, and then she started on her side of the question again. After another war of words he continued:

"I came down stairs to go to Mr. Sayers to see if the rooms were rented and the woman began to abuse me. Mr. Sayers asked me if she was my wife and I said 'God forbid.'" At which there was a general smile, and Mrs. Stewart began talking faster than before.

She then tried to cross-question him and the two had everything to themselves. She would bring out some fresh accusation and he would declare "That's a falsehood on the face of it." They scrapped over a cat which she said had come back but he said it had not. At last the Judge called the court to order and silenced them both. He then dismissed the case, but said that if the quarrelling continued he would let them both enjoy life at the county jail.

A bicycle rider, Jacob A. Clark, was the next to appear and was fined five dollars for riding on the sidewalk on West Front street. His excuse was that the street was blocked by the sewer excavation, and Judge Coddington then remarked: "I am free to say that there should be some provision for riders when the street is impassable."

A woman had been arrested on the charge but failed to appear. Judge Coddington instructed the officers that the ordinance pertaining to sidewalk riding and riding without a light referred to cyclists of both sexes and that because the rider was a woman it was no reason why she should break the ordinance.

Too Much Darkness.

Both cyclers and people using horses and wagons are complaining about the insufficient number of lights that are placed around the sewer excavations.

WERE WE AT FAULT?

Spanish Indignation Over the Allianca Incident.

Claimed Now That the Vessel Really Carried Arms for the Rebels and That We Displayed a Gross Abuse of Strength in Demanding an Apology from Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 7.—Count Hobkirk, the Frenchman who was on board the American steamer Allianca at the time she was fired upon by a Spanish warship off Cape Mayai, Cuba, is now in this city. In an interview last evening he said that the Allianca was so close to the shore that he could see the inhabitants clearly. When Captain Crossman, the master of the Allianca, saw the Conde de Venadito, the warship which fired on the American vessel, he was enraged because he knew he would not be able to land the arms he had aboard the steamer. He exclaimed: "I will kick up a nice row when I reach the United States."

Why Muruaga Resigned.

Senor Muruaga, formerly Spanish minister to the United States, has written to the papers stating that he resigned because he had proof that the Conde de Venadito was right in firing on the Allianca. He would not consent that Spain should give humiliating satisfaction to the United States for an incident in which the United States was at fault. Moreover, he adds, it is known in the United States that Captain Crossman smuggled arms to the rebels in Brazil during the civil war in that country, and that he now carries on a brisk trade smuggling arms to the insurgents in Cuba.

Gross Abuse of Strength.

Senor Muruaga adds that he had the statements of witness that the Allianca carried contraband of war and that she was only a mile and a half from the Cuban coast when the Conde de Venadito hailed her. He sent these statements and a full report of the occurrence to the Madrid government and they concealed them. The Spanish press is indignant over these revelations and violently attacks the United States and the Spanish government. The newspapers declare that the action of the United States in sending an ultimatum was a gross abuse of strength, seeing Spain's difficulty at the time.

DUPLICATE MONEY ORDERS.

Postoffice Department Put To Considerable Trouble.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The postoffice department has been put to considerable trouble lately by the issuance of duplicate money orders for those alleged to have been lost, misdirected or possibly stolen by dishonest clerks. All duplicates have to be issued by the department here and last year application was made for the issuance of more than 30,000 such orders. The department finds that in many cases both the original and the duplicate have been paid, and in some cases suit has been brought to recover the money. In order to obviate such entanglements in the future First Assistant Postmaster-General Jones, at the solicitation of the auditor, has adopted a rule not to issue duplicates in the future until the expiration of sixty days from the date of the original money order.

RALPH O. BALES MARRIED.

The Noted G. A. R. Lecturer Elopes with a Thrice Wedded Widow.

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 7.—Ralph O. Bales, the G. A. R. lecturer, and Mrs. Middleton, a thrice wedded widow, whom he met two weeks ago, eloped yesterday and were married at Middletown. Bales has been lecturing for twenty-five years about the war and his experiences while a prisoner in Andersonville. He escaped and was almost dead when Gen. Sheridan found him. The general sent him to Washington to show President Lincoln to what condition men were reduced in the southern prison. The president wept when he saw him and made him a guest at the white house for nine days. He is past 50 years of age.

ITALIAN SOCIALISTS' PLOT.

Disturbance Planned for Sept. 20 if De Felice Was Not Released.

Palermo, Sept. 7.—The police of this city have dissolved a socialst electoral society which had 400 members. The society was organizing disturbances for Sept. 20, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the occupation of Rome by Italian troops, if the government did not accord amnesty to De Felice, Barbato and other socialists now in prison.

DURRANT'S HARD FIGHT.

Sixty Witnesses Will Be Called by the Defense.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—The Durrant trial went over last night until Tuesday next, Monday being a legal holiday. The defense has given an idea of the long fight it will make by the announcement that it will put sixty witnesses on the stand. The nature of the defense, however, has not been disclosed.

Frascara Acquitted.

Rome, Sept. 7.—The trial of Signor Frascara, director of the Credito Mobiliare, who was charged with concealing a state bank's affairs and with using the bank's securities for speculation, terminated yesterday, the charges having been withdrawn and the court acquitting the defendant.

To Meet at Saratoga in '96.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The Master Car Builders' and Master Mechanics' associations have decided to hold their annual convention in this village during the second week in July, 1896.

Adams Will Be Hanged.

Columbus, O., Sept. 7.—The state board of pardons has rejected the application for clemency for Martin Adams, a Cincinnati murderer. He will be executed on Sept. 27.

Atlanta Out of Commission.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The cruiser Atlanta has been placed out of commission. She is badly in need of repairs.

Senator Quay Going to Florida.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—Senator Quay will leave for his retreat in Florida today for a sojourn.

GYPSY MOTH PEST.

Eggs Found in the Woods of Woburn and a Second Brood Feared.

Malden, Mass., Sept. 7.—Messrs. H. A. Ballou and C. H. Rowe, agents of the state board of agriculture, made a startling discovery yesterday while at work in the woods of Woburn. They found eggs of the gypsy moth in process of hatching and the young caterpillars crawling from them. These eggs were only laid a few weeks ago and their hatching before the end of the season verifies the worst fears of entomologists who have predicted that the gypsy moth might sometimes have two broods in one season. If the present warm weather continues through September and there are no early frosts, there seems to be nothing to prevent a second crop of gypsy moths. This means that where the moths are thick the trees again may be ravaged and that there may be an additional supply of eggs for the gypsy moth hunters to destroy.

HAD MONEY TO BURN.

A Wealthy Mexican Becomes Violently Insane in New York.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Senor De Los Olives, a wealthy Mexican gentleman who arrived at the Grand Union hotel Monday, became violently insane while eating breakfast in the dining room of that hotel yesterday, and dashing the dishes on the floor jumped through a window into the street below, a distance of several feet. A policeman who saw the man jump caught hold of him until the house detectives came. He was taken into the hotel office where he took money out of his pocket and burned it in front of the clerks. His condition being so bad he was taken to police headquarters and confined in an iron clad cell. The Mexican consul in New York has been notified of the man's condition.

WILL BE OPENED SEPT. 18.

Everything in First Class Shape at the Atlanta Exposition.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 7.—Reports which have gone out that the opening of the exposition will be postponed are absolutely without foundation. President Collier was seen to-day on this subject and said: "The report is groundless, and the exposition will be opened on Sept. 18. The buildings are all finished and the grounds are practically ready. Steam is on now in the power plant and the seventeen engines and all the exhibits in the machinery hall will be ready promptly. The electric fountain will also be playing."

HARRISON LOOSES A TOOTH.

It Was a Wisdom Molar and Caused Him Considerable Pain.

Old Forge, N. Y., Sept. 7.—General Harrison parted company with one of his wisdom teeth yesterday. It has been annoying him for some time and at last the pain became so great that he deemed it best to have a dentist called in. Yesterday afternoon Dr. John M. Barton of Rome, a retired dentist, was summoned to Dodd's camp and upon examination found that the wisdom tooth on the left side of the general's mouth was ulcerated and it was removed. It caused General Harrison some little pain, but he stood it without wincing.

NO FAMINE IN ARMENIA.

Turkish Officials Say That the Harvest Has Been Good.

Berlin, Sept. 7.—A special dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung from Constantinople says that the Turkish officials deny the truth of the statements that the economic situation of the Armenians is growing worse. Inquiries made in the parts of Armenia alleged to be in the worst condition in the respect mentioned show, according to the assertions of the Turkish officials, that the harvest has been fair and that there is no possibility of famine.

CLOUDBURST NEAR BALTIMORE.

Low Lands Inundated and Crops Ruined for Miles.

Baltimore, Sept. 7.—A cloudburst occurred yesterday near Glen Falls station on the Western Maryland, twenty-three miles from this city. The water washed away the embankment and roadbed for a considerable distance, leaving the rails and ties suspended in the air. The west branch of the Patapsco river became a swirling torrent, ruining crops for several miles in the valley. Pieces of barns and outbuildings were seen floating by.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

The 22d Annual Meeting To Be Held in Baltimore Oct. 18 to 23.

London, Sept. 7.—The 22d annual meeting of the National Women's Christian Temperance union will be held in Baltimore, Md., October 18 to 23. Miss Francis Willard and Miss Anna Gordon, accompanied by Miss Maxwell of the St. Botolph gymnasium of Boston will sail in the steamship New York of the American line September 21. Miss Willard will preside at the convention.

GIRL MURDERER CONVICTED.

May Pierce, 13 Years Old, Found Guilty at Grand Haven, Mich.

Grand Haven, Mich., Sept. 7.—May Pierce, a 13-year-old girl, was found guilty of manslaughter yesterday, the jury having been out twelve hours. The child was accused of being an accomplice of George Cheesbro, aged 18, in the murder of her mother on July 8. Cheesbro was convicted of murder at the last term of court and is now serving a life sentence.

Seventy-one Years a Pauper.

Portland, Me., Sept. 7.—Nancy Bennett, 76 years of age, is dead in the almshouse here. She had been an inmate of the almshouse seventy-one years. She was not mentally or physically incapacitated, but was simply contented with her lot.

To Look After the Gold Reserve.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Assistant Secretary Curtis has gone to New York, presumably on business connected with the maintenance of the gold reserve above the $100,000,000 limit.

London's Lord Mayor in Paris.

Paris, Sept. 7.—The lord mayor of London arrived here last evening. He was cordially greeted by a crowd of 2,000 persons who had assembled at the railway station.

Hog Cholera in Indian Territory.

Denison, Tex., Sept. 7.—Hog cholera prevails to an alarming extent in the eastern part of the Indian Territory.

OUTLOOK OF BUSINESS

No Real Reaction Noticeable This Week.

Temporary Gains Vanished, But a Decided Increase over Last Year Still Remains—Strong Reaction Against the Rapid Advanc in Prices—Sales Slow in Some Lines.

New York, Sept. 7.—Dun's weekly review of the condition of business will to-day say: There is no real reaction in business. Gains which were recognized as temporary are vanishing, but there remains a decided increase over last year at date, although prices average 8.8 per cent. lower than a year ago. It needs no keen observer to see that the reaction against rapid advance of prices is strong. Hides were the first to rise, but a decided break has come. Coke was suddenly raised to $1.40, but has recently sold at $1.10. Wheat jumped over 20 cents to 84, but is now slow of sale at about 65. Wool was late in rising, but has lost about an eight of a cent in average price within the past fortnight. Iron still rises, the miners' strike having hindered shipments of ore, but with troops guarding, the ore begins to move. Cotton is strong, but has paused. The general tendency to curtail purchases where prices have notably advanced grows clearer in boots and shoes, in wool, and in some products of iron.

Sales Slow at Advanced Prices.

In the boot and shoe industry many shops are discharging hands, and in woolen manufacture a few works are closing for want of orders. Shipments of boots and shoes now fall below last year's or those of 1892, and except in split shoes there are but few orders. Dealers are distinctly slow to buy at advanced prices. But holders of western hides who refused 9 3-4cts. a fortnight ago are hunting for buyers at 9 cts. Sales of wool which averaged over 10,000,000 lbs. per week when great speculative stocks were being taken, have shrunk to 5,380,500 for the week against 7,557,300 for the same week in 1892. The average for 104 grades is now 14.68 cts. against 14.48 a year ago and 22.81 in 1892. Manufactures buy slowly because business in all men's goods is dull, particularly in medium and low grades.

An Abundance of Wheat and Corn.

The brightest feature in all the horizon is the certainty that the crop of corn will be enormous. Frosts now can only affect a small fraction, and the surplus will go into the manufacture of meats, because at 35.7 cents at New York, near 4 cents lower than a week ago, there is no other profitable use for corn. The latest reports of wheat threshing induced the best western judges to raise their estimate of yield over 40,000,000 bushels, and with 450,000,000 bushels added to 70,000,000 bushels brought over, the supply will exceed all probable demands. The price has again dropped about 3 cents, and with western receipts of 4,550,104 bushels, against 5,564,210 last year, the western farmer seems again to discover that holding back wheat is a losing business.

Railroad Earnings.

The railroads have gained .03 of 1 per cent. in earnings over last year for August, the last week doing better, though the tonnage eastbound from Chicago was 7 per cent. smaller for the month than in 1892, and the earnings of all roads were 14.3 per cent. smaller. Hopes of coal settlement still deferred and continuing exports of gold cause uneasiness. The demand for commercial and manufacturing loans and for the west is somewhat larger, but the money markets are still easy. Failures in four weeks of August showed liabilities of $8,046,237, of which $3,844,832 were of manufacturing and $4,052,385 of trading concerns, against $10,139,477 last year in all, $3,173,330 manufacturing and $5,077,553 trading. Failures for the week have been 186 in the United States against 219 last year.

CHICAGO CUBAN CLUB.

Money Contributed Every Month To Aid the Insurgents.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—There is a Cuban revolutionary club in this city numbering seventy-eight and the members meet every month to transact business. Each Cuban contributes $4 a month which is sent to Treasurer Guerra of New York. It is estimated that Cuba receives nearly $100,000 a month from these clubs and other sources.

CAPE COD CRANBERRY CROP.

It Will Be an Average One, But Larger Than Last Year.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Sept. 7.—The work of harvesting Cape Cod cranberries has already begun and from reports received from various sections the crop will be an average one, not a very larger one, as was reported earlier in the season, but larger than last year. The price set for early blacks is $6.25 per barrel.

The President's Vacation.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., Sept. 7.—The president, Joe Jefferson and Private Secretary Thurber went to Little Island pond, near the home of "Cape Cod folks," yesterday on a fishing trip. In the early evening Mrs. Cleveland was seen taking a sail on the launch Esther.

W. H. HURLBERT DEAD

The End Was Reached at Cadenabbia, Italy.

A Well-Known Newspaper Writer and at One Time Editor-in-Chief of the New York World—In 1876 He Went to Europe Where He Has Since Chiefly Resided.

London, Sept. 7.—The Times to-day says that W. H. Hurlbert died at Cadenabbia, Italy, on Wednesday, after a long illness.

William Henry Hurlburt was born in Charleston, S. C., July 3, 1827. He was graduated at Harvard in 1847, at the divinity school there in 1849, and then studied in Berlin, Rome and Paris. After a few years in the Unitarian ministry he entered Harvard law school in 1852. In 1855 he was a writer on Putnam's magazine and the Albion, and joined the staff of the New York Times in 1857. While visiting the south in 1861 he was arrested by a vigilance committee in Atlanta, Ga., imprisoned for a time and then released.

Escaped Through the Lines.

He was refused a passport, unless upon conditions with which he would not comply, and, finally, in August, 1862, made his escape through the confederate lines and reached Washington. He became connected with the New York World in 1862, and in 1864 purchased the Commercial Advertiser, intending to publish it as a free trade paper, but, he and his associates in the enterprise failing to agree, the paper was sold in 1867 to Thurlow Weed.

His Work Abroad.

Mr. Hurlbert went to Mexico in 1866 and was invited to the capital by Maximilian. He represented a New York paper at the world's fair at Paris in 1867 and the Centenary festival of St. Peter at Rome, and in 1871 accompanied the United States expedition to Santo Domingo, during which time he wrote and published the most complete account in any language of the modern history of that island. In 1876-83 he was editor in chief of the World, and in the latter year went to Europe, where he has since chiefly resided. He contributed largely to American periodicals and to the "Edinburgh" and other British magazines, and has published "Gan-Eden" (Boston, 1854); "General McClellan and the Conduct of the War" (New York, 1864), and other works besides several hymns and poems.

Gladys Evelyn's Suit.

Mr. Hurlbert figured in an unpleasant way a few years ago in a suit brought against him by a young woman named Gladys Evelyn of London. The defendant won, claiming that the deceiver in the case was not himself but his secretary, Wilfred Murray. The plaintiff held that Murray was only a myth.

NO DOUBT OF HIS IDENTITY.

Hundreds of Visitors at the Richmond Jail To See Fraker.

Richmond, Mo., Sept. 7.—The county jail at this place was visited yesterday by many old friends and acquaintances of Dr. George W. Fraker, who is under arrest for swindling life insurance companies. He was recognized by over a dozen prominent people, whose acquaintance extends over a period of ten years. Between 500 and 600 people were admitted to the jail during the day, and he talked freely and pleasantly to all. When women called to see him he thanked them. No arrangements have yet been made for his preliminary hearing. Several of Dr. Fraker's friends here and at Excelsior Springs are making an effort to secure his release on bond, but it is not believed their efforts will be successful.

TIRED OF THEIR APPEALS.

Missionaries May Have To Look More After Their Own Safety.

London, Sept. 7.—The revocation of the orders to the American warship Marblehead to protect Americans in the Levant while she was enroute there for that purpose is regarded here as indicating that the United States will abandon their policy of interfering in the Mediterranean every time the missionaries appeal for protection. It is understood that the Marblehead will leave Spezzia to-day for Marseilles.

900 NIHILISTS ARRESTED.

Large Quantities of Bombs, Firearms and Dynamite Seized.

Cracow, Sept. 7.—Advices from Moscow and St. Petersburg state that 900 persons, known or suspected to be nihilists, have been arrested by the police of those cities, and large quantities of firearms, bombs and dynamite have been seized in their lodgings.

Dropped Dead on the Street.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Judge Wm. A. Sackett, aged 84 years, dropped dead of heart disease near his residence on Franklin square yesterday afternoon. He was one of the leading and best known citizens of the village and an ardent republican and prohibitionist.

Father Nash Dead.

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Rev. Michael Nash, a priest of the Jesuit order and for thirty years in charge of St. Joseph's parish in this city, died yesterday afternoon from a stroke of paralysis. Father Nash was chaplain of the "Billy" Wilson zouaves during the civil war.

Medico-Legal Congress Adjourns.

New York, Sept. 7.—The Medico Legal congress, which has been in session for the past three days in the Federal building wound up last night with a reception and a banquet at the Press club.

Peppermint Supplants Hay.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 7.—Owing to the scarcity of hay, the farmers in this vicinity are curing peppermint plants. Growers of peppermint have realized more than $100,000 this season from the oil.

Ingersoll's Pocket Picked.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 7.—Col. "Bob" Ingersoll's pocket was picked yesterday at Elmwood of $250 in cash and a draft for $700. The thief threw the draft away and it was recovered.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Letter Carriers Closing Their Work at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 7.—At the letter carriers' convention last night Richard F. Quinn of Philadelphia was elected president of the national association by a vote of 415 to 302. During the afternoon the unanimous election was announced of John F. Victory of Washington as secretary, Charles H. Cutler of Boston chairman of the legislative committee and Wilmot Dunn of Nashville, Tenn., as chief collector of the mutual benevolent association. Other officers besides the president were chosen last night as follows: Treasurer, Alex McDonald, Grand Rapids, Mich.; sergeant-at-arms, W. P. Ellis, Camden, N. J.; members of the executive board, Edward S. McGeoy, Philadelphia; J. F. McElroy, Bridgeport Conn.; F. W. Campbell, Minneapolis, Minn.; Samuel F. Stevens, Cincinnati. Samuel E. Graham of Kansas City, Mo., was elected a member of the board of trustees of the mutual benevolent association and V. B. Goezales, jr., of New Orleans was elected a member of the legislative committee. There was no choice of a city in which to hold the next convention. Rochester, N. Y., led in the vote, Buffalo being next, and Grand Rapids, Mich., Dallas, Tex., and San Jose, Cal., following in the order named. The convention adjourned at midnight until this morning when the meeting will complete the election of officers and settle on a place for the next convention.

ANOTHER USE FOR THE "BIKE"

Excels the Horse for Laying Signal Service Telegraph Wires.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The signal service has added another item to the uses to which the bicycle can be put. This consists of the laying of telegraph lines. Experiments having this end in view were made near San Antonio, Texas, by Capt. Thompson and proved very successful. A light reel containing one mile of wire was rigged over the rear wheel of a machine and the rider started to run it out. The run was made and communications established with the starting point in about eight minutes. The return trip, reeling the wire up, was made in about the same time. The experiment proved highly satisfactory, the work being done much quicker and easier than by the old method in which the horse was utilized.

STRIKE TO BE DECLARED OFF.

Clinton Mill Strikers Vote To Return to Work Conditionally.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 7.—The weavers, beamers and chain and frame quillers of the Lancaster mills at Clinton, who have been on strike for twelve weeks, held a largely attended meeting yesterday afternoon and voted to declare the strike off and go back to work next Monday, provided the mill management will not "blacklist" any of the strikers and will agree to increase wages October 1, provided business conditions warrant a raise.

OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER.

Ludwig Senglaub, Aged 70, Kills Himself for Love.

Manitowoc, Wis., Sept. 7.—Ludwig Senglaub, who was 70 years old, shot himself through the head yesterday, dying instantly, at the home of Mrs. William Radins, a married lady whom Senglaub had fallen in love with. He was game warden for this section during Gov. Peck's administration and had lived here for many years.

WARD'S SAVAGE CRIME.

Killed Two Relatives and Then Committed Suicide.

Sullivan, Ind., Sept. 7.—James Ward murdered Aron Hunter, his father-in-law, and John Hunter, his brother-in-law, near here Thursday night with an axe and committed suicide yesterday by shooting when he was surrounded by a posse of miners and farmers who were determined to lynch him. The double murderer decapitated his father-in-law's body and kicked the head.

OPIUM SMUGGLERS SENTENCED

Ex-Collector Lotan Fined $8,000 and a Chinaman $5,000.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 7.—Judge Bellinger in the United States court has sentenced Said Beck, the wealthy Chinese merchant convicted of smuggling, to pay a fine of $5,000. James B. Lotan, ex-collector of customs, was sentenced to pay a fine of $8,000. He was convicted of being implicated in the smuggling ring.

380 3-4 MILES IN 24 HOURS.

Shabel Establishes a New Record in His 1,000 Mile Ride.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 7.—Ferdinand Shabel, who started out on the Island track in an attempt to break the world's 1,000-mile record, completed his first twenty-four hours with 380 3-4 miles to his credit. This is the unpaced record for twenty-four hours.

DEFENDER'S WEATHER

Favorable To-day for the American Boat.

A Great Fleet of Excursion Boats Carrying 50,000 People to the Scene—A Magnificent Water Spectacle—Visitors from All Parts of This Country and Abroad.

New York, Sept. 7.—To-day, the date fixed for the first of the great international yacht races, opened clear and cool and with every indication of an ideal day for the race, as the prospects favored a fair amount of wind. It is safe to say that no previous contest for the America's Cup has ever aroused such intense and widespread interest on both sides of the Atlantic, and as early as 8 o'clock all manner of small craft were busy receiving their passengers, all intent on witnessing the race. Not only are hundreds of strangers present from Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago and the far west, but the number of foreign visitors has never before been exceeded. At 10 o'clock this morning it was said that sixty excursion boats had passed out through the narrows all crowded with excursionists, and no end of smaller craft was heading for the racing ground. At that hour probably 50,000 people were afloat in the vicinity of the Sandy Hook lightship—the starting point of the racers.

Defender Weather.

The weather this morning favored the American rather than the British boat. At 9 o'clock there was a brisk wind of from twelve to eighteen miles an hour. It came first from the northeast, but was then shifting to a southeasterly quarter, and the indications were for light showers before the middle of the afternoon. It looked very much as if the yachts would have a bit of sea to contend with in the thrash to windward which is mapped out for them. As the Defender's weather qualities have been fully demonstrated while the British boat is supposed to be at her best in a smooth sea and light winds, it may be said that the indications promised to be a Defender day.

A Grand Water Spectacle.

Besides the multitude of private craft and excursion boats which left this harbor this morning others started from Brooklyn, Newark, Jersey City and other points. The New York Yacht club's boat is the St. Johns of the Sandy Hook route, one of the speediest boats about the harbor. Only members and their guests were taken on her. Other flyers which have gone with passengers are the Richard Peck and the City of Lowell, rival cracks of Long Island Sound, the big and comfortable steamboat Mount Hope, the Rockaway boats Grand Republic and General Slocum and the Iron Steamboat fleet. The ocean steamship Roanoke was chartered by the Seawanaka-Corinthian Yacht club; the steamboat Gay Head has the Atlantic Yacht club members aboard; the Cygnus came in with the Riverside Yacht club of Riverside, Conn., on board and over one hundred steam and sailing yachts from eastern and southern waters are on the scene, and altogether the spectacle is the grandest presented in nearby waters in years, as every vessel is flying flags and streamers.

Betting Was Brisk.

Late last night the betting had become quite brisk. English and Canadian money held back for better odds than had previously been offered. Small bets were made at varying odds of 3 to 2 on Defender, but in large amounts the odds were from 6 to 5 and 10 to 7. The latter was the last figure at the New York Yacht club and the hotels. On the Stock exchange, it is said on good authority that $88,000 was placed. F. T. Adams, placed $7,000 on the Valkyrie at odds of 7 to 10. The wager was laid for an English client. The betting opened and closed at 7 to 10, with wagers in the interim at 8 to 10. The Valkyrie end of the betting was taken principally by Canadians.

It would puzzle an angel to make out what the man who pays two bits a year for missions, means, when he prays, "Thy kingdom come."—Rams Horn.

With the street railway extension and the Watchung avenue opening decided favorably by the city and borough councils, Plainfield is getting along quite well, thank you.

Plan of Attack is Chaos Yet.

As reported exclusively in The Daily Press last night the Liquor Dealers Association held a meeting in the afternoon, but no definite action was taken in regard to the line of policy which is to be pursued in prosecuting those whom it is said are selling liquor illegally.

As yet the organization of the association has not been fully completed as there are one or two dealers who have not yet become members. Eight members were present at the meeting yesterday, and after an informal talk an adjournment was taken to next Friday afternoon.

Justice Nash's Court.

Justice Nash rendered judgment this morning in the case of Cooper vs. Stelle, ordering Stelle to pay $106.50 and costs. An execution was also issued. Summonses were issued in the cases of Hecker-Jones-Jewel Milling Co. vs. Giles, on contract, returnable September 12th; Griffin vs. Daly, demand for premises, returnable September 11th; Mulford vs. Whitely, demand for premises, returnable September 11th.

Not Afraid of Rain.

Despite the threatening weather a large number went from Plainfield this morning to see the first of the international yacht races. Among those who went were. Mr. and Mrs. P. Phillips, of Madison avenue, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue, Harry Van Alstyne, of Watchung avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Borsom, of Woodland avenue.

Corsa Confident.

S. C. Corsa, the Plainfielder who has been having so many tilts with Street Commissioner Waring of late, and who the Commissioner discharged from the office of District Superintendent, was in town last night. Mr. Corsa is confident that his case, which is in the courts, will be decided in his favor, and that the Commissioner will have to reinstate him.

Extra Police Duty.

The salaries for marshals in the borough for the month of August was $251.93. The original appropriation for this department was less than $2,000. This is accounted for by the fact that there was a considerable amount of extra police duty last month.

Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up, and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

DEFENDER LEADS.

Valkyrie Gets the Start But is Overhauled by the Defender.

New York, Sept. 7.—Valkyrie got the best of the start in the first race with Defender for the America Cup and crossed the line ahead.

They got away after clever jockeying for position.

Both started on the beat of fifteen miles to windward.

11:20—Valkyrie crosses the starting point, with the Defender five seconds behind.

1:30 p. m.—Defender has certainly the weather and the gap is surely widening. Defender is having a clear time of it to win. The Valkyrie is in a perfect mob of excursion boats, and they are shamefully close to her, and certainly hamper her progress.

1:50—Both boats go about, Valkyrie to the starboard and Defender to port.

2:10—Boats are out about six miles from starting point, with wind freshening and velocity about eight miles an hour.

2:35—Defender is a quarter of a mile ahead at turning point, with return course to windward.

2:45—Boats going out of sight. Seem close together. They are standing off on starboard tack.

2:50—The wind has changed to southward now and Defender has the big end.

The result of the race will be posted in front of The Daily Press office as soon as it is finished.

A BRONZE PRESENTATION

Dr. Coles, of Scotch Plains, Makes Newark a Valuable Gift.

Dr. Jonathan Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, has purchased for presentation to Newark a group in bronze. Its character and significance and the wishes of the donor are explained in letter, which he sent to Mayor Lebkuecher, a portion of which follows:

As a gift to Newark, my native city, in whose educational, scientific and religious advancement my father, the late Dr. Abraham Coles, always took a deep and active interest, I have, through the agency of Messrs. Sypher & Co., of New York city, bought one of the most characteristic and beautiful groups in real bronze to be seen in this country or in Europe. It consists of three figures—an American Indian, his wife and her mother, each life-size. The pedestal is of rare dark Italian marble. The whole was executed at Rome, Italy, in 1886, by the distinguished American sculptor, the late C. B. Ives.

A Farewell to Brady.

J. Irving Brady, assistant in the law offices of Craig A. Marsh, leaves on Monday with O. A. Campbell for the University of West Virginia. The law student of this city have arranged a farewell reception to Mr. Brady for this evening. A big time is expected.

Room to Grow in New York.

The rattlesnake and her eight young rattlers, owned by Harry Dreier, have been sold to a snake dealer in New York city. They did not thrive very rapidly and this was done so that they would have more room to grow.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE FROEBEL IDEA.

A Practical System of Instruction to Be Used by Miss Demarest.

The prevalent impression that a kindergarten is a school, is erroneous. Each has different objects in view and is conducted after different methods. According to Froebel, in the kindergarten the essential thing is the child, its growth and development. In the school it is the opposite, the essential thing being the objects taught and the understanding of its nature and properties. In the work of the kindergarten, there is more of the freedom of the nursery than the restrictions of school. It is with this object in view, thus to prepare the child for a higher education, that Miss Eleanor Demarest will turn her attention to kindergarten work only. She has had much experience with little children, has a thorough understanding of the child nature, and a faculty of keeping them happy and interested. Children as young as three years will be received.

Father Szymanowski Seeks Court.

Rev. Father Stephen Szymanowski, the Perth Amboy priest against whom charges were made last week, is about to seek vindication in the civil courts. He says that sufficient evidence has been secured to make it comparatively easy to prosecute the leaders in their alleged attempt to destroy his reputation. They will be charged with conspiracy and criminal libel, and Counselor C. C. Homann, who will represent the accused clergyman, says that the evidence known is sufficient to procure a conviction.

Sam Allen to Go Back.

Samuel Allen, of Scotch Plains, who was appointed to a position as foreman in the street cleaning department of New York during the incumbency of Col. Moore, and who was dismissed about three weeks ago, was reinstated yesterday and will report for duty Monday morning. Mr. Allen had an interview with Madame Carre, the snappy French secretary of Col. Waring, on Thursday, and yesterday he received the favorable news.

Vets to Be Invited.

Corps Inspector Mrs. Stephens was present at the meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, last evening. An entertainment and social time followed the business session. Cake and cream were served during the evening. It was decided to invite the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans to be present at the next meeting to be held in two weeks.

—The rooster that caused the excitement on West Front street, did not come from Ulrich & Blatz's, but escaped from a farmer who was unloading them preparatory to carrying them into the market.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

A Clever Dancer.

One of the most prominent players in the cast of "A Happy Little Home," the new comedy satire in which the comedian George W. Monroe is the star this season, Miss Dorothy Drew is the dancer. Mr. Monroe has entrusted Miss Drew with one of the most important parts in the comedy, in the third act of which she will introduce her dancing specialty. Patrons of Roof Garden entertainments were afforded an opportunity to witness the work of this exceptionally talented litlle lady at the Casino, where she played a protracted engagement this summer. The attraction will soon appear in Music Hall.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood aud mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BOOM PLAINFIELD FOR '96.

This City Has Amply Demonstrated That It Can Take Care of Delegates.

Perhaps everyone is not aware of the fact that a strong effort is being made by the executive committee of the Local Union to secure the '96 State Convention of Christian Endeavor for Plainfield. The chances of success are good. Plainfield has so many advantages to offer in the way of railroad facilities, large churches, etc. There would not be the least trouble in providing accommodations for the hundreds of delegates, and the religious feast, lasting not only during the convention but long into the winter, would amply repay all the efforts put forth to make the convention a success. Not long ago Plainfield was the scene of the State convention of the Y. M. C. A., and only a few weeks have passed since the conference of the Seventh-Day Baptists took place; and to have the State Christian Endeavor convention would be grand, indeed. A company of consecrated young people such as would be present from every county of the State cannot fail to have a good influence wherever they go, and leave that influence behind them when they depart. Shall we not endeavor to bring this blessing to Plainfield? B.

—N. C. Magee, of Central Lodge A. O. U. W., has organized two new lodges, one at Somerville and the other at Basking Ridge.

SUNDAY DRINKING.

Father McMillan Defines the Attitude of the Catholic Church Thereon.

The Rev. Father McMillan, of New York, recently preached on the subject of "The Sunday Closing of Saloons and Sabbath Observance Generally." He strongly condemned not only the selling of liquor on Sunday, but the patronizing of saloons on that day, and supported his position by quoting from the pastoral letter and decrees of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. Father McMillan said:

"I maintain that every body or group of Christians must take into consideration the external observance of the Sunday in order that this important matter may not be left to the priests as individuals. This has always been among Catholics a recognized usage having the force of law. The so-called continental Sunday is a product of infidelity, and has been forced upon Catholics in Europe by the civil power. This applies especially to Paris, where the workmen are beginning to demand the privilege of giving up work on Sunday.

"After careful deliberation at the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884, the Bishops of the United States decided to remove all doubt concerning Catholic Church teaching regarding intemperance and the proper observance of the Sunday by the publication of a pastoral letter, from which these extracts are taken:

"'There is one way of profaning the Lord's Day, which is so prolific of evil results that we consider it our duty to utter against it a special condemnation. This is the practice of selling beer or other liquors on Sunday, or of frequenting places where they are sold. This practice tends more than any other to turn the Day of the Lord into a day of dissipation—to use it as an occasion for breeding intemperance.

"'While we hope that Sunday laws on this point will not be relaxed, but even more rigidly enforced, we implore all Catholics, for the love of God and of country, never to take part in such Sunday traffic, nor to patronize or countenance it. And we not only direct the attention of all pastors to the repression of this abuse, but we also call upon them to induce all of their flocks that may be engaged in the sale of liquors to abandon as soon as they can the dangerous traffic, and to embrace a more becoming way of making a living.'"

—The project of extending the gas main of the Elizabeth Gas Company to Westfield has been abandoned for this season, owing to the condition of the streets from sewer work. The idea now is to push the work early in the spring.

Sick Headache.

"I regard your pills as a godsend to me. . . . I could not make a business engagement without the proviso, "unless I have sick headache." Now my health is excellent and all from the use of Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills." So writes Hon. W. H. Beveridge, one of Richmond, Va.'s, prominent lawyers.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills are a sure cure for sick headache and indigestion. Why not try them? At druggists', 25c., or a sample mailed free. White wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

TELEPHONING ALONG THE CONGO.

Drums With Which the Natives Are Able to Communicate Long Distances.

Capt. Five, a Belgian explorer, says that the people of the Congo have a curious and interesting method of telephoning. For a long time he refused to believe that the natives really had the power to communicate with others at a distance, though articles had been sent to him in answer to such communications.

At length, one day, journeying on the river by pirogue, and being about fifty miles from Basoko, he determined, instead of stopping, to press on to the village. Then one of his people offered to telephone to the village that the party would reach the place toward evening and would like to have supper prepared on arrival.

A native with a drum then began to beat it after a peculiar fashion, and presently announced that he had heard a reply. He then rolled the drum for some time and tranquilly returned to his paddle. Capt. Five waited with much interest to see whether his approach was expected, and was astonished as he neared Basoko toward evening to recognize on the bank one of his fellow explorers, Lieut. Verellen.

A fire was burning ashore and a supper was being made ready. Capt. Five, after greeting the lieutenant, inquired eagerly how he had learned of the approach of the expedition. The lieutenant replied that the news had been brought some hours before by a negro, who said that a white man was approaching by way of the river and would need supper.

The drum used by the natives for this purpose is a small but noisy affair of wood. It is constantly employed in communicating short distances, in order to save time and trouble. In this instance there had evidently been relays of drummers along the whole fifty miles from the point where the original signal was given to near Basoko. The natives are able, with their drums, to signal messages of considerable length. This particular instance is recorded in La Flandre, a Belgian publication.

The Candy Makers of Formosa.

When it secured Formosa Japan came into the possession of one of the most wonderful sugar lands on the face of the globe. The soil is as rich and fertile as that of Cuba, the climate is dry and salubrious, and the supply of water from the distant mountains in the interior of the island is inexhaustible. Labor is so cheap that you can get a field hand for eight cents a day if a man, five cents a day if a woman, and two or three cents a day if a child.

Besides supplying that great island and many of the surrounding districts of the mainland with sugar, it exports thousands of tons of sugar every year. In 1893, while visiting in Formosa, I learned that their exportation was nearly 50,000 tons, of which some went as far as San Francisco.

A very large amount and an ever-increasing one has gone to Japan every year, which is probably one of the chief reasons why that shrewd little country required Formosa as a part of its indemnity. The sugar centers of Formosa are the two curious cities of Ta-Kow and Tai-Wan-Foo, of which the seaport is An-Ping.

Here profitable employment is given to a very large and thrifty population. One of the chief branches of industry is the making of sugar candy and other dainties. The work is done by men and women alike, the men working chiefly at the heavier tasks and the women at the lighter and nicer ones.

The commonest form of sugar candy is made by boiling the sap quite rapidly in a large kettle, partly clarifying it, skimming off the impurities, and as it reaches the crystalizing point pouring it out into flat pans and there letting it harden.

Equally common is rock candy. This candy is sometimes quite pale and almost colorless; usually, however, it is brown, similar to the cheapest form in our own market. It is employed in enormous quantities by the Chinese, who serve it as a dessert upon the table, use it to give to children, pet buffaloes, family ponies, and to the spirits on "All Saint's Day." It is extremely cheap, ranging from two cents down to one cent per pound.

Pingree Favors Garden Sass Parks.

Mayor Pingree has a new idea along the line of the potato work, which is nothing less than the establishment of permanent agricultural parks as part of the park systems of cities.

"It seems to me," he said in speaking of this plan, "that the time is coming when it will be just as beneficial to the people to have agricultural parks as the more beautiful kind. There ought to be places where the people can have a piece of ground for cultivation. It could be charged for at a nominal rate so as to take away the idea of charity."—Minneapolis Journal.

A Liberal Discount.

Mrs. Boardman—And what does it come to?

Mr. Clevers—Eight pounds, ma'am, at eight cents a pound. Eight eights are eighty-eight; take it for eighty cents.—Philadelphia Times.

Big Guns.

The Krupp steel 130 ton gun has a range of fifteen miles, and can fire two shots a minute. The shot weighs 2,600 pounds, 700 pounds of powder are required for a charge. The cost of a single round from the gun is $1,500.—London Standard.

THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

By BRANDER MATTHEWS

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER I.

The telegraph messenger looked again at the address on the envelope in his hand and then scanned the house before which he was standing. It was an old fashioned building of brick, two stories high, with an attic above; and it stood in an old-fashioned part of lower New York not far from the East River. Over the wide archway there was a small and weather-worn sign, "Ramapo Steel and Iron Works," and over the smaller door alongside was a still smaller sign, "Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co."

When the messenger boy had made out the name he opened this smaller door and entered the long, narrow store. Its sides and walls were covered with bins and racks containing sample steel rails and iron beams and coils of wire of various sizes. Down at the end of the store were desks where several clerks and bookkeepers were at work.

As the messenger drew near a red-headed office boy blocked the passage, saying, somewhat aggressively, "Well?"

"Got a telegram for Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co.," the messenger explained, pugnaciously thrusting himself forward.

"In there!" the office boy returned, jerking his thumb over his shoulder toward the extreme end of the bulding, an extension, roofed with glass and separated by a glass screen from the space where the clerks were at work.

The messenger pushed open the glazed door of this private office, a bell jingled over his head, and the three occupants of the room looked up.

"Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co.?" said the messenger, interrogatively, holding out the yellow envelope.

"Yes," responded Mr. Whittier, a tall, handsome old gentleman, taking the telegram. "You sign, Paul."

The youngest of the three, looking like his father, took the messenger's book and glancing at an old-fashioned clock which stood in the corner, he wrote the name of the firm and the hour of delivery. He was watching the messenger go out when his attention was suddenly called to subjects of more importance by a sharp exclamation from his father.

"Well, well, well," said the elder Whittier, with his eyes fixed on the telegram he had just read. "This is very strange—very strange, indeed!"

"What's strange?" asked the third occupant of the office, Mr. Wheatcroft, a short, stout, irascible-looking man, with a shock of grizzling hair.

For all answer Mr. Whittier handed to Mr. Wheatcroft the thin slip of paper.

No sooner had the junior partner read the paper than he seemed angrier than ever.

"Strange?" he cried. "I should think it was strange! Confoundedly strange—and deuced unpleasant, too."

"May I see what it is that's so very strange?" asked Paul, picking up the dispatch.

"Of course you can see it," growled Mr. Wheatcroft, "and let us see what you can make of it."

The young man read the message aloud: "Deal off. Can get quarter cent better terms. Carkendale."

Then he read it again to himself. At last he said: "I confess I don't see anything so very mysterious in that. We've lost a contract, I suppose—but that must have happened lots of times before, hasn't it?"

"It's happened twice before this fall," returned Mr. Wheatcroft fiercely, "after our bid had been practically accepted, and just before the signing of the final contract!"

"Let me explain, Wheatcroft," interrupted the elder Whittier gently. "You must not expect my son to understand the ins and outs of this business as we do. Besides he has been in the office only ten days."

"I don't expect him to understand," growled Wheatcroft. "How could he? I don't understand it myself!"

"Close that door, Paul," said Mr. Whittier. "I don't want any of the clerks to know what we are talking about."

"Here are the facts in the case, Paul, and I think you will admit that they are certainly curious," began Mr. Whittier. "Twice this fall, and now a third time, we have been the lowest bidders for important orders, and yet, just before our bid was formally accepted, somebody has cut under us by a fraction of a cent and got the job. First we thought we were going to get the building of the Barataria Central's bridge over the Little Mackintosh River; but in the end it was the Tuxedo Steel Company that got the contract. Then there was the order for the fifty thousand miles of wire for the Transcontinental Telegraph—we made an extraordinarily low estimate on that. We wanted the contract and we threw off not only our profit, but even allowances for office expenses—and yet five minutes before the last bid had to be in the Tuxedo Company put in an offer only a hundred and twenty-five dollars less than ours. Now comes the telegram to-day. The Methuselah Life Insurance Company is going to put up a big building; we were asked to estimate on the steel framework. We wanted that work—times are hard and there is little doing, as you know, and we must get work for our men if we can. We meant to have this contract if we could. We offered to do it at what was really actual cost of manufacture—without profit, first of all, and then without any charge at all for office expenses, for interest on capital, for depreciation of plant. The Vice President of the Methuselah, the one who attends to all their real estate, is Mr. Carkendale. He told me yesterday that our bid was very low, and that we were certain to get the contract. And now he sends me this," and Mr. Whittier picked up the telegram again.

"Do you mean to say that you think the Tuxedo people have somehow been made acquainted with our bids?" asked the young man.

"That's what I'm thinking now," was Wheatcroft's sharp answer. "I can't think anything else. For two months we haven't been successful in getting a single one of the big contracts. We've had our share of the little things, of course, but they don't amount to much. The big things that we really wanted have slipped through our fingers. We've lost them by the skin of our teeth every time. That isn't accident, is it? Of course not! Then there's only one explanation—there's a leak in this office somewhere."

"You don't suspect any of the clerks, do you, Mr. Wheatcroft?" asked the elder Whittier, sadly.

"I don't suspect anybody in particular," returned the junior partner, brushing his hair up the wrong way. "And I suspect everybody in general. I haven't an idea who it is, but it's somebody!"

"Who makes up the bids on these important contracts?" asked Paul.

"Wheatcroft and I," answered his father. "The specifications are forwarded to the works, and the engineers make their estimates of the actual cost of labor and material. These estimates are sent to us here, and we add whatever we think best for interest and for expenses, and for wear and tear and for profit.

"Who writes the letters making the offer—the one with the actual figures, I mean?" the son continued.

"I do," the elder Whittier explained. "I have always done it."

"You don't dictate them to a typewriter?" Paul pursued.

"Certainly not," the father responded. "I write them with my own hand—and what's more, I take the press copy myself, and there is a special letter-book for such things. This letter book is kept always in the safe in this office—in fact, I can say that this particular letter-book never leaves my hands except to go into that safe. And, as you know, nobody has access to that safe except Wheatcroft and me."

"And the Major," corrected the junior partner.

"No," Mr. Whittier explained, "Van Zandt has no need to go there now."

"But he used to," Mr. Wheatcroft persisted.

"He did once," the senior partner returned, "but when we bought those new safes outside there in the main office there was no longer any need for the chief bookkeeper to go to this smaller safe; and so, last month—it was while you were away, Wheatcroft—Van Zandt came in here one afternoon and said that as he never had occasion to go to this safe, he would rather not have the responsibility of knowing the combination. I told him we had perfect confidence in him——"

"I should think so!" broke in the explosive Wheatcroft. "The Major has been with us thirty years now. I'd suspect myself of petty larceny as soon as him."

"As I said," continued the elder Whittier, "I told him that we trusted him perfectly, of course. But he urged me, and to please him I changed the combination of this safe that afternoon. You will remember, Wheatcroft, that I gave you the new word the day you came back."

"Yes, I remember," said Mr. Wheatcroft. "But I don't see why the Major did not want to know how to open that safe. Perhaps he is beginning to feel his years now. He must be sixty, the Major; and I've been thinking for some time he looked worn."

Five minutes later Mr. Whittier, Mr. Wheatcroft and the only son of the senior partner left the glass-framed private office, and, walking leisurely through the long store, passed into the street.

They did not notice that the old bookkeeper, Major Van Zandt, whose high desk was so placed that he could overlook the private office, had been watching them ever since the messenger had delivered the dispatch.

CHAPTER II.

After luncheon, as it happened, both the senior and the junior partner of Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co. had to attend meetings, and they went their several ways, leaving Paul to return to the office alone. When he came opposite to the house which bore the weather-beaten sign of the firm, he stood still for a moment and looked across with mingled pride and affection. The building was old-fashioned, so old-fashioned, indeed, that only a long-established firm could afford to occupy it. It was Paul Whittier's great grandfather who had founded the Ramapo Works; there had been cast the cannon for many of the ships of the little American navy that gave such a good account of itself in the War of 1812. Again, in 1848, had the house of Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co.—the present Mr. Wheatcroft's father having been taken into partnership by Paul's grandfather—been able to be of service to the Government of the United States. All through the four years that followed the firing on the flag in 1861 the Ramapo Works had been run day and night. When peace came at last, and the people had again leisure to expand, a large share of the rails needed by the new overland roads, which were to bind the East and the West together in iron bands, had been rolled by Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co. Of late years, as Paul knew, the old firm seemed to have lost some of its early energy, and having young and vigorous competitors, it had barely held its own.

That the Ramapo Works should once more take the lead was Paul Whittier's solemn purpose; and to this end he had been carefully trained. He was now a young man of nearly twenty-five—a tall, handsome fellow, with a full mustache over his firm mouth, and with quick eyes below his curly brown hair. He had spent four years in college, carrying off honors in mathematics; he was popular with his classmates, who made him class poet; and in his senior year he was elected President of the college photographic society. He had gone to a technological institute, where he had made himself master of the theory and practice of metallurgy. After a year of travel in Europe, where he had investigated every important steel and iron works he could get into, he had come home to take a desk in the office.

It was only for a moment that he stood on the sidewalk opposite, looking at the old building. Then he threw away his cigarette and went over. Instead of entering the long store, he walked down the alley-way left open for the heavy wagons. When he came opposite the private office in the rear of the store he examined the doors and the windows carefully to see if he could detect any means of ingress other than those open to everybody.

As Paul entered the private office he found the porter there putting coal on the fire.

Stepping back to close the glass door behind him, that they might be alone, he said:

"Mike, who shuts up the office at night?"

"Sure I do, Mister Paul," was the prompt answer.

"And do you open it in the morning?" the young man asked.

"I do that," Mike responded.

"Do you see that these windows are always fastened on the inside?" was the next query.

"Yes, Mister Paul," the porter replied.

"Well," and the inquirer hesitated briefly before putting this question, "have you found any one of these windows unfastened any morning lately when you came here?"

"And how did you know that?" Mike returned in surprise.

"What morning was it?" asked Paul, pushing his advantage.

"It was last Monday mornin', Mister Paul," the porter explained, "an' how it was I dunno, for I had every wan o' the windows tight Saturday night—an' Monday mornin' wan o' them was unfastened wain I wint to open it to let a bit o' air into the office here."

"You sleep here always, don't you?" Paul proceeded.

"I've slep' here iviry night for three year now come Thanksgivin'," Mike replied. "I've the whole top o' the house to myself. It's an iligant apartment I have there, Mister Paul."

When Mike had left the office, Paul took a chair before the fire and lighted a cigar. For half an hour he sat silently thinking.

He came to the conclusion that Mr. Wheatcroft was right in his suspicion. Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co. had lost important contracts because of underbidding due to knowledge surreptitiously obtained. He believed that some one had got into the store on Sunday while Mike was taking a walk, and that this somebody had somehow opened the safe. There was never any money in that private safe; it was intended to contain only important papers. It did contain the letter-book of the firm's bids, and this is what was wanted by the man who had got into the office and who had let himself out by the window, leaving it unfastened behind him.

What grieved him when he had come to this conclusion was that the thief—for such the house-breaker was in reality—was probably one of the men in the employ of the firm. It seemed to him almost certain that the man who had broken in knew all the ins and outs of the office. And how could this knowledge have been obtained except by an employe? Paul was well acquainted with the clerks in the outer office. There were five of them, including the old bookkeeper; and although none of them had been with the firm as long as the Major, no one of them had been there less than ten years.

While Paul was sitting quietly in the private office, smoking a cigar, with all his mental faculties at their highest tension, the clock in the corner suddenly struck three.

Paul swiftly swung around in his chair and looked at it. An old eight-day clock it was, which not only told the time of day, but pretended also to supply miscellaneous astronomical information. It stood by itself in the corner.

For a moment after it struck Paul stared at it with a fixed gaze, as though he did not see what he was looking at. Then a light came into his eyes and a smile flitted across his lips.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Value of Paine's Celery Compound to the Sick and Nervous.

The burdens of life are not equally borne by men and women.

Women too often suffer from some weakness that was never intended for them by nature.

When trouble or hard work or excitement have rendered the nervous system so morbidly wide-awake that sleep is denied, the over-tired brain must be helped to get quickly back to its healthy normal condition or serious mischief ensues.

Paine's celery compound accomplishes this as nothing else has ever done.

It at once begins to regulate and equalize the over-wrought nerves and to restere to them their lost tone.

It brings to the disabled, debilitated nervous tissues the peculiar nerve food which they must have to build up their parts.

"I took Paine's celery compound for dyspepsia, nervousness and sleeplessness," says Lillie B. Smith of Williamston, N. J., "and I can recommend it as a good medicine. As a result of taking it I feel better than I have for several years."

When Paine's celery compound is used, members of the household recognize the signs of health gradually stealing over the face of the one that was pinched and worn by pain and sickness.

Paine's celery compound is a perfect nerve food. It quickly feeds weakened parts, removes all irritation allows the rest from pain they need so badly, and restores all the myriad, deep-lying nerve parts all over the body to a healthy, quiet working. This is the way this remarkable invigorator makes people well.

Reports of its marvelous working come from cities as far apart as New Orleans and Montreal. There is not a town large enough to stand on a railroad map that has not contributed some word of warm praise and gratitude to the greatest nerve and blood remedy of this stirring end of the 19th century.

Corporation Notice.

Proposals for the Construction of Sewage Disposal Beds.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, N. J., at a meeting thereof held September 5, 1895, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, September 23, 1895, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the Council Chamber, 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, at which time and place said Common Council will receive sealed proposals for doing the work and furnishing the materials for the construction of sewage disposal beds and appurtenances, being part of the system of sewerage, with appurtenances, necessary to complete the same contemplated in the ordinance entitled "An ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage," approved July 25 1894, as provided for in the plans and specifications adopted by the Common Council Sept. 5, 1895, and filed in the office of the City Clerk, 109 Park avenue Plainfield, N. J.

Upon receipt of bids or proposals the Council will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two thousand dollars, payable to the treasurer of the city of Plainfield.

The engineer's approximate estimate of the quantities of material required, and the work to be done, is as follows:

Clearing and grubbing where required.
60,000 cubic yards excavation.
1 screening tank.
14 gate chambers.
13 eighteen (18) inch gates in gate chamber.
38 twelve (12) inch gates in gate chamber.
34 paved outlets at end of pipes from gate chambers.
7,020 lineal feet of straight, brick paved distributing channels.
3,075 lineal feet of 18-inch sewer in embankment.
500 lineal feet of 12-inch terra-cotta pipe outlets from gate chambers.
18,885 lineal feet of 3 and 4-inch underdrains.
15 twelve (12) foot lengths of 4-inch cast iron pipe, underdrain outlets, laid.
15 mannoles on underdrains in sewage beds.
3,125 lineal feet of 24-inch vitrified terra-cotta underdrain.
4 manholes on 24-inch vitrified terra-cotta underdrain.

Duplicate plans, specifications, contract, bond, etc., may be examined, and forms of proposals, may be obtained at the office of the consulting engineer, 109 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

The right to reject any or all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

All proposals must be endorsed "Proposals for the Construction of Sewage Disposal Beds."

THE GAMES OF HOPE CHAPEL.

B. EDDY AVERAGES THE MOST POINTS IN THE CONTEST.

The Events Held at Maltby's Track, Where They Were Witnessed by a Crowd—The Winners and Their Records.

There was a good-sized crowd present at Maltby's track Saturday afternoon when the Young Men's League of Hope chapel concluded their athletic games. The events were all good and some excellent records were made. Owing to some difference a week ago the one-mile event was run over again. Below will be found the results of the events:

One mile run—First, Alex Muir, time, 6 minutes; second, W. Stewart; third, George Firstbrook.

Three-mile run—First, W. Stewart, time 23 minutes, 32 seconds.

Throwing twelve-pound hammer—First, Neil Head, distance 72 feet, 3 inches; second, Alex Muir; third, W. Stewart.

Running hop, step and jump—First, Alex Muir, distance, 31 feet, 3½ inches; second, B. Eddy; third, Neil Head.

One mile bicycle race—First, B. Eddy, time, 3 minutes, 20 seconds; second, B. Mettler; third, W. Higgins.

Two-mile bicycle race—First, Neil Head, time, 5 minutes, 41 seconds; second, W. Higgins; third, Alex Muir.

Four-mile bicycle race—First, F. Marsh, time, 14 minutes, 30 seconds, second, Neil Head; third, B. Eddy.

B. Eddy averaged the greatest number of points, being 24; Alex Muir was next with 21; and F. Walz was last with 16.

Arthur Leland was referee and timekeeper.

The only accident happened to B. Eddy in the four-mile race. His wheel collapsed and he lost the race.

A meeting of the leagne will be held this evening at which time the matter of prizes will be discussed and decided.

DEATH OF MRS. W. G. RUNYON.

Four Weeks of Serious Illness Results in the Death of an Estimable Woman.

The death of Mrs. Walter G. Runyon occurred yesterday morning at 3:45 at her home, 1201 East Broad street, Elizabeth.

Mrs. Runyon, who was well known in this city, was taken seriously ill about four weeks ago and since that time has been a great sufferer. For the past two weeks she was unconscious and remained so until she died. Decedent was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses D. Brown, of 404 East Fourth street, and a twin sister to Mrs. L. J. Denton. She was born in New Market November 5, 1850, and was therefore forty-four years, nine months and four days old. For the past twenty-five years she has lived in Plainfield, Dunellen and Elizabeth. She was a thorough Christian, and in health an active member of the Methodist church. A husband, three sons, father, mother, four sisters and four brothers survive her.

The funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock from her late home, in Elizabeth, and interment in Hillside Cemetery the same day.

There is a probability that the casket will be opened at the grave so as to give those who so desire an opportunity to view the remains.

Had Too Much Curiosity.

A man, fifty-six years old, who gave the name of Peter Benson and said he lived at Reading, Pa., was arrested at Elmora, near Elizabeth, on Saturday night. He was stopping women and girls on the street and questioning them as to where they were going. He stopped trolley cars and questioned the conductors as well. His appearance indicated mental derangement. He was sent to jail for thirty days for disorderly conduct.

Two Little Brothers Run Away.

Christopher Schable reported to the police of Elizabeth that his two sons, age nine and eleven years respectively, had run away from home. The police authorities will try to hunt up the lads. It is thought they have started west to kill Indians.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LINED UP IN THE CITY COURT.

AN EVEN QUARTETTE OF DELINQUENTS FROM JUSTICE.

McArdle Handled His Revolver in a Careless Way—Phil Sheridan Goes to Jail to Be Spiteful—Two Other Minor Cases.

The increase in business that is felt in all classes of occupations at the close of the summer, has begun to make itself felt in the police department.

The city court was quite busy this morning, and September, if the end is like the beginning, will be an active month in that direction.

James McArdle was the first victim, and he was charged by Hackman "Corky" Goodman with being drunk, fighting and shooting a revolver in a reckless manner. McArdle owned up to the charges, but when Judge Coddington queried "What did you do it for?" he replied "for nothing." Goodman had been hired by McArdle to carry him up to Campbell's clubhouse and return. Mac offered "Corky" $3 for the job but only had $1 and he promised to pay the rest some other day. Goodman at first objected, but finally consented. He waited at the club house for some time and finally told McArdle that he would have to go. McArdle then came out and tried to haul Goodman out of the carriage. He was soon pacified, however, and went down the street shooting his revolver at anything that came handy. McArdle was given his choice between a fine of $20 or sixty days with Sheriff Kyte at Elizabeth. As he had not the cash, he will visit the Sheriff.

David Thompson, colored, was the next one to appear before the judge on complaint of his wife who said that he was all right except when he was drunk, and then he made their home in Exchange alley very unpleasant. Thompson said he wasn't very sober and that he wasn't very drunk. Judge Coddington gave him ten days in the county jail to consider the matter.

Philip Sheridan, against whom there was an old complaint for being disorderly on Liberty street, was the next to come up. Sheridan was ordered to appear over a month ago, but finally promised to come last Monday morning. He failed to appear, however, and when he came this morning he gave as an excuse that he had to go to Boynton Beach and was unable to return in time. He wanted to talk back, but the judge gave him the same as his comrades had received before him, a fine of $3 or ten days in jail. "I'll go to spite ye, just to spite ye," he proclaimed when he was forthwith taken back to his cell where he cracked jokes and tried to appear happy.

The last one of the morning's batch was a quiet looking colored woman named Mrs. Caledonia Brown, and she pleaded not guilty to the charge of pummelling Rosey Jackson and her child two Sundays ago. Her trial was set down for next Saturday morning.

The Black Flag Tonight.

"The Black Flag," which is considered to be one of the strongest plays of the kind ever written, is full of exciting incidents and clever comedy, and has the sterling qualities of holding the audience interested from beginning to end. It will be the opening attraction of the Bubb Comedy Company, Band and Orchestra, who make their first appearance in this city this evening. The organization comes well recommended, and a series of powerful representations can be looked for, although the prices are but ten, twenty and thirty cents. The "Boy from Boston" will be given at the dime matinee tomorrow, and in the evening "Legally Dead" is announced. These two plays are well known here, from the fact that they were written for the Elmore Children who are with this company. It is expected that the many friends of these clever youngsters will give them a rousing reception on their appearance tomorrow afternoon.

A Saturday Runaway.

Saturday afternoon about four o'clock Mason W. Tyler's team and wagon were standing in front of Charles F. Abbott's residence, 966 Central avenue, when they became frightened. They ran through Central avenue to Sixth street and down the latter street to Liberty street, where they were stopped by George J. Tobin, the North avenue plumber, and returned to the owner. The wagon was upset and completely wrecked. There was no other damage.

Assaulted With Brass Knuckles.

Three men, with their faces badly cut, appeared before Judge Coddington this morning and said that they had all been struck by a colored man wearing brass knuckles last Saturday evening on West Front street. The assault, they said, was entirely unprovoked.

THE CAR STARTED TOO QUICK

AND THE DEATH OF MRS. P. L. PORR'S CHILD IS THE RESULT.

Mrs. Porr Jerked From a New York Street Car While on Her Way to this City and Her Baby Struck the Pavement.

On Saturday, Aug. 24th, Mrs. P. L. Porr, of New York, left her home at 244 West Sixteenth street, and boarded a Tenth avenue belt line car to go to Liberty street ferry. She had her seven-months-old daughter with her, also a small satchel, and was coming to Plainfield to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Grollwisch, on East Front street. When she reached Liberty street she arose in the car with her baby and satchel and got off, but while she had one foot on the pavements and one on the car step the conductor rang the bell and the car started. Mrs. Porr was thrown from the car and her baby fell from her arms in the street. In a few minutes she was assisted by a policeman and several other people standing near. The former ran after the car, stopped it, and secured the conductor's and the driver's names.

Mrs. Porr succeeded in getting to Plainfield with her child, but ever since the latter has been unwell. The mother did not think that her baby had received any serious injuries. As she continued to grow worse it was thought advisable to call a physician. Saturday afternoon there was a turn for the worse and Dr. Hallock was summoned, but before he arrived the child died.

County Physician O'Reilly was called yesterday. After examination and hearing the story he decided that the matter should be referred to the New York authorities.

Mr. and Mrs. Porr took their little babe into the city last evening and their will be a coroner's inquest held probably today.

The impression is that the child died from the effects of the accident. Mrs. Porr has several witnesses who saw the affair and they will be summoned in her behalf.

A Pastor's Resignation.

Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, and Rev. W. F. Brown, of Newark, will in the near future fill the pulpit of the Liberty Street mission; also Rev. J. Lagerbintz, a woman evangelist, who has been successful in paying off debts in Disciple circles, may be sent here. Rev. B. W. Hand's resignation, as pastor, has been received at last and accepted, but he is elder and considered pastor by the Disciple Brotherhood until his successor is appointed.

Death of a Large Woman.

Mrs. Mary I. Cullander died at Elizabethport, Saturday, of dropsy, aged fifty-two. She was one of the largest women of that section of Elizabeth, weighing nearly 350 pounds. Her first husband was Peter Fitzpatrick, who many years ago was a prominent resident of Elizabethport. He was a wholesale liquor merchant in Brooklyn, with a branch at Elizabethport.

Garwood Wants a School House.

Committees from the Boards of Education of Westfield and Cranford will meet at Westfield this week to arrange some plan whereby the children of Garwood will have better facilities for attending school. The Garwood people want a school house erected.

Its Third Reading.

The Watchung avenue extension was passed on its third reading at the Borough Council meeting last Friday evening, instead of the second reading as stated in Saturday's Daily Press. It was a typographical error.

A Good Choice.

The relatives of Dr. C. M. Field, deceased, have selected Judge Wm. A. Coddington to act as administrator of Dr. Field's estate, and he will be so commissioned by Surrogate Parrot this week.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

UNDER THE GLINTING STARS.

THE WEATHER CLEARED AND THE BAND CONCERT TOOK PLACE.

Councilman Frost's Efforts Prove a Popular Feature of Local Life—The Attendants Clothed in Fall Costumes.

All Plainfield was pleased because the Defender won the first of the international yacht races and all Plainfield was also pleased because it cleared off in time for the open air concert Saturday evening. When the music began at half past seven, the crowd that gathered there was scarcely large enough to line the sidewalks, but as the stars one by one peeped out from behind the fast receding clouds, the people came, and in goodly numbers, too, until all the available standing room was filled.

The throng that lined Franklin place and La Grande avenue was very different in one respect from the previous concerts. With the passing away of summer, the white duck pants of the men and the white dresses of the women disappeared and those who attended Saturday evening's affair thought of the cool autumn weather and donned their heavier clothing. The cyclists were there in numbers.

The residents in the neighborhood, in larger numbers than at the previous concert, decorated their houses and lawns with Chinese lanterns.

The music sounded prettier than ever and the animated throng surrounding the square with its brilliantly lighted center and picturesque looking land formed a most pleasing picture. Guttman's band was at its best and the different selections were loudly applauded. "The Russian Carriage Song" was encored again and again and by special request the Honeymoon March closed the evening's programme. Councilman Frost will hold one more concert this fall.

THE BEST PLAINFIELD HAS SEEN.

That is What the Playing is Expected to be Saturday.

Plainfield tennis lovers will have a chance to see some very pretty tennis playing on the Hillside Tennis Club courts next Saturday afternoon. The Miles Brothers and the Ward Brothers, the two crack double teams from Orange, are to be in Plainfield then, and try their skill against four of Plainfield's best. It is expected that the Plainfield representatives will be C. F. Walz and H. V. Ryder, and George Ryder and F. H. Fish, Jr. If all the men are in good condition the playing will be the best Plainfield has seen.

CUMING WAS THIRD.

Result of the Third Race of the Gilchester Serial Handicap.

The third race in the Gilchester Serial Handicap took place over the Elizabeth Springfield course Saturday afternoon. Loehrs, the Elizabeth Athletic Club crack, took first time prize in 26 minutes and 51 3-5 seconds. C. J. Bird, of the same club, won the second in 26:51 4-5. T. A Cuming and S. C. Crane, of this city, won the third and fourth respectively in 26:52 and 26:54. Grobes did not ride. The race itself was won by a dark horse from Elizabeth.

Dislocation of the Arm.

John Moore, a nine-year-old son of Stephenson Moore, the Liberty street baker, was playing in the yard Saturday afternoon with some other boys in the neighborhood, when he sustained a backward dislocation of the right arm near the elbow. John was in a small wagon and in being drawn around the yard fell out, causing the accident. Dr. Simpson happened to pass in his wagon and he was summoned. He reduced the dislocation and the boy is now getting along very nicely.

To Extend the Almshouse.

Plans are being prepared to erect two two-story brick wings on the northwest and southwest ends of the Elizabeth almshouse. The additions will have a deep basement, and each will have one large room, or dormitory, to be used, it is said, for indigent sick cases, also for convalescent patients. The work will be commenced as soon as the plans are completed and bidders advertised for.—Contractor.

A Westfield Row.

As the result of a fight between two brothers, George Lyon and William Lyon, of Cranford, George Lyon is now in the county jail under a charge of assaulting his brother with intent to kill him. The brothers got into a dispute over a trivial matter and came to blows. Only the interference of the neighbors prevented Wm. Lyon receiving serious injuries. Squire Mendell committed George to jail.

FLACK TAPPED THE TILL.

ALSO APPROPRIATED EAST THIRD STREET MISSION MONEY.

A Young Man Could Not Stand Temptation, Though Surrounded By the Best of Influences—Left Town Under a Cloud.

Young men are often peculiarly tempted and led to do things that affect their whole life. Such was the case of James Flack, a well-known young man in Plainfield. James was a Christian, a member of the First Baptist church and East Third Street mission. He worked at different places in town and the utmost confidence was placed in him by his many friends. He was a regular and active attendant at the East Third Street mission and for about a year past has been the treasurer.

The last place at which he was employed was the meat market formerly conducted by G. H. VanNest on Park avenue, and now in charge of Sylvester Randolph, who recently purchased it. At different times money was missed from the shop, until finally James was caught in the act and admitted the deed. He was discharged from the place of business immediately. About that time it was thought best to have a settlement of accounts at the East Third Street Mission, and accordingly those in charge set a night when a report should be made by the treasurer. When the time arrived there was no report and Flack stated that he had no money and was unable to make it good.

This meeting was held two weeks ago last Thursday, and on the following day Flack left town for Newark where he is at present.

Upon inquiry it was impossible to learn the amount missing from either the meat market or mission, but it is understood that the discrepancies have been going on for some time.

There is a feeling of regret evidenced by his friends, and they are unable to solve the question of why he should do such a thing. At the mission everyone had the highest regard for him, and his activity in the work won him many friends.

Had to Postpone His Trip.

Robinson Pound, who had made preparations to accompany J. T. Vail, of Des Moines, Iowa, home next Sunday, has been obliged to forego the pleasure of the trip, owing to his inability to have the will contest, in which he is the defendant as being the recipient of the disputed property, postponed to a later date than next month, when it is set down for a hearing in the courts. Mr. Pound was left a small property by his foster mother, who was a Quakeress, and the other relatives of the deceased woman are endeavoring to set aside the will.

The Mother Wanted Her Boy Punished.

Edward Reilley, a young man of Summit, was arraigned in the Union Court on Friday for ill-treating his mother. She sent word to the Court that her son was a worthless fellow who did not want to work, and when she tried to reason with him he beat her. She wished the Court to give him all the punishment the law allowed for his conduct. Judge McCormick sentenced the prisoner to six months, less one day, in the county jail.

Good Chance to See the Race.

The party who will be taken to see the yacht race Thursday by the tugboat C. E. Evarts will be limited to sixty, instead of seventy as first announced. The boat is one of the best crafts in the New York harbor, and is adapted to stand rough weather. A number of Plainfielders will constitute the party. Edward Maynard will have charge of the refreshments on board, consisting of sandwiches, coffee, lemonade, ice cream, etc.

Scrub Bicycle Event.

An invitation bicycle race was held Saturday afternoon on Maltby's track at the close of the games. The distance was 1¼ miles. Peter Simmonds was first, time, 2:50; H. Woltman, second; and Neil Head, third.

In County Court.

The Union County Court has ratified the sale of $13,250 worth of property belonging to the Barmore estate and Judge Atward, who conducted the sale, was appointed administrator.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SCHOOLS OPEN AGAIN TODAY

THE RISING GENERATION GO FORTH LOADED DOWN WITH BOOKS.

The Corps of Teachers Who Will Instruct for the Coming Year—All the Schools Are Open Except the Stillman.

The long vacation is over and the public schools have opened again, except the classes in the Stillman building, which start work next Monday. As nine o'clock approached the children flocked to the buildings and spent the morning in organizing and arranging the classes. The corps of teachers that will instruct Plainfield's young people this winter is as follows:

Superintendent—Henry M. Maxson

HIGH SCHOOL.

Principal—Ira W. Travell; Ellen E. Miles, Mary G. Caldwell, Lyman R. Allen, Alice M. Whitney, S. Lena Bass.

STILLMAN GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Principal—Carrie B. Runyon, Ninth grade; M. Elizabeth Benedict, Ninth grade; Lena Tomlinson, Eighth grade.

FRANKLIN SCHOOL.

Alice W. Lansing, Eighth grade; Anna M. Day, Eighth grade; Flora Griffin, Seventh grade; Margaret R. Case, Seventh grade; Louise H. Billings, Sixth grade; Principal—Noel J. Bullock, Fifth grade; Anna E. Mankestow, assistant; Emma Force, Fourth grade; Edith Gilbert, Third grade; Julia A. Butler, Second grade; Madge L. Sutphen, First grade; Caroline A. Barber, First grade; Edith R. Bond, kindergarten.

Wood, Second grade; Alice A. Lee, Second grade; Hattie Filmer, First grade; Alice Miller, First grade; Charlotte M. Beekman, assistant.

Drawing teacher, May E. Lavers; music teacher, T. E. Hazell.

A Still Alarm.

The North Plainfield fire department was called out at 11:20 this morning by a still alarm to extinguish a fire in the basement of A. B. Thorn's hardware shop on Somerset street. It was caused by a person carelessly throwing a lighted match on the floor igniting some woodwork that was saturated with gasoline. There was no damage.

Crescents Important Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen will be held on Wednesday evening of this week. This is the most important meeting of the year, as the new Board of Governors will be elected, reports of the work done for the past year will be made, and plans for the coming year discussed.

A Great Mistake.

Although Hendrick Hudson did a great thing when he discovered the Hudson river, he would have enjoyed it much more if he had also found those delicious Hudson county peaches that A. J. Smith & Brother are selling. They will have another large shipment tomorrow. Order a basket and you'll make no mistake.

Come Early.

The peach season is almost over but there are some nice ones left and three hundred baskets of the choicest varieties for canning will be sold by Neuman Brothers tomorrow. Remember, the early comer gets their choice of peaches.

That's the Reason.

A word to the prudent housekeeper to explain why Neuman Brothers are the headquarters in fruits. They have the quantity, they have the quality and then their prices are to suit all. Come and examine their stock at the special sale tomorrow.

Declared Unconstitutional.

The law passed by the last Legislature legislating out of office all Law Judges in the State was declared unconstitutional at eleven o'clock this morning by Judge VanSyckle at Trenton.

THE CHINESE OUTRAGES

Ex-Secretary Foster Talks on the Subject.

The Mass of the People Not Particularly Hostile—Office-Seekers to Blame—Imperial Authorities Always Ready To Act—A Case Where We Did Not Render Justice.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Ex-secretary John W. Foster delivered an address last night in the First Presbyterian church of this city; of which his son-in-law Rev. A. M. Dulles is pastor. In the course of his address he made the following references to the recent Chinese riots: "The opinion formed by me after careful inquiry and observation is that the mass of the population in China, particularly the common people, are not especially hostile to the missionaries and their work. They have been permitted to penetrate every part of that vast empire with as little disturbance as the Chinese laborers have spread themselves over the United States and in case of danger the authorities have usually exerted themselves for their protection.

Officeseekers Responsible.

Occasionally riots have taken place, but they are almost invariably traced to the literati or prospective office holders and the ruling classes. These are often bigotted and conceited to the highest degree and regard the teaching of the missionaries as tending to overthrow the existing order of government and society, which they look upon as a perfect system and sanctified by great antiquity.

Cause of the Disorder.

The war with Japan, which resulted in a humiliating peace and the loss of territory, has greatly weakened the imperial authority and the disbandment of several hundred thousand troops, mostly without receiving the pay due them, has added very much to the prevailing discontent and disorder. Under such circumstances it is not strange that riots should occur and that the widespread missions should be the chief sufferers. These riots have been mostly confined to pillaging and destruction of property, the chief exception being the Kucheng massacre, which has justly horrified the civilized world.

Our Own Conduct Not Perfect.

But we in America should be chary of our condemnation when we recall the many outrages which have been inflicted upon Chinese subjects in the United States, and remember that the Rock Springs, Wyo., riot a few years ago was equally cruel and fatal in its results and reflected more severely upon our authorities. Although only a few weeks have elapsed since the Kucheng massacre, the telegraph informs us that near a score of participants have already been condemned to death, more than a hundred are in prison awaiting trial, and the imperial government is already arranging to fully compensate the missions for all their losses. In contrast with this summary administration of justice by the Chinese authorities stands the fact that no punishment followed the Rock Springs massacre, compensation was delayed for three years and then accompanied by legislation against the Chinese which was pronounced by our supreme court as in violation of treaty, but without remedy.

Should Beware of European Motives

I am, however, in full sympathy with the prevailing demand in the United States—that the Chinese government should be held to a strict accountability for these outrages. But in doing this, care should be exercised by our government that it does not lend itself to advance the sinister projects of European governments, which are on the alert to turn the internal troubles of China to their own benefit. The United States is strong enough to act independently of European combinations, and China has never yet failed to comply with its just demands.

COWS AND HORSES CREMATED.

Thirty-one Animals Perish and Two Barns Burned at Newark, N. J.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 9.—Twenty-six cows, five horses and this summer's crop of hay, together with two barns, most of which were the property of Cornelius Chamberlain, were destroyed by fire yesterday on Elizabeth avenue, just below the almshouse. The cause of the fire is unknown.

DICK YEAGER DIES IN JAIL.

The Noted Desperado's Wounds Prove Fatal.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 9.—Seip Wyatt, alias Dick Yeager, the captured leader o the desperate outlaw band that succeeded the famous Dalton gang in the Oklahoma territory, died from wounds received while fleeing from the officers at South Enid in the Garfield county jail.

Peanut Trust Broken.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 9 —The Virginia peanut trust has been broken by the withdrawal of Gwalthmey & Bunkley of Smithfield, Williams & Son of Petersburg and the Columbia Peanut company of Norfolk. Sales had decreased 60 per cent. under the Virginia Peanut association regime.

Dropped Dead in His Carriage.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 9.—Hon. B. F. Power, a prominent attorney and the leader of the anti-Brice forces in this section, dropped dead in his carriage last evening while out driving with his wife.

Fell Six Stories to His Death.

New York, Sept. 9.—Maggie Fenly, a chambermaid at the Sherman Square hotel, fell from the sixth floor to the cellar down the elevator shaft yesterday afternoon and was instantly killed.

Forest Fires in Wisconsin.

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 9.—Much damage is being done by forest fires along the Chicaga & Northwestern and Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroads north of here.

Socialist Nomination.

Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 9.—The socialist labor party has nominated Michael T. Berry of Haverhill as a candidate for congress in the seventh Essex district.

That Paris Bomb a Hoax.

Paris, Sept. 9.—The alleged bomb found outside the Palais de Justice in Paris yesterday is probably a hoax.

POPE LEO XIII.

Cardinal Gibbons Speaks of His Recent Visit to the Vatican.

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—Cardinal Gibbons talked to a large congregation yesterday at the cathedral of impressions made upon him during his recent European trip. "The first subject which naturally occurs to me," said his eminence, "regards my several visits to the pope. Represent to yourself a man in his eighty-sixth year, pale and emaciated, with a pallor almost of death upon him. His body is more bent than it was eight or ten years ago, but his eye is bright and penetrating; his voice is strong and sonorous; his intellect is remarkably clear and luminous; his memory is most tenacious. He has also an astonishing power of physical endurance which enables him to hold audiences for several consecutive hours, treating on most important subjects with cardinals and foreign representatives as well as private individuals and passing with ease and elasticity of mind from one subject to another. He is remarkably familiar with the public events of the day. The holy father naturally rejoices at the religious progress of the United States and takes a deep interest in our political and social institutions and admires our republic, where we have authority without despotism and liberty without license and where our strength lies in the intelligence and patriotism of the people. For eighteen years the pope has lived within the walls of the vatican except when he takes some recreation in the vatican gardens. He sometimes retires to those gardens and resides in the summer houses during the heated term."

G. A. R. REUNION.

The First National Encampment Ever Held in the South.

Louisville, Sept. 9.—Visitors poured into the Falls City to-day from the south as well as from the north side of the river. Veterans who attended former national encampments of the G. A. R. say they never saw such a large attendance on the first day of the great reunion week. All railways had extra trains, which were heavily loaded. Many Sons of Veterans are here en route to their national encampment at Knoxville. Others are here who never attended these encampments before and who are now en route to the reunion of the Army of the Tennessee at Cincinnati, the first of this week, and to the dedication of the National park on the battlefield of Chickamauga the last of next week. This is the first national encampment ever held south of Mason and Dixon's line and it so happens that three other great events elsewhere this week bring many through Louisville now. There is no doubt of the fulfillment of the general prediction that there will be more union veterans together this week than ever before. Losses by deaths yearly increase, but the desire to visit old battle fields and confer with confederate veterans, who are doing everything to entertain their northern visitors, has attracted thousands.

Off for the G. A. R. Encampment.

Buffalo, Sept. 9.—Two hundred veterans left Buffalo last night on a special train for Louisville to attend the annual encampment of the G. A. R.

CHARLES WHITE CAUGHT.

Mrs. Nagle's Fugitive Husband Found in South Africa.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 9.—A cablegram has been received by E. W. Mann from Johannesburg, South Africa, announcing that Charles White was in custody at that place. White, as the husband of Mrs. Nagle of this city, became notorious by stealing about $150,000 in money, bonds and valuables. He was arrested in New York a couple of years ago and released under bonds, which he forfeited and disappeared. Since that time nothing has been heard from him until the receipt of the dispatch.

ACCUSED OF INCENDIARISM.

Eight Prominent Business Men of Montreal Arrested.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—The police have arrested eight prominent business men charged with arson. Their names are: William Thomas, Lewis Lowenthal, Isaac Davis, George Payeur, Adolphe Sasseville, Edwin Richardson, John Beiser, L. N. Dajenais. All of the accused were in the fur and tailoring business and it is alleged that they set fire to their premises and defrauded the insurance companies out of nearly a million dollars.

1,000 MILES ON A BICYCLE.

Shabel Covers the Distance in 80 Hours and 56 Minutes.

Toronto, Sept. 9.—Shabel, the French long distance bicyclist champion, finished his thousand mile ride at 11.30 last night, 80 hours and 56 minutes from the time of his start. The total time he was on the wheel was 64 hours, 37 minutes. The last ten miles was done in 41 minutes and the last mile in 3.04 1-4. He was much delayed by rain.

Severe Storm in Kansas.

Emporia, Kas., Sept. 9.—A destructive wind and rain storm passed over Emporia last evening. So far as can be learned no lives were lost. The worst damage was done at the state normal school, the new wing, which cost $50,000, being reduced to a mass of ruins.

Bismarck Accepts a Presidency.

Freidrichsruhe, Sept. 9.—Prince Bismarck has accepted the presidency of the Stettin Krieger verein (war society).

WORK MUST BE PUSHED

No More Delay in Completing Our Cruisers.

Secretary Herbert Says Ship Building at the Navy Yards Has Been Lagging for Years—Contractors Are Also Allowed To Escape from Fines Imposed.

Washington, Sept. 9.—Secretary Herbert last evening stated that published statements that he had ordered work on vessels under construction to be expedited were entirely correct. "The ships building in the navy yards have been lagging for years," he said. "For a long time the delay was for want of armor, but armor is now being furnished promptly. The Texas and the Maine, the former of which has just been put in commission, and the latter of which will be in a few days, really ought to have been in service months ago. Officials at navy yards naturally desire to keep a regular force steadly employed, and the disposition is to take workmen from the ships that are building and do repair work with them, putting them back when the repair work is completed. Not only have the Texas and Maine been delayed by this practice but also the monitors Terror, Monadnook and the Puritan. All these ships ought to be now in commission, and I have ordered that they be pushed to completion. Precisely the same reasons which have operated to delay the building of ships at navy yards naturally influence contractors. They are some times tempted to neglect government work and use part of the force on the government ships to do outside work as it comes in.

Penalties Not Imposed.

"The contracts all provide penalties for failure to complete work in time. Penalties for delay have frequently been imposed upon contractors by the navy department, but, unfortunately, congress has in almost every instance, when it was asked, relieved against these penalties. The effect of such acts is necessarily demoralizing. The department has recently given orders to push all work on navy yard ships and has also been urging the contractors to increased diligence. It is to be hoped that penalties incurred in the future for delay will be allowed to stand.

Can Compete with the World.

"There is really nothing about ship building that now renders it difficult in the United States. No good reasons can be given why ships authorized by congress should not be completed with reasonable dispatch, and I am simply insisting on prompt compliance with contract obligations. We have already shown that we can build ships and guns equal to any in the world, and I hope our ship builders, who are now looking for contracts abroad, will demonstrate to the world that ships can be built not only as well but as rapidly in the United States as anywhere in the world. Of course I am pushing along the manufacture of ordinance and everything else at the same time."

$1,000 FOR HIS WIFE'S LOVE.

Harris Stole Murray's Wife and Was First Sued for $50,000.

Topeka, Kan., Sept. 9.—The $50,000 damage suit which Bernard Murray of Colorado brought against ex-congressman W. A. Harris for alienating the affections of his wife has been settled by the payment of $1,000 and the assumption by Mr. Harris of all attorney's fees. Mr. Harris was attentive to Mrs. Murray, and when his wife died a year ago he married her, the latter having secured a divorce in the meantime.

ALLEN CAUGHT IN MISSOURI.

Hogan Turns Out To Be the New York Jail Breaker.

Springfield, Mo. Sept. 9.—The post office swindler held here under arrest by Chief of Police Hinsman as Hogan, on examination Saturday night before United Commissioner Silsby, turns out to be the crook Allen, wanted for robbing the post office at Springfield, Ill., and who recently escaped from Ludlow street jail in New York and for whom large rewards are offered by the authorities.

TRUSTING WOMEN.

THEIR CONFIDENCE OFTEN LEADS TO SUFFERING.

An Ohio Woman's Experience, as Here Related, is Interesting to Every American Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It is a very sad fact that the more a woman trusts to the skill of her physician in treating her female complaints, the longer she is apt to suffer.

Lydia E. Pinkham fully realized this fact when she commenced that exhaustive study that has enabled the women of the world to help themselves. She discovered the source of female complaints, and produced the Vegetable Compound, which is their absolute cure.

When such testimony as the following is given, the woman who thinks should act quickly, and no longer permit herself to trust to incompetent doctors. The Vegetable Compound is sold by all druggists, and every woman should have it.

"The doctors had told me that unless I went to the hospital and had an operation performed I could not live. I had falling, enlargement, and ulceration of the womb.

"I was in constant misery all the time; my back ached; I was always tired. It was impossible for me to walk far or stand long at a time. I was surely a wreck. I decided that I would give your Compound and Sanative Wash a trial.

"I took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and used two packages of Sanative Wash, and I am now almost well. I am stouter and healthier than I have ever been in my life. My friends and neighbors and the doctors are surprised at my rapid improvement. I have told them all what I have been taking."—MRS. ANNETTA BICKMEIER, Bellaire, Belmont Co., O.

THE SIOUX ARE ANGRY

Threaten To Burn the Rosebud Agency.

Agent Wright and His Employes Warned To Leave Within Twenty-one Days—No Troops Available at Present—The Indians Under the Leadership of Hollow Horn Bear.

Chamberlain, S. D., Sept. 9.—The Sioux at Rosebud agency, under the leadership of Hollow Horn Bear, a powerful and influential chief, have warned Indian Agent Wright and his employes to vacate the agency within twenty-one days. They threaten to burn the agency buildings. A determination on the part of the agency to reduce rates paid Indians for hauling freight from Valentine, Neb., to the agency from fifty cents to twenty-five cents a hundred is the cause. The Indians took mortal offense, and runners sent to distant camps brought to the agency about 3,000 angry and excited Indians. Their wrath was partly appeased by a promise to pay thirty-five cents per 100.

Troops Not Available.

Crow Dog, the slayer of Spotted Tail, has been lodged in the agency jail for the part he took in the present difficulty. Fort Niobrara is the nearest military post, but the troops are absent on the regular summer field exercises. Information from Valentine states that settlers adjacent to the reservation are becoming uneasy at the attitude of the Indians.

FIVE BLOWN TO DEATH.

A Dynamite Shed Exploded by the Bullet from a Gun.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 9.—Five persons were blown to instant death and three injured by an explosion of dynamite at Specht's ferry, ten miles from this city on the river side, yesterday. The dead are: Edward Latshaw, aged 35, Victory, Wis.; Mrs. Edward Latshaw, his wife; Ray Latshaw and Matt Latshaw, aged 12 and 6 respectively, their sons; Hans Bjornstad. The injured are: Mabel Latshaw, aged 15, daughter of the above, still unconscious, but may recover; Matt Faber, quarryman, aged 36, Wabasha, Minn., will die; Ed Bench, Lansing, Ia., eye knocked out. The government is building wing dams on the opposite side of the river and stone is being quarried there for the purpose. Latshaw had a large low shanty where the quarrymen are boarded and in one end of this shanty there was stored 150 pounds of dynamite. After breakfast a son of Latshaw was firing at a target near the shanty and was told to stop by the foreman, but he went on and soon the explosion occurred. The concussion was felt for miles. The shanty was blown into splinters. Latshaw was blown into the side of the bluff and almost buried with the sand. The clothing was nearly all torn from Mrs. Latshaw.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENT.

What It Has To Say About Valkyrie's First Defeat.

Glasgow, Sept. 9.—The Herald of this city will say to-day in an article on the defeat of the Valkyrie III. that the result is exceedingly disappointing as it looks so like a repetition of the old disheartening story. It will add: "The Defender won the first race in a breeze that on the whole presumably suited her less than it did the challenger. There seems to be no dissent from the opinion that she won on her merit. If we are doomed to be beaten it is to be hoped we will take the licking like men."

The Telegraph will say that it is manifest the Defender is a wonderful yacht.

The Graphic will say that it cannot see how to explain the defeat of Valkyrie except by admitting that the Defender is the superior boat.

Blames the Excursion Fleet.

The Post in its article on the race will greatly blame the pleasure fleet for crowding on the course, and will say it presumes that Lord Dunraven will not sail the Valkrie again unless effective means are made to prevent similar crowding in the future. The paper will add: "We must not make too much of Saturday's race. It was Valkyrie's first match after her transatlantic voyage, and the course was more familiar to the Defender's skipper and crew than to the Valkyrie's."

Not Their Best Boat.

The Standard will say: "With the best intentions the American yachting authorities are apparently unable to secure fair play. The chances are that should the Defender retain the cup, no British yachtsman will attempt to bring it back unless it is agreed beforehand to sail so far from a great city as to be beyond the reach of the excursion nuisance." The Standard does not admit that the Valkyrie is the British champion yacht, and says that her sailing on the Clyde did not prove that she was better than the Britannia except in a paltry wind.

INGERSOLL ON SPOOKS.

Gives His Reasons for Attending a Spiritualist Camp Meeting.

Elmwood, Ill., Sept. 9.—Concerning his recent appearance at a spiritualist camp meeting, at Onsete Bay, Mass., Robert G. Ingersoll yesterday gave the following characteristic interview to a reporter: "The spiritualists are liberal, willing to hear all sides, and so they invited me to speak at their meetings. Of course I gave them my ideas with perfect candor, and they treated me with perfect fairness. I am not a believer in spiritualism, because I have never had the evidence, the facts, to convince me, but I have no objection to their ideas if they turn out to be true. I believe in intellectual hospitality, and I think that most of the spiritualists, in spite of my infidelity, are my friends. In no respect have I changed my belief. I am just as orthodox as ever, and still believe that facts without faith are better than faith without facts."

G. W. ALDRIDGE SERIOUSLY ILL

Suffering from Appendicitis, But May Avoid an Operation.

Albany, Sept. 9.—Hon. George W. Aldridge, state superintendent of public works, is critically ill from appendicitis at his temporary residence in this city. The physicians in charge think they see in his condition a change for the better and say they hope for a favorable termination without a resort to the operation usual in this form of disease.

NEW YORK ALMOST DRY.

Very Few Saloons Attempted To Do Business Yesterday.

New York, Sept. 9.—Only eighteen excise arrests for violation of Sunday law were made yesterday. The number made on the previous Sunday was thirty. Never before in this city have so few Sunday arrests been made. Two-thirds of the precincts reported clean blotters so far as excise was concerned. Very few saloons attempted to do business even on the sly.

READY FOR NEXT RACE

Dunraven's Pluck Admired by Americans.

Admits the British Boat Was Fairly Beaten Saturday, But Says the Valkyrie Still Has a Chance—Both Boats Remeasured—Comment of the British Press.

New York, Sept. 9.—What few alterations are necessary in the racing rigs of the defender and the Valkyrie will be completed to-day, and everything will be in readiness for the second trial to-morrow of the two great masterpieces of marine arichitecture. While, of course, the vast majority of the people are jubilant over the victory of the Defender in Saturday's great race, when the Valkyrie was defeated in what was claimed to be her own weather, yet sympathy is felt for Lord Dunraven in his disappointment because of genuine sporting qualities he displays and the courage with which he has looked defeat squarely in the face. He does not whine over "hard luck," simply says that they were whipped fairly and, that they have no comment or criticism to make, but that the international races are not yet over and a chance still remains. Much adverse criticism has been indulged in concerning the decidedly disgraceful behavior of the excursion steamboat captains in crowding so closely about the yachts at the starting line that they practically had no room to manoeuvre, and, in fact, almost caused the race to degenerate into a fluke. As it was, both yachts had much cause to complain, but the crowding militated against both boats in an equal degree, so that neither the British nor American public can claim that the act was the result of prejudice. The race was sailed in a dense fog and in very rough weather, and Mr. Glennie, Lord Dunraven's personal representative, says that, with the sea smooth to-morrow, his party hopes to do much better.

Too Shrewd for the Britishers.

Shortly after the yachts started, the Valkyrie at 12.20.46 and the Defender at 12.20.50, they were lost to sight of the spectators, owing to the dense fog which pressed upon the sea, and to obtain any idea of the relative positions of the yachts was impossible. In fact, those who remained in the city knew more about the race than those nearer the scene, because of the numerous press tugs sent out by the news agencies, which followed the racers and brought the news every few minutes to the cable and telegraph offices established at various points and on steamships anchored in the open sea. A few seconds before 12.40 o'clock the Defender went about on the port tack, and the Valkyrie speedily followed her, slightly in the lead. Then, at 1.12 o'clock, the Valkyrie went back to the starboard tack, heading to the northeast, followed by the Defender, which was still astern of the British yacht. And then came a move that thrilled all those who managed to catch a glimpse of it through the mist. Lord Dunraven's yacht attempted to pass across the Defender's bows but did not succeed, which showed that the American competitor had gained at least the four seconds which the Valkyrie had in her favor at the start. It was at 1.49 o'clock that the Valkyrie gave up the effort to cross the Defender's bows, and half a minute later the Defender split tacks with her.

Defender Accomplishes the Feat.

At 1:53 the Valkyrie came about to follow on Defender's quarter. The Yankee was now the one to try to see what could be done in the way of crossing bows. The two racers stood toward each other until the Valkyrie, by going about, avoided what otherwise would have been inevitable. The Defender was fairly in the lead and would have crossed the Valkyrie's bow in a few seconds more. After splitting tacks again at 1:57 o'clock, the boats stood apart until 2 o'clock sharp, when the Defender once more came to the starboard tack, and thus they held on until able to turn the first stake. At 3 o'clock, when the turning stake was fairly in view, the Yankee was on the Englishman's weather bow and fully a quarter of a mile in the lead. The Defender tacked first, at 3:32, when she took in her jib-topsail preparatory to setting the big balloon jib in its place for the run home. The Valkyrie also furled and set the same sails. The official time of the turn was: Defender, 3:36:29; Valkyrie, 3:39:52. It had taken the Defender 3 hours, 15 minutes, 39 seconds to reach the turn and the Valkyrie 3 minutes and 27 seconds longer. By this time the wind had shifted to southward, and, instead of a run home, it was a broad reach. The Defender steadily drew away from her rival, and that, too, in spite of the fact that the breeze dropped as they got inshore.

Celebrating the Victory.

As they neared home and it was seen that the Defender was far in the lead the vast throng of excursion craft of all descriptions made a deafening chorus of noise with their whistles and the throngs aboard them almost split their throats in their endeavors to make themselves heard above the roar of the steam. Our boat received a royal welcome, but little more than that accorded to the Valkyrie when she, too, crossed the mark. The official corrected time was: Defender, 4:59:55; Valkyrie, 5:08:44. The Defender, being allowed 29 seconds by the Valkyrie, therefore won by 8 minutes and 49 seconds.

Remeasurement of the Boats.

A reporter of the United Press found members of the regatta committee in session at the New York Yacht club at 11 o'clock last night. Mr. Hyslop was also there in conference with them. He remained closeted with the committee for some time and shortly after his departure, the following notice was posted on the club's bulletin board: "At the request of the Earl of Dunraven and with the acquiescence of Mr. Iselin the measurer of the New York Yacht club yesterday marked the yachts Valkyrie and Defender at each end of the load-water line. When this was done at the Erie basin yesterday the measurer, at the request of the America's Cup committee, verified the measurements taken on Friday, which were confirmed by the measurements taken yesterday.

Canada's Sonneteer Dead.

Montreal, Sept. 9.—E. Brownlow, better known to the literary world as "Serafa," died yesterday, aged 38. He was considered Canada's foremost sonneteer.

And now if the Defender will only win two more straight. It is so pleasant to beat the English.

Some men are counting upon getting to heaven because they have never been in jail—Ram's Horn.

Ex Speaker Crisp sets his foot down on the third term talk and declares himself to be for William C. Whitney.

State Senator Voorhees, chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee, has issued a call for a meeting of the Senate Committee at Trenton next Tuesday, to take action on a public investigation by the committee.

On September 17th the Liquor Dealers' Association of New Jersey will hold a convention in Paterson. The association boasts a membership of 1,000. One of the matters to be considered is what course the association will take in the coming campaign. The Elective County Judiciary law is regarded by the saloon keepers as inimical to their interests, since under it judges might be elected who would refuse to grant licenses. It is said the deliberations of the liquor dealers may have much influence on the action of both State conventions.

The opening of the public schools this morning and the knowledge that there are many children who are not at the desks that should be there, brings forcibly to the mind the admirable truant law which was passed by a recent New York Legislature, and which school officials all through the State are endeavoring to enforce. According to the new law, a boy over fourteen may leave school, but it must be shown satisfactorily that from that time until he is sixteen years old he is engaged in some business; otherwise he will be obliged to go to school. Under the old law he could leave school at fourteen unconditionally.

The utterances of Senator Hill to the New York State Democrats on the question of personal liberty as applied to the present condition of excise matters in New York were clear and concise enough for anyone to understand. While they contained many poignant truths, peculiarly applicable to the present age, the idea advanced by the Senator that the present excise law was framed with the understanding that a liberal construction was to be placed upon it by the officials enforcing it, showed a fatal conception of duty on the part of those who were instrumental in placing it upon the statute books. There are too "many men of many minds" in this world to admit of making legislation on the principle of tacit understandings. The letter of the law must be explicit in prescribing what can be done without violating it.

What is the matter with our State, that she is so tardy in exhibiting before the world her resourses, her wealth and the industries of her populace? The news comes that the State Commissioners to the Atlanta Exposition have offered to advance funds for the erection of a small building at the great fair to represent New Jersey. Note the irony of the offer. Jersey must play second fiddle to her sister States, and must make of herself the butt of the ridicule by receiving almost as a gift, a tiny domicile. No funds have been provided to defray even railroad expenses for these men, and they will probably have to pay their expenses from their own pockets, and trust for an appropriation of next winter's Legislature to reimburse them. New Jersey loses dignity and the Commissioners gain credit by these conditions.—New Brunswick Home News.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The beautiful weather we have been having and the knowledge that the riding season will soon be at an end brought out the riders in full force yesterday. Quite a number of the local wheelmen and several out-of-town riders gathered at the Crescent Oval in the afternoon and tried their speed on the track. Although some of the riding was very fast there were no regular races and no regular time was taken. Thomas U. Smith, on his Cleveland Swell Special, led the bunch at the tape every time but one.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Bert Demarest and two of his friends took a wheeling trip to the Oranges yesterday.

Albert Jaeger and Jacob Johnson, of the West End, rode their wheels to South Beach on Saturday.

F. L. C. Martin, the popular cycle dealer, will act as judge in the bicycle races at the Somerset County Fair at Somerville on Thursday afternoon.

The Union County Roadsters are getting ready for the 100-mile open handicap run of the Newark Century Cycle Club. The Rahway Wheelmen expect to enter eight or ten of their best men in the race, and they are now actively training for the event.

Entries to the Newark Century Cycle Club's 100-mile run over the Elizabeth-Spring-Rahway course, September 21st, close next Saturday with M. M. Rutan, No. 301 New Jersey avenue, Newark. This will be one of the road events of the year. The club having the most starters will win a piano. Other prizes are offered for time, etc.

The prettiest parts of New Jersey, and over the best roads in the State, are covered by the itinerary of the Gramercy - Metropolis Wheelmen's joint century for next Sunday. It is proposed to start from the West Forty-second street ferry in New York at 5:30 a. m., sharp, and wheel through Montclair, Orange, part of Millburn course, Springfield, Plainfield, etc. Dinner at New Brunswick. The pace will be from eight to ten miles an hour.

Fiction and Travel.

Fiction and travel are the strong points of the September Cosmopolitan, which, by the way, illustrates better than any previous number the perfection of its plant for printing a magazine of the highest class. Conan Doyle, H. H. Boyesen and Clark Russell, are among the story-tellers. A well-known New York lawyer relates the story of a "A Famous Crime," the murder of Doctor Parkman by Professor Webster. A delightful sketch of "An English Country House Party" is from the pen of Nina Larre Smith, the house at which she visited being no less than the historic Abbotsford, still occupied by the direct descendants of Sir Walter Scott.

A Pleasure Palace.

Proctor's new Pleasure Palace in New York is equipped with every convenience that ingenuity and skill can suggest to enhance the comfort of its patrons. The aisles are broad and the seats so arranged that anybody can come in or go out without disturbing others, while the upholstering and decorations are exceedingly artistic. Elevators run continually from basement to roof. The bill for this week is an excellent one, including Professor Lockhart's trained elephants, a most remarkable and altogether novel entertainment. After the regular stage performance, which ends at eleven o'clock, a musical entertainment is given in the German cafe until midnight.

—Strange, but true. Even though you have a comfortable bed, you should lay in your coal for the winter. George O. Stevens.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

AN ORDINANCE

An ordinance to amend "An ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the city of Plainfield," approved April 23, 1874, amended January 4, 1875, December 7, 1881, September 15, 1883, October 7, 1884, November 3, 1891, December 8, 1891 and December 30, 1895.

Sec. 1. That section 3 of the amendment approved Sept. 15, 1883, to the ordinance the title of which is recited in the title of this ordinance, be and the same is hereby amended so that it shall read as follows:

Sec. 3. No person shall cry or openly expose for sale any wares, merchandise, fruits, herbs, meats, fish, goods or chattels, or keep open any shop, store or place in which said articles are sold, or in which the occupation of barber, shoemaker, blacksmith, silversmith or other trade requiring the exercise of manual labor is carried on, on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, except in cases of necessity and the sale of milk and medicine. And any person violating this section shall upon conviction thereof be fined in a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars, or be imprisoned in the city or county jail not exceeding ten days, or both, in the discretion of the Court. Provided, however, that this section shall not apply to any person who habitually observes the seventh day, commonly called Saturday as the Sabbath and who carries on his business within his premises in such a manner as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath.

Adopted by the Common Council Sept. 5, 1895.

Approved by the Mayor Sept. 6, 1895.

VOORHEES' WORK IN NEWARK.

Making Inquiries About the Water Contract Entered Into in 1889.

Senator Voorhees, of Elizabeth, chairman of New Jersey's Lexow committee, spent several days in Newark last week preparing for a resumption of the investigation begun at Trenton. He had several secret consultations with ex-Alderman Tyler Parmly, James Martin, of the State Board of Arbitration, and some of the local newspaper men. Detective Gregory was employed, and is at work for the Senator.

Most of the time was spent in inquiring into the making of the water contract by a Republican Common Council in 1889. Senator Ketcham, who was a member of that Council and also a member of the committee, did not attend the consultations with Senator Voorhees. Neither did any of the other members of the committee.

Senator Voorhees promised the local politicians who tendered him their assistance that James E. Howell, local counsel for the committee, should be replaced by Mr. Corbin if the committee made a visit to Newark. Mr. Howell is the law partner of Joseph Coult, who, as City Counsel, drew the water contract.

Senator Voorhees admitted very cheerfully that he could not find much to begin work upon, and expressed doubt as to whether anything further would be done. He appointed an expert to examine the Essex road board's accounts, and it is said found that they had been very carelessly kept.

The committee will hold a meeting at Trenton tomorrow, and it will then be decided whether work shall be resumed. Senator Ketcham, E. B. Gadd's, George M. Ballard and other well-known Republicans framed and voted for the Newark water contract. It was afterwards approved by the old Newark Aqueduct Board.

THE FIGHT FOR DELEGATES.

Voorhees Still in the Field, But His Prospects Poor.

The fight in Union county for the delegates runs about the same. Voorhees is still a candidate against John Kean and whichever candidate survives the primaries in Union county will receive the entire support of the Union county delegation, and it is probably on account of this that the impression goes abroad that Voorhees is not a bona-fide candidate. He is willing to concede all the delegates to Kean should he get the majority, but Voorhees and his friends claim that he stands a very good chance of getting the majority himself.

Others reason it out that such an arrangement is favorable to John Kean, and ultimately means that Kean will get the delegation, which is very important to Kean just now.

It has been stated that Voorhees had so far dropped out of the fight as to promise to make the nominating speech for John Kean, but things have not progressed as far as that, for Voorhees reiterates with much positiveness that he is a candidate and will continue to be one until he is defeated, and that he would not in consideration of the friends he has throughout the State, take any other course.—Newark Advertiser.

His Hind Leg Was Broken, But Is Now Placed in a Cast.

The improvements in modern surgery have been very great and very many lives have been saved through its efficiency. The changes, although less noted, have been as great in canine surgery. Fred Freeman, of Sandford avenue, has a pet dog called "Bud", which is a great pet in the family. The dog, which is quite a small one, broke its hind leg the other day, a large dog stepping on it. Dr. Tomlinson was called, set the broken bone and now the little dog carries a plaster cast on his leg which will remain there for a month.

Plainfield Out of It.

The tournament ot the South Orange Field Club came to an end Saturday afternoon as far as the Plainfield boys entered were concerned. Henry V. Ryder, the last to remain in the tournament, was defeated in the second round by J. D. Forbes by the score of 6-3, 6-3.

STRUCK THE MINISTER.

A New Providence Barber Makes an Unwarranted Attack on Rev. Mr. Bice.

John Metri, a barber at New Providence, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Rev. Henry Bice, pastor of the Methodist church in that village, who charged him with assault and battery. Dr. Bice visited Metri's shop about one week ago and after the barber had shaved him, the pastor spoke pleasantly to him and was preparing to hand him some money when without the least provocation the barber struck him in the face. The attack was so unwarranted and outrageous that the pastor was amazed, but when he demanded an explanation the barber talked in unintelligible language for several moments. The man has given no reason for his remarkable attack and Dr. Bice cannot understand it, but thinks it may have been the result of a grudge Metri held against him for stopping the illegal work of some of Metri friends.—Summit Record.

Talk About the Fair Grounds.

The success of the State Fair at Waverly this year will, it is expected, result in the making of important improvements on the fair grounds. The trolley has brought the grounds into close communication with Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Plainfield, Orange and other towns, and suggests the use of the property for other purposes during the other fifty-one weeks of the year when it is not wanted for the State Fair. With some alterations and improvements, the grounds could be used for different forms of out-of-door entertainment and be rented to circuses. There has been some talk of its purchase by the Essex Park Commission, but the approaches to the ground from Newark are uninviting, and the commission has no idea of making a public park in that locality.

IF THE SOUTH HAD WON.

An Observer Who Thinks It Would Have Soon Discarded Slavery.

Here we are on the border of three States, with Catlettsburg, Ky., a mile to the west, and Scranton, O., just over the Ohio River. We have just come over the mountains and are resting a few hours between trains in a larger and finer depot than Richmond's, although this is only a crossing.

Just at this point, before crossing over into my native Buckeye State, it is good to stop and moralize a bit, and the wait is long enough at least for that. We have traversed some of the loveliest country in the Eastern States: not bold, bald crags and bluffs as in the Rockies, but hills verdure-crowned to the summits; tall, rolling slopes teat rise gently, not confused now with precipitous haste. We have trailed alongside the New River for sixty miles, until it debauches into the Great Kanawha, and marveled at the great boulders, some as large as a house, that impede its course—great giants' playthings, perhaps. This all may not all be so wild and rugged as the B. & O. Railroad can show along its line, where the Cheat River flows, and one can look downward from the flying train half a mile into the charming valley, but it is more restful, and the roadbed is better ballasted. Not a suspicion of rocking and rolling of the train and consequent seasickness here on the C. & O., as on its sister system over the mountains.

But in the midst of all this natural beauty and bounty we have seen only miserable huts, board shanties, not a decent town, not a ray of civilization or progress having penetrated these precincts. It has been more or less so all the way through Virginia, and notably West Virginia, whose only decent town, so far, has been its capital city. My wife turns to a lady in the depot and frankly asks how they manage to live here. "Oh, somehow we get along and make a living. We buy most everything we eat in Ohio."

What is the reason there is so much difference between these and the northern States? Simply because this is "Secessia," and it has been left with the dregs of the war on it to curse and defile it. Here is found the aftermath of the late war. Here slavery, of course, ceased, and the world came to a standstill in consequence—at least so far as this "neck of the woods" is concerned. It is the Panhandle of the South; but the whole "skillet" is made of the same metal.

What if the Confederacy had succeeded. I am not waving the "bloody shirt," mind you, but only guessing, as all good Yankees can and should do. The whole South (or "Soath," as they call it) would have been better and brighter—and it is really half the country, in numbers if not in area. But whether it would have improved at the expense of other portions of the Union is a question. We think not, for slavery would have been "done away with" by natural and rational causes by this time, without doubt. It would have evolved itself, perhaps, into a better condition, at least for the ex-slaves and their progeny, without such sudden change and rupture. Whether slavery was discontinued by war or by natural causes, it is safe to say that we would have been by this time sufficiently enlightened not to return to it. It is also safe to say that the great majority of the voters, both black and white, in the South, or white voters alone (and they govern in the South still, in spite of numbers), would not return to slavery. Existing conditions seem to suit all classes now, and there is not such a radical difference as one not on the ground would suppose. The blacks still work for and serve the whites, and on such wages as make independence impracticable, and slavery, except for the sentiment of it, almost a welcome alternative. That nine-tenths of the labor of the South is performed by blacks is not a rash statement—meaning menial labor.

If the South had prevailed, and a new republic had been set up, the dividing line would perhaps be this panhandle of Virginia, extended to Canada, and another division at the Mississippi River later on, for the fabric would not have been strong enough, instituted by the minority, to have long remained intact. Aaron Burr's scheme of disruption, early in the century, would have become a reality.

The Southern people would not have retained slavery long. They were not wholly wedded to it. Few Southern people were slaveholders. They were a handful, like the Irish landlords or the Mormon polygamists. Many of the Southern people were opposed to it. Beside, there were forces at work among the negroes themselves that would have helped them along. Slavery would have been gradually dethroned and a more united sentiment between North and South would exist to-day.—Correspondence Hartford Courant.

Solomon and the Fool.

One day Solomon and a fool were walking together.

"Solomon," said the fool, "why is it you never talk?"

"Fool," said Solomon, "that I may listen to other people's wisdom."

And then after a pause:

"But why is it you always talk?"

"That other people, I suppose," quoth the fool, "may listen to my wisdom."

Whereat Solomon held his tongue and went home thoughtfully.—Truth.

Wifely Solicitude.

Mrs. McSwat—I want to know, dear, if the mosquitoes are biting you as badly as they are me.—Chicago Tribune.

DUMAS'S GOLDEN RULES.

The Author's Prescription for Health, Wealth and Wisdom.

"Walk two hours every day; sleep seven hours every night; go to bed always alone, if you need to sleep; get up as soon as you wake; work as soon as you get up; eat only when you are hungry, and drink only when you are thirsty; eat and drink always slowly.

"Never speak except when it is necessary, and never say more than half of what you think. Never write anything that you cannot sign, and never do anything that you cannot avow. Never forget that others will count upon you, and that you must never count upon them. Value money at its real worth, neither more nor less. It is a good servant, but a bad master.

"Keep away from women until you are 20, and avoid them when you are 40. Never attempt to produce anything without a thorough understanding of that which you undertake, and destroy as little as possible. Pardon everybody beforehand, to be on the safe side. Do not despise men; do not hate them; and do not laugh at them beyond measure. Pity them.

"Think of death every morning when you see the light, and every evening on the approach of darkness. When your sufferings are great look your grief in the face; it will console you itself and teach you something. Try to be simple, to become useful, to remain free, and before denying God wait until somebody proves to you that he does not exist.

"For a man and for a woman there is a succession of duties to be fulfilled which enables them always to look ahead and to become accustomed to the absence of the objects of their most dear affections. The world would finish too quickly if the first child was not able to survive the death of the first mother.

"Misfortunes and trials attack noble souls without hurting them. They are like the rocks of granite that the sea covers in times of tempest with its furious waves, fancying that it is drowning them, while it is merely washing them, so that they reappear again in the sunlight more polished and more shining than ever.

"Adversity embellishes those whom it cannot cast down. By the law of nature a man should have many children. He should raise them well, so that they may be useful; and he should love them so that they may be happy. To get married when a man is young is healthy; to choose, in no matter what class, a good, honest girl, to love her with all his heart and soul, and to make her a reliable companion and a prolific mother; to work to raise his children, and to save them when dying the example of a life—that is the true meaning and object of life; the rest is only error, crime or folly.

"In truth, the average man is only above ambient humanity on one single plane, virtue; and, as there can be no virtue without humility, those alone have the right to consider themselves the superiors of others to whom the knowledge that they are superior is denied.

"Talent, and especially its higher form called genius, is involuntary. It is not the result of the efforts of man; it is, like beauty, the gift of God. That is why it is of secondary order; and posterity will only remember it for its virtue, its sincerity, and its communion in universal progress. Glory for glory's sake is a shameful speculation.

"The men who rejoice in their celebrity are simpletons; the men who are proud of their genius are fools.

"There is one thing that is especially beautiful in the great and pure affections, and that is that, after the pleasure which they afford has passed away, there remains the happiness of their recollection.

"Very often an unexpected grief or an unmerited misfortune gives to a man an energy and a perseverance which he could never find in happiness. And after such trials a man often becomes superior who would have remained simple and vulgar if he had always been happy. He who is without energy when young will never have it; grief is not a winter fruit; it never grows in the snow.

"One may expect everything from a man of energy to whom misfortune has given courage and ambition.

"ALEXANDRE DUMAS, fils."

She Got Rid of the Burglar.

Here is one way of "shooing" of a burglar:

The heroine was a woman living in the Central part of the State, whose husband had been exceedingly ill. At last the crisis of the disease was safely past, and late one night the patient dropped off into a quiet doze—his first slumber for weeks. His wife sat there watching him anxiously, afraid to move a muscle for fear of disturbing him. Suddenly the figure of a perfectly strange man appeared in the open doorway.

With thoughts only for her sleeping husband, the woman tiptoed toward the door and, with fingers on lip demanded in a scarcely audible whisper:

"How did you get in?"

Utterly taken back, the burglar, in the same whisper, replied:

"By the dining-room window."

"Well," proceeded the woman, "go right out by the same way you came, and just as quietly as possible."

And the burglar obeyed.

GETTING FOUNDATIONS.

Bedrock is Deeply Buried in the Lower Part of New York.

The first and most important question in designing the work on one of the sky scrapers of New York, is always that of getting a foundation.

It must be decided whether it is possible to get to solid rock with such foundations, and if not, what sort of a base will safely carry the weight of the building. In Chicago, for instance, where the overlying stratum of clay lies upon a bottomless sea of soft mud, there is nothing to do but to lay a complete gridiron work of steel rails over the whole surface and trust to luck that nothing will disturb the upper crust and let the buildings sink down out of sight.

In other places where rock is down 150 feet or so from the surface, as in the case of the American Tract Society's building at Nassau and Spruce streets, piling is resorted to, driven in until it wedges the loose sand into one solid mass.

The proposed Johnston building will weigh about 30,000 tons, but fortunately the bed rock was found to be only forty-two feet below the sidewalk. Only a few blocks away, at the site of the American Surety Company's building at Broadway and Pine street, the rock was seventy feet below the sidewalk. At that site the foundation was carried to the rock by means of pneumatic caissons just as the foundations for the Brooklyn Bridge towers were sunk.

This is a slow but sure process, but it is also very expensive. For the American Surety building, on a plot about 80 feet square, the foundation work alone cost about $175,000.

The Hydraulic Construction Company undertook the work of sinking the foundations for the Johnston building to the solid rock by plans devised by its general manager, William D'H. Washington, and it guaranteed to do the work in fifty days.

The foundation which it was proposed to put in consisted of a series of round shields, 44 in number, each to be about 27 feet long, and to vary, according to the load each was to bear, from six feet to thirteen feet in diameter. These cylinders were long enough to reach from the level of the old cellars to the rock. The province of each cylinder was not to bear any weight, but to act merely as a shield within which men could work, after they were sunk, to dig out the enclosed earth and then to build up within the cylinder a solid column of concrete upon which to rest the separate steel columns which will carry the building. Each of these columns will have from 342 to 1,044 tons weight to carry.

Fitted around the inner edge of the cylinder and meeting each other were hollow iron castings, each a segment of a circle and about two feet long. These were sharp on the lower edge, but irregular in outline, and each was pierced with about 100 small holes. To the center of each of these shoe pieces was attached a 1 1-4 inch iron pipe which ran to the top of the cylinder, where it bent over the edge and had a hose coupling attached.

The idea is to set the cylinders on end, each in the place where it was needed, attach a hose pipe to each iron pipe, and then with a powerful pump force water down through the thousand or so 1-8 inch holes, and let the water dig a way down for its cylinder. It is a novel application of the hydraulic system of sinking piles or tubes, which first attracted attention in this neighborhood when the first iron pier was built at Long Branch in the seventies.

On top of the whole was piled a great grillwork of iron ship's ballast, and pig iron weighing about 35 tons. This was to force the cylinder down through the earth as fast as the water jets softened out a place for it.

The pumps were started. Immediately there began a great bubbling about the apparent base of the cylinder, and a great stream of water, laden with sand and soil, came up and flowed off to a drain, whence it was again pumped up and led away into the sewer.

The pumps had hardly been started before one could see the cylinder slowly settling. It went down steadily at the rate of about an inch a minute until it had gone down four or five feet, and then, apparently having struck a very soft spot, it settled a foot in about five seconds.

The Largest Sailing Ship.

The new five masted sailing ship, Potosi, recently launched at the Tecklenborg Yard, Bremen, Germany, for the Hamburg firm of F. Laeisz & Co., is the largest sailing vessel now afloat.

The Potosi, which is built of Siemens-Martin steel, is 304 feet in length over all, 49 feet, 9 inches wide over the plating admidship, and 31 feet, 2 and 1-2 inches deep from upper edge of keel to under the main deck admidships. Her registered tonnage is 3,995 gross tons, and her displacement on an average draught of 25 feet is 8,580 tons, with a carrying capacity of 6,510 tons.

The masts and larger yards are of steel. The height of the main mast from keel to truck is 210 feet, and its diameter at the deck 34 inches. All the standing tackle is of galvanized steel wire, and the running gear partly of wire and partly of hemp. The spread of canvas with all sails set will be about 5,000 square yards. Special stiffening and strengthening arrangements have been adopted in view of the heavy masts and enormous wind pressure on the sails.—Iron Age.

What are drugs? Are they not specially prepared to make this life more enjoyable? Each patent medicine is made to cure some special thing. Each oil, each tincture, each herb, is good for some special purpose. If your health is not perfect some one of these things will make you feel better.

But whatever it is, the quality should be good—it should be pure.

We are druggists to furnish that kind.

THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

By BRANDER MATTHEWS

He turned around in his chair slowly and measured with his eye the proportions of the room, the distance between the desks and the safe and the clock. He glanced up at the sloping glass roof above him. Then he smiled again, and again sat silent for a minute. He rose to his feet and stood with his back to the fire. Almost in front of him was the clock in the corner.

He took out his watch and compared its time with that of the clock. Apparently he found that the clock was too fast, for he walked over to it and turned the minute hand back. It seemed as though this was a more difficult feat than he supposed or that he went about it carelessly, for the minute hand broke off short in his fingers. A spasmodic movement of his as the thin metal snapped pulled the chain off its cylinder, and the weight fell with a clash.

All the clerks looked up; and the red-headed office boy was prompt in answer to the bell Paul rang a moment after.

"Bobby," said the young man to the boy as he took his hat and overcoat, "I've just broken the clock. I know a shop where they make a specialty of repairing timepieces like that. I'm going to tell them to send for it at once. Give it to the man who will come this afternoon with my card. Do you understand?"

"Cert.," the boy answered. "If he ain't got your card, he don't get the clock."

"That's what I mean," Paul responded, as he left the office.

Before he reached the street door he met Mr. Wheatcroft.

"Paul," cried the junior partner explosively, "I've been thinking about that—about that—you know what I mean! And I've decided that we had better put a detective on this thing at once!"

"Yes," said Paul, "that's a good idea. In fact, I had just come to the same conclusion. I——"

Then he checked himself. He had turned slightly to speak to Mr. Wheatcroft, and now he saw that Major Van Zandt was standing within ten feet of them, and he noticed that the old bookkeeper's face was strangely pale.

CHAPTER III.

During the next week the office of Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co. had its usual aspect of prosperous placidity. The routine work was done in the routine way; the porter opened the office every morning and the office boy arrived a few minutes after it was opened; the clerks came at nine, and a little later the partners were to be seen in the inner office reading the morning's correspondence.

The Whittiers, father and son, had had a discussion with Mr. Wheatcroft as to the most advisable course to adopt to prevent the future leakage of the trade secrets of the firm. The senior partner succeeded in dissuading the junior partner from the employing of detectives.

"Not yet," he said, "not yet. These clerks have all served us faithfully for years and I don't want to submit them to the indignity of being 'shadowed'—that's what they call it, isn't it?—of being shadowed by some cheap hireling who may try to distort the most innocent acts into evidence of guilt, so that he can show us how smart he is."

"But this sort of thing can't go on forever," ejaculated Mr. Wheatcroft. "If we are to be underbid on every contract worth having we might as well go out of the business!"

"That's true, of course," Mr. Whittier admitted, "but we are not sure that we are being underbid unfairly——"

"The Tuxedo Company have taken away three contracts from us in the past two months," cried the junior partner. "We can be sure of that, can't we?"

"We have lost three contracts, of course," returned Mr. Whittier, in his most conciliatory manner, "and the Tuxedo people have captured them. But that may be only a coincidence, after all."

"It is a pretty expensive coincidence for us," snorted Mr. Wheatcroft.

"But because we have lost money," the senior partner rejoined gently, laying his hand on Mr. Wheatcroft's arm, "that's no reason why we should also lose our heads. It is no reason why we should depart from our old custom of treating every man fairly. If there is any one in our employ here who is selling us, why, if we give him rope enough, he will hang himself sooner or later."

"And before he suspends himself that way," cried Mr. Wheatcroft, "we may be forced to suspend ourselves."

"Come, come, Wheatcroft," said the senior partner, "I think we can afford to stand the loss a little longer. What we can't afford to do is to lose our self-respect by doing something irreparable. It may be that we shall have to employ detectives—but I don't think the time has come yet."

"I THINK WE CAN STAND THE LOSS A LITTLE LONGER."

"Very well," the junior partner declared, yielding an unwilling consent. "I don't insist on it. I still think it would be best not to waste any more time—but I don't insist. What will happen is that we shall lose the rolling of those steel rails for the Springfield and Athens Road—that's all."

Paul Whittier had taken no part in this discussion. He agreed with his father, and he saw no need for him to urge any further argument.

Now he looked up and asked when they intended to put in the bid for the rails. His father then explained that they were expecting a special estimate from the engineers at the Ramapo works, and that it would probably be Saturday before this could be discussed by the partners and the exact figures of the proposed contract determined.

"And if we don't want to lose that contract for sure," insisted Mr. Wheatcroft, "I think we had better change the combination on that safe."

"May I suggest," said Paul, "that it seems to me better to leave the combination as it is. What we want to do is not to get this Springfield and Athens contract so much as to find out whether some one really is getting at the letter-book. Therefore we mustn't make it any harder for the some one to get at the letter-book."

"Oh, very well," Mr. Wheatcroft assented a little ungraciously. "Have it your own way. But I want you to understand now that I think you are only postponing the inevitable."

And with that the subject was dropped. For several days the three men who were together for hours in the office of the Ramapo Iron and Steel Works refrained from any discussion of the question which was most prominent in their minds.

It was on Wednesday that the tall clock that Paul Whittier had broken returned from the repairers. Paul himself helped the men to set it again in its old place in the corner of the office, facing the safe which occupied the corner diagonally opposite.

It so chanced that Paul came down late on Thursday morning, and perhaps this was the reason that a pressure of delayed work kept him in the office that evening long after every one else. The clerks had all gone, even Major Van Zandt, always the last to leave—and the porter had come in twice before the son of the senior partner was ready to go for the night.

"CAN'T I CARRY YOUR BAG FOR YOU?"

The gas was lighted here and there in the long, narrow, deserted store, as Paul walked through it from the office to the street. Outside the swift twilight of a New York November had already settled down on the city.

"Can't I carry yer bag for ye, Mister Paul?" asked the porter, who was showing him out.

"No, thank you, Mike," was the young man's answer. "That bag has very little in it. And besides I haven't got to carry it far."

The next morning Paul was the first of the three to arrive. The clerks were in their places already, but neither the senior or the junior partner had yet come. The porter happened to be standing under the wagon archway as Paul Whittier was about to enter the store.

The young man saw the porter and a mischievous smile hovered about the corners of his mouth.

"Mike," he said, pausing on the doorstep, "do you think you ought to smoke while you are cleaning out our office in the morning?"

"Sure I haven't had me pipe in me mouth this mornin' at all," the porter answered, taken by surprise.

"But yesterday morning?" Paul pursued.

"Yesterday mornin'," Mike echoed, not a little puzzled.

"Yesterday morning at ten minutes before eight you were in the private office smoking a pipe——"

"But how did you see me, Mister Paul?" cried Mike in amaze; "ye was late in comin' down yesterday, wasn't ye?"

Paul smiled pleasantly.

"A little bird told me," he said.

"If I had the bird I'd wring his neck for tellin' tales," declared the porter.

"I don't mind your smoking, Mike," the young man went on; "that's your own affair; but I'd rather you didn't smoke a pipe while you are tidying up in the private office."

"Well, Mister Paul, I won't do it again," the porter promised.

"I encourage him?" inquired Mike.

"Yes," Paul explained, "yesterday morning you let him light his cigarette from your pipe—didn't you?"

"Were ye peekin' in thro' the winder, Mister Paul?" the porter asked eagerly. "Ye saw me—an' I never saw ye at all."

"No," the young man answered, "I can't say that I saw you myself. A little bird told me."

And with that he left the wondering porter and entered the store. Just inside the door was the office boy, who hastily hid an unlighted cigarette as he caught sight of the senior partner's son.

When Paul saw the red-headed boy he smiled again mischievously.

"Bob," he began, "when you want to see who can stand on his head longest, you or Danny the footblack, don't you think you could choose a better place than the private office?"

The office boy was quite as much taken by surprise as the porter had been; but he was younger and quicker-witted.

"And when did I have Danny in the office?" he asked defiantly.

"Yesterday morning," Paul answered, still smiling, "a little before half-past eight."

"Yesterday mornin'?" repeated Bob, as though trying hard to recall all the events of the day before. "Maybe Danny did come in for a minute."

"He played leapfrog with you all the way into the private office," Paul went on, while Bob looked at him with increasing wonder.

"How did you know?" the office boy asked frankly. "Were you lookin' through the windows?"

"How do I know that you and Danny stood on your heads in the corner of the office with your heels against the safe, scratching off the paint? Next time I'd try the yard if I were you. Sports of that sort are more fun in the open air." And with that parting shot Paul went on his way to his own desk, leaving the office boy greatly puzzled.

Later in the day Bob and Mike exchanged confidences and neither was able to offer explanation.

"He declared," declared, "we uster think teacher had eyes in the back of her head. She was everlastingly catchin' me when I did things behind her back. But Mr. Paul beats that—for he see me doin' things when he wa'n't here."

"Mister Paul wa'n't here, for sure, yesterday mornin'," Mike asserted, "I'd take me oath o' that. An' if he wa'n't here, how could he see me givin' ye a light from me pipe? Answer me that! He says it's a little bird told him—but that's not it, I'm thinkin'. Not but what they have clocks with birds into 'em that come out an' tell the time o' day—'cuckoo!' 'cuckoo!' 'cuckoo!' An' if that big clock he broke last week had a bird that could tell time that way I'd break the thing quick—so I would."

"It ain't no bird," said Bob, "you can bet your life on that. No birds can't tell him nothin' more'n you can catch 'em by puttin' salt on their tails. I know what it is Mr. Paul does—least I know how he does it. It's second sight, that's what it is! I see a man onct at the theayter, an' he——"

But perhaps it is not necessary to set down here the office boy's recollection of the trick of an ingenious magician.

About half an hour after Paul had arrived at the office, Mr. Wheatcroft appeared. The junior partner hesitated in the doorway for a second and then entered.

Paul was watching him, and the same mischievous smile flashed over the face of the young man.

"You need not be alarmed to-day, Mr. Wheatcroft," he said, "there is no fascinating female waiting for you this morning."

"Confound the woman," ejaculated Mr. Wheatcroft testily, "I couldn't get rid of her."

"But you subscribed for the book at last," asserted Paul, "and she went away happy."

"I believe I did agree to take one copy of the work she showed me," admitted Mr. Wheatcroft a little sheepishly. Then he looked up suddenly. "Why, bless my soul," he cried, "that was yesterday morning——"

"Allowing for differences of clocks," Paul returned, "it was about ten minutes to ten yesterday morning."

"Then how do you come to know anything about it? I should like to be told that!" the junior partner inquired. "You did not get down till nearly twelve."

"I had an eye on you," Paul answered, as the smile again flitted across his face.

"But I thought you were detained all the morning by a sick friend," insisted Mr. Wheatcroft.

"So I was," Paul responded. "And if you won't believe I had an eye on you all I can say then is—that a little bird told me."

"Stuff and nonsense!" cried Mr. Wheatcroft. "Your little bird had two legs, hadn't it?"

"Most birds have," laughed Paul.

"I mean two legs in a pair of trousers," explained the junior partner, rumpling his grizzled hair with an impatient gesture.

"You see now how uncomfortable it is to be shadowed," said Paul, turning the topic, as his father entered the office.

That Saturday afternoon Mr. Whittier and Mr. Wheatcroft agreed on the bid to be made on the steel rails needed by the Springfield and Athens Road. While the elder Mr. Whittier wrote the letter to the railroad with his own hand, his son maneuvered the junior partner into the outer office where all the clerks happened to be at work, including the old bookkeeper. Then Paul managed his conversation with Mr. Wheatcroft so that any one of the five employes who chose to listen to the apparently careless talk should know that the firm had just made a bid on another important contract. Paul also spoke as though both his father and himself would probably go out of town that Saturday night, to remain away until Monday morning.

Just before the store was closed for the night Paul Whittier wound up the eight-day clock that stood in the corner opposite the private safe.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

W. K. McClure has returned from his summer vacation.

Mrs. Jane Brokaw and the Misses Brokaw, of Roseville, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver, Manning avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce, of Anita, Iowa, were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Haynes of North avenue. Mr. Bruce is county attorney and president of a bank in his city.

One Honest New Yorker.

Edgar Sheppard, of Central avenue, left his pocketbook in a New York restaurant one day last week. A stranger picked it up and upon opening it found that it contained a membership card of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Mr. Sheppard was notified and called on the finder of the book and it was returned to him. It certainly showed the advantage of being a member of the Y. M. C. A.

SUNDAY DRINKING.

Father McMillan Defines the Attitude of the Catholic Church Thereon.

The Rev. Father McMillan, of New York, recently preached on the subject of "The Sunday Closing of Saloons and Sabbath Observance Generally." He strongly condemned not only the selling of liquor on Sunday, but the patronizing of saloons on that day, and supported his position by quoting from the pastoral letter and decrees of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore. Father McMillan said:

"I maintain that every body or group of Christians must take into consideration the external observance of the Sunday in order that this important matter may not be left to the priests as individuals. This has always been among Catholics a recognized usage having the force of law. The so-called continental Sunday is a product of infidelity, and has been forced upon Catholics in Europe by the civil power. This applies especially to Paris, where the workmen are beginning to demand the privilege of giving up work on Sunday.

"After careful deliberation at the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore in 1884, the Bishops of the United States decided to remove all doubt concerning Catholic Church teaching regarding intemperance and the proper observance of the Sunday by the publication of a pastoral letter, from which these extracts are taken:

"'There is one way of profaning the Lord's Day, which is so prolific of evil results that we consider it our duty to utter against it a special condemnation. This is the practice of selling beer or other liquors on Sunday, or of frequenting places where they are sold. This practice tends more than any other to turn the Day of the Lord into a day of dissipation—to use it as an occasion for breeding intemperance.

"'While we hope that Sunday laws on this point will not be relaxed, but even more rigidly enforced, we implore all Catholics, for the love of God and of country, never to take part in such Sunday traffic, nor to patronize or countenance it. And we not only direct the attention of all pastors to the repression of this abuse, but we also call upon them to induce all of their flocks that may be engaged in the sale of liquors to abandon as soon as they can the dangerous traffic, and to embrace a more becoming way of making a living.'"

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

A PRESIDENT IS LACKING.

W. C. T. U. ARE UNABLE TO GET A MEMBER TO SERVE.

Other Officers Are Elected, However, and the Annual Reports of Committees Made —$1,971.96 Raised, But a Deficit Remains.

The W. C. T. U. held their annual business meeting yesterday afternoon in their rooms on Watchung avenue and there was a good attendance of members. The service opened with devotional exercises conducted by the president, Miss Carra Peck. This was followed with the secretary's report by Miss Mineola Tomlinson, and the treasurer's report by Mrs. R. K. Case. This report showed that for the past year the receipts had been $1,971.96 and the expenditures $1,929.23, leaving a balance in the treasury of $42.73. On account of some smaller expenses there is a deficit of $205.59.

Miss Lugar reported on the Temple Work and gave evidence of much that had been done in this department. The work of the soldiers and sailors was reported by the superintendent of the work, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins. It showed that during the year several receptions had been given to the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans, Woman's Relief Corps, firemen, etc., and that barrels of literature, clothing and comfort bags had been sent to the Life Saving Station at Seabright for which acknowledgement had been received.

Miss Susie Berg then followed with an interesting report on Kitchen Garden Work, of which she is the superintendant. A large amount of good had been done in this department with the children.

Mrs. Krom, as Superintendent of the Literature Committee, reported that 8,020 pages of literature had been distributed during the year, that the Union had a small circulating library and the financial part was in excellent condition.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson reported for the Franchise Committee in an interesting manner and the work of the flower committee showed excellent results being accomplished.

Then followed a short testimony service in which several took part. Mrs. Coard gave a short talk on narcotics and hygine that was very interesting.

An account of the public meetings held was prepared by Miss Anna Boice and read by Eiss Minneola Tomlinson. Miss Peck then read the articles of incorporation of the Union that had been furnished gratuitously by County Clerk Howard and a vote of thanks was ordered sent to him.

The members then went into election of officers.

After much consideration and discussion it was decided to defer the election of a president until a future time, as it was impossible to get one of the women to serve. In consequence it was decided that the vice-presidents should serve till a president was elected.

The balance of the officers were then chosen as follows: Corresponding-secretary, Miss Carra Peck; recording-secretary, Mrs. E. French; treasurer, Mrs. R. K. Case.

The following are the delegates to the State Convention to be held in Paterson, October 8th, 9th and 10th: Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Case; alternates, Mrs. Nelson Runyon and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins.

It was stated that the County Convention would be held in the Baptist church at Roselle, Thursday, September 26th, and it was hoped all who could would go.

The following vice-presidents were chosen from the various churches: Park Avenue Baptist—Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Seely Edsall; Congregationalist—Miss Beekman, Mrs. Gambling; Seventh-Day Baptist—Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. H. M. Maxson; Trinity—Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Dunlap; First Methodist—Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. Jackson; Grace P. E.—Miss Green, Mrs. Lowry; First Baptist—Miss Anna Boice, Mrs. S. B. Joseph; First Presbyterian—Mrs. Shotwell; Friends—Mrs. Harper, Mrs. Bogert; Unitarian—Mrs. Krom; Warren Chapel—Miss Mary Maire, Mrs. Randolph; Crescent Avenue—Mrs. Yates, Mrs. Cahoone.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement of Miss Heywood, of Roseville and Julius Erickson, of this city, is announced.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

NEEDS TO BE FIXED.

The Condition of the Borough Fire Gong is Very Poor.

Chief Engineer Fairchild, of the borough fire department, is very much concerned about the condition of the fire gong, which for the last few months has scarcely once blew an alarm so that the firemen could tell where the fire might be located. The apparatus cost the borough the tidy sum of $2,600, and with such an expenditure there should be no defects such as have been in evidence for some time, and which are serious enough to make the alarm worthless for all practical purposes.

For instance, yesterday when Box 141 was pulled for the Thorn fire only one blow of the whistle responded, but luckily there were enough men near at hand to get the hose cart to the fire without much difficulty and the flames were extinguished with a little effort. But the possibilities of what such a fire in a more insolated part of the borough would be if the alarm failed to work are not pleasant to contemplate. The difficulty with the alarm yesterday was that its mechanism was out of order, and the armature responded only once to the currents.

The question of where the alarm will be placed after the Edison plant is abandoned is another question that is agitating borough people. Some think that it will be brought to the city electric light plant, but a vigorous protest will be made to this by the residents living in the neighborhood, and it is not likely that such an arrangement can be made.

BOROUGH SCHOOL OPENS.

List of the Teachers for the Ensuing Year.

Happy after a long summer of enjoyment, the children of the borough gathered in the public school building once more to resume their studies this morning. The teachers who will take charge of the various classes during the winter are:

Charles E. Boss, principal; Miss Susan M. Cutter, Tenth grade; Miss Clara A. Petrie, Ninth grade; Miss Emma J. Bainbridge, Eighth grade; Miss L. M. Sydenhan, Seventh grade, Miss E. A. McCoy; Sixth grade; Miss C. E. Randolph, Fifth grade; Miss E. U. Tantum, Fifth grade; Miss Florence J. Bigelow, Fourth grade; Miss J. Masso, Fourth grade; Miss L. Kiernan, Fourth grade; Miss S. E. Mackey, Third grade; Miss L. Claypoole, Third grade; Miss Rita S. Dally, Second grade; Miss M. P. Kellogg, Second grade; Miss Helen R. Emery, First grade; Miss E. R. Ginn, First grade; William Henderson, Latin teacher.

Park Avenue Baptist Church Notes.

The Junior Society of Christian Endeavor will hold their first fall meeting Friday afternoon at 3:45. The meeting will be a short one, followed by a social, and they invite their friends to meet with them.

The women's prayer meeting will be held with Mrs. Johnson on LaGrande avenue Friday afternoon at 3:30.

The Sunday-school will commence their afternoon sessions next Sunday at 2:30. The fall and winter schedule of the church services will also go into effect next Sunday. The morning service will commence at 10:30 and the evening service at 7:30.

S. M. Mileongar, a native of Tarsus, Asia, will address the Christian Endeavor society and their friends on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Grace M. E. Church Notes.

The following persons were baptized in the church Sunday morning: Mrs. W. H. Bohl, Miss Agnes Morse and Miss Carrie Pangborn. In addition to these W. H. Bohl and A. M. Vanderbeek were received into the church in full connection and Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Coriell by letter from Mt. Horeb M. E. church.

The Woman's Home Missionary society will meet on Tuesday at 3:30 p. m. to lay plans for the fall and winter work.

The prayer meeting on Wednesday night will be in charge of the Epworth League of the church.

About the Boston Convention.

A stereopticon lecture on the Christian Endeavor Convention recently held at Boston, will be given before the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church on Thursdy evening at eight o'clock. There will be no charge for admission, but a collection will be taken at the close of the lecture. All are cordially invited.

Another Believer.

J. A. Smith & Brother, the West Front street grocers, advertised their special sale of peaches for Saturday in the Daily Press and say that they sold many more peaches then that at any previous unadvertised sale.

LAY JUDGES WILL STAY IN.

A PARTISAN LAW DECLARED UNCONSTITUTIONAL YESTERDAY.

The Case Will Not be Appealed—The Legislature Cannot Acquire the Right to Appoint County Officers at Will.

The Daily Press last night exclusively announced in a brief item in Plainfield the decision of Judge VanSyckle declaring unconstitutional the law legislating the Lay Judges out of office. The law was passed by the Republican Legislature last winter, and it removed from office the forty-five lay judges in the counties, and provided for the election of a single law judge in each county to transact the business of the Common Pleas courts.

Every one of the nineteen county courts is composed of a law judge and two lay judges. All of them were appointed by the Governor, and, as New Jersey's Governors since 1869 have been Democrats, the courts have been Democratic also.

It was to secure control of these courts, with their powers in naturalization and license cases, that the Voorhees law was introduced and passed at the dictation of the Republican caucus. Although it bears the name of Senator Voorhees, one of the candidates for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, and was introduced by him as Republican leader, he was opposed to it, and several Republican Assemblymen bolted the caucus decision and voted against the bill. An attempt was made to make a similar law in the closing hours of the Legislature of 1894, when the session was prolonged until five o'clock in the morning in order that absent members might be brought there to vote for the bill. It was passed, but Gov. Werts killed it. He vetoed the bill last winter, but the Republicans repassed it over the veto.

The case decided today is that of Lay Judge Herman Schalk, of Essex County, on manadamus proceedings brought against County Clerk James T. Wrighston to have him restrained from having printed on the official ballots the the names of candidates for County Judges, nominated in pursuance of the Voorhees law. The case was argued at the June term, before Justices Van Syckel and Lippincott, Democrats, and Justice Magie, Republican. Justice Lippincott concurs in Van Syckel's opinion that the law is unconstitutional. Justice Magie dissents, and will file an opinion giving his views. In the syllabus summarizing the opinion Justice Van Syckel says:

"The Legislature may reduce the number of Judges of the Common Pleas to any number less than five, and may prescribe the qualifications of the Judges. The Legislature cannot abolish the Court of Common Pleas, but if it is conceded that it has such power, then so long as the jurisdiction which resides in that court is exercised for the benefit of the people, it must be exercised by Judges appointed as heretofore. It cannot bodily be transferred to be exercised by Judges not appointed as the Constitution prescribes. The Legislature cannot, by adding to or subtracting from the duties of a given office, by uniting one office to another, acquire the right to appoint the officer in a manner other than that prescribed by the supreme law.

"The act of June 13th, 1895, known as the County Court law, is unconstitutional."

The case will not be appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals, as there is no time to obtain a decision in that court, even if it were desirable. The decision will have considerable effect in the approaching election, particularly in some of the southern counties, where there is a strong anti-saloon sentiment, and the liquor dealers were preparing to oppose such nominees as were suspected of promises to refuse or decrease the licenses in the townships or towns. Now there will be no reason for saloon keepers' activity. There has been a lively contest in every county for the Judgeship nomination, no county having had fewer than half a dozen candidates.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

VALKYRIE WINS

She Crosses the Finish Line at 2:55.

DEFENDER 2 SECONDS LATE

A Collision at the Start and the Defender Loses Her Starboard Topmast—Latest Bulletins About the Race.

Valkyrie crosses the finish line at 2:55.

The Defender f ollowed at 2:57.

The Postal Telegraph announces the correct difference of the finishing time as 2:11.

Highlands of Navesink, N. J., September 10th.—The second race for the America's cup was started promptly on time today over the triangular course, ten miles a leg, beginning with a beat to windward down the New Jersey coast, thence out to sea on a broad reach, with the prospect of a close-hauled reach to the finish. The wind at the start was due south, blowing about six to eight miles an hour. In the preliminary play for position Valkyrie had the better of it and got over the line first. Unfortunately, however, as the yachts were approaching the line Valkyrie fouled Defender, carrying away her starboard topmast shrouds. Defender at once raised a protest flag.

This was answered by a gun from the Luckenback indicating that the protest was accepted and would be considered. Defender continued in the race then under protest.

The starting time was as follows:

	H.	M.	S.
Valkyrie	11	00	13
Defender	11	01	15

Both yachts crossed on the starboard tack, Valkyrie breaking out her jib topsail as she went over the line.

Five minutes after the start both boats were on the port tack, heading toward the New Jersey coast, with Valkyrie considerably to windward, although not pointing as close as Defender. They seemed to be holding a fair breeze, and Defender was not standing up so well as Valkyrie.

Defender, after holding the port tack for twenty minutes, went about on the starboard tack and headed down the New Jersey coast at 12:15, Valkyrie following five seconds later. Defender was away on her new course quicker than Valkyrie, although she did not carry a jib topsail as Valkyrie did. Defender was then about a quarter of a mile behind Valkyrie, but was eating into her lead. They did not hold on the starboard tack long, for at 11:30 Defender went about on the port tack and headed in shore. Almost simultaneously Valkyrie made the same move, and the yachts were then only a couple of miles off the Highlands in full view. It was evident that Defender was seriously hampered by the loss of the shroud.

Valkyrie was leading Defender about half a mile after three-quarters of an hour sailing. She was also well up to windward, and was getting a better breeze off shore than Defender, which was only half mile from the beach.

Both boats went about on the starboard tack about 11:48 and headed out to sea, Defender not taking one-half of the time from full to full that Valkyrie required. As they headed off shore it was apparent that Valkyrie was considerably ahead and considerably to windward, although she did not seem to be able to point as closely to the wind on this tack as Defender.

12:20—It looks as if the Defender is catching up to the Valkyrie. Every time though that she goes about the English yact does the same to keep her to leeward.

BULLETINS.

12:28—Valkyrie seems to hold the lead, but is not gaining on the Defender.

12:32—The Valkyrie leads her opponent by half a mile, and seems to hold her own.

12:50—The Valkyrie slightly in the lead but Defender is gaining.

1:10—The Valkyrie turned the first stake boat at 12:57:50 and Defender at 1:01:40.

1:55—Off Monmouth Beach. The Defender is gradually crawling up and is now only two minutes and forty seconds behind her English rival.

2:05—The yachts are plainly visible off Asbury Park with the Valkyrie slightly in the lead. The wind is blowing sixteen miles an hour.

2:40—Valkyrie still a quarter of a mile ahead.

2:50—Asbury Park. The boats are nearing the second stake boat and the English craft leads by about four minutes. Yachtsmen here think that the Valkyrie is holding her own and that the two yachts will finish in about the same position.

3:00—The yachts have turned the last stake and are on their last leg. Valkyrie still retains the lead, with a brisk southeast wind.

AN ARGUMENT IN SONG.

Miss Emily Coriell Tells of Plainfield Advantages in a Novel Way.

Plainfield Christian Endeavorers are going to Atlantic City next month to bring the convention to this city next year, if it is a possible thing. One of the arguments they will use will be a song, written by Miss Emily Coriell, which is as follows:

PLAINFIELD '96.

Tune—Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Plainfield bids you welcome from the North and from the West;
South and East we'll gladly greet and give you of our best;
Endeavor banners flying come where nothing will molest.
In Eighteen Ninety-Six.

CHORUS.

Plainfield's longing now to greet you;
Plainfield's waiting now to meet you;
Come to Plainfield we entreat you.
In Eighteen Ninety-Six.

Christian homes are many here, their doors are open wide;
Christian hearts and willing hands for comfort will provide;
At the State Convention we will all stand side by side.
In Eighteen Ninety-Six.

Come and for the blessed Master stronger you'll go back;
Firm for Christ and for the church your faith will nothing lack;
Come to our fair city with the orange and the black.
In Eighteen Ninety-Six.

The Daily Press will print this song in a neat form and distribute them gratuitously to every Christian Endeavorer in the city. They can be secured by calling at the business office after 3:30 tomorrow afternoon.

A GOOD PERFORMANCE.

The Bubb Comedy Company in "The Black Flag" Attracts a Crowd.

By far the largest crowd that has assembled in the Stillman Music Hall this fall, was there last night to see "The Black Flag" presented by the Bubb Comedy Company. The play which was the story of the favorite gentleman's son and his abused brother, was full of exciting incidents. The part of the usual humorous character, in the shape of the accomplice to the villianous brother, was taken by Alfred Kelcy, whose funny songs found favor with the orchestra circle and gallery alike. Miss Lillian La Rose, as the heroine, played her part in an excellent manner. The different characters were all well acted and the play was much better than some dramas to which the higher rates of admission are charged. The orchestra furnished excellent music during the intermission and came up to the claim of its manager.

Borough Board of Health.

The North Plainfield Township Committee will meet this evening, at which time the Board of Health will organize.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

CITIZEN'S AID NEEDS MONEY.

THIS MATTER OCCUPIED THEIR ATTENTION LAST EVENING.

The Members of the Association Have Not Fully Recovered From Their Summer Outing—17, Though, Talk Business.

That the central committee of the Citizen's Organized Aid Association has not fully recovered from its summer outing was evidenced last night when only seventeen members answered to the roll call at the meeting held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church. Mason W. Tyler was in the chair and J. Doul Miller was the secretary. Treasurer H. P. Reynolds made a statement of the finances, which showed that money is very much needed and must be had immediately if the work is to go forward. Finance was the chief topic of the evening. A more complete report of the treasurer will be presented later.

The secretary read a letter from Mrs. Tiffany in which she offered her resignation from all work in the committee. After some hesitation it was decided to accept it, make a minute of it and the secretary was instructed to inform Mrs. Tiffany of the committee's deep regret in her action of resigning.

H. P. Reynolds reported for the finance committee and stated that plans and means would have to be devised to raise money.

He did not think it wise to depend on the Relief Association for support and help, as they had a work of their own. Neither did he think the committee should owe money. He hoped the finance committee would be enlarged. The matter was referred to the committee who has charge of incorporating and re-organizing the Association.

D. P. Hall communicated in a letter that some progress had baen made along the line of re-organization and he hoped to have a full report by October. The Council decided to hold their annual meeting Monday evening, October 28th, and arrangements for the same were left with the executive committee. Two invitations were received, one from Charles Place, of the Crescent Avenue church, and another from H. B. Wells, of All Souls church, offering the use of their edifices for the meeting. They were both referred to the same committee. The question of finances was referred to the secretary and treasurer and they will device some plan to bring in the money that is now standing out as dues.

Painless Teeth Extracting.

Dr. C. H. Clark, the dentist, of 212 West Front street, has purchased the right to use "Euchirisma," a newly-discovered anæsthetic for extracting teeth without pain, and is meeting with unparalleled success. The doctor considers it the best anæsthetic known. Last week a lady called at his office to have fourteen teeth extracted, intending to take gas. The doctor saw at a glance that she was a fit subject for heart trouble and prevailed upon her to try "Euchirisma" on one tooth and if it was not painless to have only the one extracted. She was so well pleased that she had the fourteen extracted at one sitting, with "Euchirisma." A fact.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The usual business was transacted in Justice Newcorn's court yesterday. Judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in the case of Gillette Clipping Company vs. Stelle, on contract, and an execution issued. The case of Steinhart Brothers vs. Miller was settled out of court. Summons were issued in the case of Utzinger vs. Hudman, returnable on the sixteenth. A warrant was issued on the complaint of Elizabeth Ryan for Alice and Mary Peel for assault and battery.

Somerset Fair Open.

The Somerset county fair will open today. The speed entries are large, including some of the best horses of the circuit. The entries of cattle, fancy work, fruits and poultry are all large, and there seems to be a revival of interest among the farmers of the county. There has been an unusual yield of fruit and grain in Somerset this year.

Two Rode the Goat.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I.O.O.F., met last evening and worked the first degree on two candidates. It is expected that a number of its members will attend the Sovereign Grand Lodge meet at Atlantic City which begins on Monday, September 16th.

A Road to Carteret.

The Elizabeth Board of Trade is agitating the building of a road from Elizabethport along the shore of the Kills to Carteret. It is claimed this road would be very beneficial to both places. The people of Carteret are anxious to have such a road.

SECOND OF THE SERIES

All Prepared for To-day's Great Yacht Race.

More Stringent Rules Adopted by the Regatta Committee To Prevent a Repetition of the Crowding of Excursion Vessels—Over 75,000 People Leave for the Scene.

New York, Sept. 10.—The winning of Saturday's international yacht race by Defender seemed to act as a magnet to public enthusiasm, for to-day at least twice as many craft of every description went to the scene of the contest as witnessed the first struggle. From early morning until but a short time before the hour set for the start every description of sea going vessel, from the puny tug to the mammoth ocean going steamer, turned their prows towards the spot where to-day's battle for the mastery will be fought. It is estimated that fully 75,000 people left this and adjacent cities this morning to witness the race. Owing to the confusion caused by the crowding of the excursion boats in the last race, whereby the contestants were seriously hampered at the starting line, the regatta committee has adopted much more stringent rules in that respect, and the members confidently expect that no such disgraceful scenes will be re-enacted.

Unlike Saturday's Race.

Unlike Saturday's contest which tested the qualities of the yachts on two points of sailing only, the race to-day will require them to show their ability on almost every point. If possible one leg of the course will be to windward, so that the yachts may have beating to windward, running free and reaching with the wind on the quarter. The weather seems to favor the British boat whose best work, so far as has been observed here, is in light winds and smooth sea. In Saturday's race while the 5 to 7-knot breeze prevailed for three-quarters of an hour after the start the Valkyrie made gains on Defender. The rough sea threw her back more than it did Defender, but the British boat plainly had the best of it. When the wind freshened a little she ceased to gain and when it grew to be a 9 or 10-knot breeze she simply couldn't keep the pace set by the American boat.

Result in Doubt.

Should the sea be smooth and the wind six to eight miles an hour there may be less hilarity in the crowd of sightseers than on Saturday. Judging from what has been seen of the two boats when they have been near each other the Defender has no walkover, and unless there are good stiff breezes to-day and Thursday the American boat will not win three straight races this year. The Britons are by no means discouraged, even though Americans in the excess of their patriotism are shouting that the cup is safe.

Betting at a Low Ebb.

The start is to be from the Sandy Hook lightship unless the committee decides to change to another location at the last moment. The triangle course will be laid out so as to give the yachts a beat to windward on one leg. One turn will be right out to sea and the other will be off Long Beach on the Long Island shore, or off Long Branch on the Jersey side. The direction of the wind will decide which way the yachts will be sent around. The regatta committee and the America's Cup committee will use the tug Walter Luckenbach, and two other tugs will be used as stake boats. Betting on the race is at a low ebb. American money is offered at 2 to 1, but Britishers are shy.

SOO CANAL OPENING.

An Erie, Pa., Steam Barge the First Vessel To Pass Through.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 10.—The public opening of the Canadian Soo ship canal took place yesterday, the first boat locking through being the steam-barge Uganda, belonging to C. McBrier, Erie, Pa., down bound. Other boats followed. The locks are working satisfactorily. The depth of water is 23 feet at the lower level. The report sent out that business would be suspended at the lock on Sundays is erroneous, no such instructions having been received.

YALE-CAMBRIDGE GAMES.

Arrangements for 5,000 More Seats Than Have Been Applied For.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 10.—The committee in charge of the plans for the Yale-Cambridge games has arranged for 5,000 more seats than applications have now been received to cover. More application blanks have just been sent to all the leading eastern cities.

National League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 4; Cincinnati, 1. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 4; Cleveland, 1. At Pittsburg—Pittsburg, 3; Washington, 1. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 3; Chicago, 5. At Philadelphia—First game, Philadelphia, 13; Louisville, 4. Second game, Philadelphia, 8; Louisville, 9. At Boston—Boston, 6; St. Louis, 0.

His Skull Crushed to a Pulp.

Mount Vernon, N. Y., Sept. 10.—James Wise, aged 27, a well known young man of Bronxville, N. Y., was struck and almost instantly killed while crossing the tracks of the Harlem railroad in this city by a north bound express. His skull was crushed to a pulp.

Richard Mansfield Out of Danger.

New York, Sept. 10.—It was stated last night at the home of Richard Mansfield, who has been seriously ill, that the condition of the actor was much improved and that he was resting quietly. His physician has pronounced the patient out of danger.

Decides Not To Accept.

Bangor, Me., Sept. 10.—A private letter from Dr. Nathanial Butler of the Chicago university to a friend in this city says that he has decided not to accept the presidency of Colby university at Waterville, Me., which had been tendered him.

More Spanish Troops for Cuba.

Havana, Sept. 10.—The steamers Buenos Ayres, Montevideo and Isla de Luzon have arrived with 4,700 troops. Five other steamers landed 8,400 troops on Friday and Saturday at Santiago.

GRANDEST IN THE WORLD.

Boston's New Masonic Temple May Assume Magnificent Proportions.

Boston, Sept. 10.—The board of directors of Masonic temple have decided to repair the burned portions of the building at once for temporary occupancy. Three of the directors strongly expressed themselves in favor of a new Masonic temple, and although the matter was not formally considered it is practically assured that a proposition which involves the building of the most magnificent Masonic temple in the world will be laid before a special meeting of the grand lodge to be held in the near future. There appears to be a general feeling that the Masonic temple is not only inadequate for the use of Masonic bodies, but that the property is too valuable to be used for that purpose. A business building in the temple would be of immense value, and could be rented for offices, etc., at a very large sum. The property would undoubtedly sell at a figure not much less than a million dollars, and perhaps more than that sum, and that with the money thus obtained the Masons could erect on a site farther from the business center of the city a Masonic temple which would be the finest in the world. Such is the argument of those who favor a new temple, and which is likely to take a material form.

KEIR HARDIE OFFENDED.

His Eulogy of Chicago Anarchists Displeases Methodist Clergymen.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Keir Hardie, the English labor leader, disturbed the sedateness of the weekly meeting of Methodist clergymen by a fiery socialistic speech and was greeted with such a storm of ministerial disapproval that he was compelled to abandon the floor. Hardie had been invited to address the preachers, and with several local socialists attended the meeting. The Englishman proceeded to air his views, loudly applauded by his friends, and finally bitterly denounced the execution of the Chicago anarchists and eulogized them as pioneers in the new religion. The storm which greeted the statement almost carried Hardie off his feet. Half a dozen preachers at a time bitterly denounced the sentiments expressed, and the speaker was compelled to sit down. The ministers then denounced in scathing terms speech and speaker, and Hardie left much offended.

JAPAN-AMERICAN TRADE.

We Import Four Times as Much as We Export.

Washington, Sept. 10.—The department of state has received a report from Consul General McIvor, stationed at Kanagawa, Japan, on the foreign trade of that country for the year 1894. The most notable changes in the trade in which we are interested, he says, are the increased direct importation of raw cotton from the United States and the growing importation of American kerosine oil. During the year Japan sent goods to the United States valued at $22,008,336, and received from this country goods valued at only $5,579,139.

HIS IDENTITY ESTABLISHED.

Insurance Swindler Fraker Recognized by His Sister.

Richmond, Mo., Sept. 10.—All doubts as to the identification of Dr. Fraker, the insurance swindler, were set at rest this morning when his sister, Mrs. N. J. McGruder of Atlanta, Mo., visited the jail and immediately recognized him. The meeting was an affecting one. Later when seen at her hotel, Mrs. McGruder said the prisoner was Dr. Fraker. She has in her possession $1,200 of the insurance money, but declined to say what disposition of it she would make.

REMARKABLE HAIL STORM.

Some of the Stones Five Inches in Circumference.

Wellsboro, Pa., Sept. 10.—The people of this place witnessed the most remarkable hailstorm ever known in this region. Large hailstones fell and covered the streets with a coating of ice. Most of the hailstones were as large as walnuts, and many of them were fully five inches in circumference. Skylights were ruined and large holes were made in tin roofs. The hail cut the leaves from the trees and crops were ruined in the path of the storm.

CONGRESSMAN QUIGG OUT.

Sends His Resignation to Gov. Morton in Time for a New Election.

New York, Sept. 10.—Congressman L. E. Quigg sent his resignation to Governor Morton last night and will not therefore take the seat in the fifty-fourth congress next December to which he was re-elected last November. His resignation has been offered in time to permit his constituents to choose his successor at the next general election. It is understood that Mr. Quigg has contemplated resigning for some time.

California's State Birthday.

Boston, Sept. 10.—The forty-fifth anniversary of the admission of California as a state of the union was celebrated yesterday by the society of California Pioneers of New England at its eighth annual reunion at the United States hotel. There was a business meeting, banquet and literary exercises and the attendanca was large.

Liquor Dealers' Convention.

Troy, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The New York state convention of the Wine, Beer and Liquor Dealers' association opened here this morning. Three hundred New York delegates arrived last night by special train. Action on the Sunday closing law will probably be taken this afternoon. The officers will be elected to-morrow morning.

Killed While Bicycle Riding.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Theresa Maschke, the 12-year-old daughter of Moses Maschke, a clothier, died last night from injuries received by coming into collision with a team of horses while riding a bicycle around a corner. She was frightfully cut about the head and face.

Purchased by the Standard.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 10.—An agent of the Standard Oil company has arrived at Baku, where he has purchased a large quantity of petroleum and 8,500,000 poods of crude naphtha (a pood is thirty-six pounds).

Carpet Makers Strike.

Thompsonville, Conn., Sept. 10.—The employes of the moquette department of the Hartford Carpet company, numbering 200, struck yesterday and the mill was closed.

THE CUBAN REBELLION

Situation in Santa Clara Something Terrible.

Women and Children Dying of Starvation—Government Troops Attacked by Insurgents and All Their Arms and Ammunition Captured—Part of a Convoy Destroyed.

New York, Sept. 10.—Private advices received in this city from Cuba state that the situation in the province of Santa Clara is something terrible. Provisions are scarce and the women and children are dying of starvation. Most of the men have joined the insurgents. Numerous bands of insurgents are reported near San Juan de la Syras, in Las Villas district. A band of 200 insurgents entered the town of Caimeto, in Las Villas district, routed a detachment of soldiers and carried off several hundred head of horses.

Government Troops Routed.

A band of Cubans commanded by Berneau Fernandez attacked a company of troops commanded by a sergeant at the sugar station San Rafael, near Remedios, on August 29, killing the sergeant and nine soldiers, and capturing all their arms and ammunition. Six hundred insurgents commanded by Pedro Diaz and Napoleos attacked the town of Remeates, near Remedios, on August 30. After exchanging a few shots they withdrew.

Part of a Convoy Sunk.

Mayia Rodriguez, with a large band, is reported advancing towards Sangua la Grande and Colon. On Sept. 1 Serafin Sanchez and band were encamped near the town of Santo Espirito. Jose Barone, a prominent Spanish cavalry captain, died of yellow fever at Santo Espirito. A convoy composed of three tugs, commanded by Gen. Casco, that left Manzanillo on Aug. 28 was attacked by Cubans near El Muerto, on the Contox river. The Cubans killed two engineers, several firemen and an officer and sunk two schooners. On Aug. 31 the insurgents attacked the town of Campichuela, Santiago de Cuba. After fighting an hour the Cubans commenced to retreat and the troops followed. Then they turned on them, killing forty-six.

REBELS USE DYNAMITE.

One Soldier Killed and Five Wounded in Cuba.

Santiago de Cuba, Sept. 10.—Insurgents placed a quantity of dynamite on the Guantanamo railroad last Saturday. When a train came along there was an explosion, and one soldier on the train was killed and five were wounded.

AS TO ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

Experiments To Be Made in Peru 15,000 Feet Above the Sea.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—A representative from the Baldwin Locomotive works with an expert electrician from the Westinghouse company, together with Sir Henry Tyler, ex-president of the Grand Trunk railway, departed today for Peru, where, it is said, a test of the possibility and desirability of the use of the electric locomotive is to be made upon a railroad 15,000 feet above the sea level. Sir Henry Tyler has been in this city for several days in conference with members of the Baldwin firm, and it was decided upon last night to make the experiment, and the party leaves for South America from New York.

EIGHTEEN QUIT WORK.

Ligonia, Me., Rolling Mill Employes Demand Higher Wages.

Portland, Me., Sept. 10.—Eighteen of the 150 employes at the Portland rolling mills at Ligonia have quit work, their demand for a restoration of the full amount of last year's cut down having been refused. The cut down amounted to 10 per cent. The corporation recently made a 5 per cent. advance. At the company's office it was stated that the absence of the eighteen men from the rolling department would make no particular difference in the running of the works and that if they did not return at once their places would be filled.

Result of Baseball Injuries.

Washington, Sept. 10.—A young man, 20 years of age, named Benjamin F. Myers, has just died in this city from the effects of an injury received in a game of baseball played a week ago between two amateur organizations. Myers was sliding to second and tripped the baseman, who fell heavily upon him, injuring his spine and rupturing a blood vessel. Just before his death Myers declared that the affair was purely accidental, and no inquest will be held.

Walcott and O'Brien Held.

Boston, Sept. 10.—Joe Walcott and Dick O'Brien, the pugilists, have surrendered themselves to the superior court to answer to the indictments found against them by the grand jury, engaging in a prize fight and criminal assault and battery." They plead not guilty and were held in $1,000 each for trial. They furnished bonds.

Prof. Colcord's Advancement.

Saxtons River, Vt., Sept. 10.—Prof. E. J. Colcord, formerly of the Vermont academy and later superintendent of schools and principal of the high school at Rutland, has received the appointment of professor of history in the Pennsylvania State college and will assume his new duties at once.

English Colonial Governors.

London, Sept. 10.—Col. Sir J. West-Ridgeway, lieutenant governor of the Isle of Man, will succeed Sir Arthur Elibank Havelock as governor of Ceylon, the latter having been promoted to the governorsoip of Madras.

Transatlantic Rates.

Liverpool, Sept. 10.—Pending negotiations will probably result in a few days in an advance of the rates of the transatlantic steamship companies. The companies have, however, arranged nothing definite as yet.

Jewelry Store Looted.

New York Sept. 10.—The jewelry store of E. Appleton, No. 1467 Third avenue, was entered by burglars early in the morning and watches and jewelry to the value of $2,000 were stolen.

WARNED BY KOORDS

They Tell Armenians To "Arise and Flee."

Obstacles Interposed by the Turkish Government to the Rebuilding of Afflicted People's Ruined Homes in the Valley of Moush—Sufferings Aggravated by Prospective Famine

New York, Sept. 10.—Herant M. Kiretchjian, general secretary of the Armenian Relief association, has given out to the press the following, containing a direct communication from the valley of Moush, being an extract from a private letter, not written for publication: "The remnant of the people from the Sassoun region have returned to their villages. They are rebuilding the ruins, but the government is raising obstacles, so that the rebuilding may be retarded. The government has let loose the Bakrantsi Koords over the hills of Sassoun. Our people who have returned to their ruined villages are in terror and dismay.

Warning from Friendly Koords.

"Koords who are friendly with our village have sent us word, saying: 'For the love of God, arise and flee, that you may save your lives. The government has brought the Bakransti Koords for the purpose of utterly exterminating what is left of your people.' This has thrown the people into great anguish. Last year they had some arms to defend themselves. This year they have not that means of protection and are in utter extremity of misery. We see no hope of assistance from God or from men."

Sufferings Aggravated by Famine.

This will help to explain also the meaning of a dispatch to the London Daily Telegraph to the effect that the horrors of the present famine around the whole region of the massacre are aggravated by the fact that peasants of a portion of the Sassoun district, not having enough land to raise sufficient wheat for their sustenance, were in the habit of purchasing the remainder from Diarbekir in exchange for fruit and other produce they could raise. But now, with hostile Kurdish tribes, that were leaders of the massacre of last year, infesting the country, the Armenians dare not venture out of their villages for fear of being attacked. The friends of the Armenian cause will well appreciate the value and importance of speedy relief for a peasantry without home or provisions and soon to be exposed to the rigor of the snow storms of a long highland winter.

More Turkish Outrages.

London, Sept. 10.—The Daily News to-day publishes a dispatch from Kars stating that fresh outrages have been perpetrated in the Erzinzian district. A band of brigands attacked on Aug. 12 a company of gendarms, killing a sergeant. Therefore the Turkish authorities, without making any inquiry, decided that the assailants were Armenian revolutionaries from Kemakh, who intended to release exiled Armenians who are still in prison at Kars. A force of one thousand Turkish troops was sent to Kemakh and five villages were pillaged. Five thousand persons were rendered homeless. Men were tortured and women and children ravished. Four monasteries were sacked. It is reported that the Turkish minor officials have formed an anti-Christian society to slaughter Christians if the porte accepts the scheme of reforms the powers insist upon.

COLORED K. OF P.

The Two Warring Factions May Be Welded Into One.

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—The supreme lodge Knights of Pythias (colored) commenced its eighth biennial session here yesterday. Mayor Walbridge delivered an address of welcome, to which Hon. William Reed of Virginia responded. Addresses were also made by Hon. J. Milton Turner and George F. Bowles. Dr. E. A. Williams of New Orleans presided. The first session was mainly devoted to the appointment of the various committees. During the supreme lodge session it is expected that the two factions now warring for supremacy may be welded into harmony.

To Boycott Rochester Clothes.

Rochester, Sept. 10.—General Secretary Reichars left for New York last night. Before leaving he told a reporter that a boycott would be placed on all Rochester made clothing at once throughout the country. As soon as he arrives in New York he will send out notices of the boycott to all affiliated organizations throughout the United States.

First Woman Naturalized.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Andrew Moorehead of this city has the honor of being the first woman to take out naturalization papers in this state. Final documents were granted her yesterday in the superior court. She was born in England, as was also her husband, but he prefers to remain a British subject.

Smokeless Powder for the Navy.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 10.—Torpedo boat Cushing left yesterday for Fisher's island with 500 rounds of ammunition which will be used by the north Atlantic fleet during target practice at Gardner's bay. It is the first time that smokeless powder has been served out to ships in the United States navy.

Attempted Train Wrecking.

North Andover, Mass., Sept. 10.—An attempt to wreck a train on the eastern division of the Boston & Maine railroad has been discovered. The padlocks on two switches near Stevens crossing were broken and the switches swung, and a third switch was also opened a quarter of a mile away.

Miss Daughorne's Condition.

Greenwood, Va., Sept. 10.—Miss Irene Danghorne, who is engaged to marry Charles Dana Gibson, the New York artist, was not so badly hurt in the runaway accident of a few days ago as was at first believed. She will probably be out again in two weeks.

Ministerial Call.

Milford, Mass., Sept. 10.—Rev. Harry S. Longley, curate of St. Paul's church of Troy, N. Y., has accepted a call to Trinity Episcopal church of this place. His pastorate will commence Oct. 1.

WILL PROBABLY REFUSE.

Fall River Manufacturers Cannot Comply with Weavers' Demands.

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 10.—The manufacturers' association will meet to-morrow afternoon to consider the weavers' demand for higher wages. It is very probable that a committee will be appointed to draw up a firm and courteous letter declining to advance wages at this time and giving reasons therefor, backed by figures. Manufacturers are prepared to prove that the wage scale is not more than five or six per cent. below the average of the last eleven years. In February, when wages were advanced, the margin, according to manufacturers, was only four or five points below where it is at the present time, and, with the increase in prices they have since paid, all the profit has been taken out of the business. There are several mills buying cotton at present quotations, and these mills, manufacturers say, will hardly come out whole after making due allowance for depreciation. The linen mill strikers met yesterday and declined to accept the form of compromise suggested by the board of arbitration. It is probable that the trouble will not last more than a week, as the secretary of the union will see the agents this week. It is given out also that the mill will spend $150,000 on improvements within the next year, and the carding machinery will be so much benefitted that better work will result.

COUNTERFEITERS' CASE.

Dr. Bradford's Bail Fixed at $25,000 and Nixon's at $5,000.

New York, Sept. 10.—Dr. Orlando E. Bradford and John H. Nixon, an exkeeper at Sing Sing, the alleged counterfeiters who were arrested by secret service agents last Saturday, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Alexander yesterday. The commissioner fixed the bail of Dr. Bradford at $25,000 and that of Nixon at $5,000. The examination was set for Thursday, September 12. Dr. Joseph L. Courtney, one of the alleged counterfeiters, who was arrested in connection with Dr. Bradford, will be examined this afternoon before United States Commissioner Romaine in Jersey City, where he is wanted as one of the Brockway gang of counterfeiters. The case against Carlton Bentley, it was announced, was not yet ready for examination. Bentley was assistant to Dr. Bradford.

OLEOMARGARINE FOR BUTTER.

Porto Rico Intends To Retaliate Against New York Shippers.

Washington, Sept. 10.—Some body in New York has apparently been shipping oleomargarine to Porto Rico, West Indies, for butter. The department of state has received a report from Vice-Consul W. H. Latimer at Porto Rico stating that in regard to one particular shipment from New York analysis was made of the article imported as butter and it proved to be oleomargarine. A penalty to the amount of the duty on butter was imposed and the article was directed to be re-exported or rendered useless within a certain time. In case of future shipments a fine of one to five times the amount of the duty on butter will be imposed, according to the attending circumstances of fraud.

Y. M. C. A. IN SESSION.

Executive Committee Meet To Transact Important Business.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The New York state executive committee of the Young Men's Christian association met to-day to transact important business. Nine hundred members of the Interstate Ticket Agents' association en route to attend the semi-annual meeting of the American Ticket Agents' association have arrived here from the west by special train. The agents were entertained at the United States and Congress Hall hotels for four hours and then left for Lake George, where they will remain until to-morrow night, returning here for supper and then leave for Boston.

FORGERY AND THEFT.

Serious Charges Against a Man of Various Professions.

Belvidere, N. J., Sept. 10.—James W. McNeill of Holyoke, Mass., was arrested in Danbury, Conn., yesterday by Detective Hutchison of this place. McNeill came here about three weeks ago, claiming to be a horse doctor, dentist and undertaker. He was prominent in society. He settled his bills with forged checks, and when he left he stole a horse and wagon, but was traced by the detective and the outfit was recovered. McNeill is now in jail awaiting requisition papers.

Sanitary Potters' Convention.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The national convention of sanitary potters met in Cooperative hall in this city yesterday. Delegates were present from all the pottery towns in the country. Beyond the appointment of committees no business was transacted, the day being given up to festivities at a picnic. The convention meets again to-night.

SUNNY SOUTH INVADED

Louisville Surrenders to the Grand Army.

Horse, Foot and Dragoons Charge Through the Open Gates of the City and Receive a Smiling Welcome—An Immense Host Attending the Annual Encampment.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 10.—The invasion of southland by the Grand Army commenced yesterday and continued far into the night, and to-day still greater hosts are arriving. Horse, foot and dragoons from the two extremes of the continent, the veterans of the war, charged front, flank and rear through the open gates of Louisville and proceeded to avail themselves of the invitation to be be seen on every hand and to make themselves comfortable. Throughout the day the scenes about the four depots, where thousands had gathered to give the visitors greeting, were exhilarating and inspiring. Train after train, as fast as the deserted cars could be switched, deposited their contingents, which moved with military tread to the streets outside, whence, with bands and banners, they were escorted to headquarters.

Greater Crowds To-day.

Heavy and unexpected, however, as was the rush to-day, the railroad reports indicate that it will be eclipsed to-morrow. Single roads claim to have 150 coaches enroute or to start this morning, which would mean the movement of 44,000 people. Another reports that it is running trains in twelve sections and officials of all lines agree that the flow of visitors is unprecedented and has upset all their calculations. According to present indications the encampment in the matter of attendance will be one of the most successful in the history of the Grand Army.

Opening of Headquarters.

With the exception of the ladies of the G. A. R. all of the organizations which will meet in convention this week opened headquarters yesterday. Commander-in-Chief Lawler took possession of the main parlor of the Galt house, where he held a reception for the people of Louisville. New Albany and Jeffersonville. Next door the flag of the Woman's Relief corps was displayed and the national president, Margaret Wallace, with her staff, received the visitors. The tars of the Naval Veterans' association took possession of the boats William Tell and Carrie Hope, and the official float was placed in commission with the usual naval exercises.

Speeches of Welcome.

At the annual dog-watch last night the ex-sailors were welcomed by Gov. Brown and Mayor Tyler, and the responses were made by Rear-Admiral Allen of Hartford, Conn., and Shipmate Robinson of Philadelphia. The ex-prisoners of war established themselves in a wing of Music hall, where they fraternized with the survivors of the Mississippi river ram fleet, who meet in convention to-day.

For the Next Encampment.

Despite the fact that the rush more than doubled expectations there is little confusion or difficulty in housing the delegates and plans of the entertainment committee work to a charm. Twenty-five information bureaus were opened early in the day and these were later supplemented by hastily constructed booths at the street corners where all inquirers were answered and visitors who had become turned around were put on the right track. Only three hundred assignments to free quarters have been made. Elaborate press headquarters were opened by the local newspaper men, where every facility was afforded the visiting writers. Buffalo has entered the list for the honor of entertaining the next encampment. Among the delegates on the ground Denver is the favorite, with St. Paul a close second.

ALL FOR DR. TALMAGE.

His Wife's Will Leaves Him Heir to $166,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The will of Susan W. Talmage, wife of the Rev. Dr. Talmage, was admitted to probate yesterday, having been filed shortly after Mrs. Talmage's death on August 5. It bears the date of September 30, 1875. The property is valued at $166,000 and goes to Dr. Talmage. The sum, it is said, represents Rev. Dr. Talmage's earnings as a lecturer. For years his wife was his manager and press agent, taking entire charge of all his lecture engagements. Dr. Talmage, his friends say, turned over his lecture earnings to his wife, who had them thereafter absolutely at her disposal.

United American Mechanics.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Philadelphia is in the possession of badged and bespangled convention delegates who, with accompaning visitors, number nearly 15,000. They have gathered from all over the country to attend the meeting of the national council, order of United American Mechanics, and to celebrate the semi-centennial of the founding of the order.

Murdered His Father.

Logansport, Ind., Sept. 10.—At Galveston yesterday afternoon Frank Kemp, aged 28 years, fatally shot his father, Daniel Kemp, an aged and respected citizen. Young Kemp admits shooting his father, but declines to give any particulars.

Cambridge Team Practices.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 10.—The Cambridge team practiced yesterday behind closed gates. The drill was light, but the men are in much better form than at any time since they landed. None of the athletes went their full distance.

A Royal Betrothal.

Berlin, Sept. 10.—Princess Alexandra of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, third daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Cobnrg and Gotha (Duke of Edinburg) is formally betrothed to the hereditary Prince Ernest of Hohenlohe-Kangenburg.

Supt. Aldridge's Condition.

Albany, Sept. 10.—Supt. Aldridge of the state department of public works is reported as resting easy. Another consultation of physicians was held last night and they agreed that he was slightly improved.

A Connecticut woman has taken out naturalization papers.

A correspondent in the Elizabeth Leader favors Sheriff Kyte for the Republican nomination of Governor.

Mrs. McArthur, the woman who jumped from the Brooklyn bridge on her second attempt, was one woman who made up her mind and did not change it.

The political situation in Union and Somerset counties will become somewhat mixed by the decision of Judge VanSyckle on the Lay Judge law. This effectually puts an end to the candidacy of William A. Coddington in Union county, and Charles A. Reed in Somerset county, for the nominations of County Judgeships.

The decision of Judge VanSyckle declaring unconstitutional the law legislating out of office the Lay Judges is one of the evidences of hasty and bitterly partisan legislation indulged by the last Legislature. The avaricious desire of the Republicans to grasp everything in the way of office throughout the State has in this case proved to be a boomerang.

New Jersey has led all the States in the Union in the good roads movement. It has more miles of improved roads than any other State, and we regret much to see that some of these roads are not giving satisfaction. There are improved roads in fact and improved roads in name. The former have a good foundation and a well-rolled smooth top of small stones. The New Jersey improved roads that are proving rocky and rutty have in their construction some of the elements that go to make an improved road, but not all. A stone road where large and small stones are mixed together indiscriminately and left to the wear and tear of travel to pack down and render smooth may keep teams from miring in winter, but cannot possibly make smooth and agreeable summer roads. To insure good roads there is need first of a good road law, and then of a body of men in authority able and willing to carry out the law thoroughly and intelligently.—Philadelphia Press.

ITALIAN ASSAULTS A GIRL.

OTTO ROBS HER AND IS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

The Case of Auctioneer Wardell Brought Up, With Mayor Hegeman a Prominent Witness—Lively Tilts.

Business was unusually brisk in the borough court this morning, and in consequence there was a large crowd of spectators.

The first case was that of Miss Wyckoff, of Washingtonville, against Angrello Otto, an Italian. Miss Wyckoff was accosted by Otto yesterday noon at Washingtonville, assaulted and robbed of $1. He tore her clothes and frightened the woman very much. After a hearing Justice Crosley committed Otto to the Somerville Jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Constable Stewart made the arrest and also took the Italian to Somerville.

The next case was the Borough against Auctioneer William Wardell.

It appears that the latter opened a store in the Bock building on Somerset street for the purpose of doing an auction business. Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., became acquainted with the facts, and after visiting the place one night instructed Marshal Doud to stop the man from doing an auction business as he had no license.

Borough Counsel Reed appeared for the borough and Lawyer Walter Hetfield for Wardell.

A number of witnesses were sworn and testified as to the nature of the business carried on.

Mayor Hegeman was one of the chief witnesses and it was proved that the Mayor had the privilege of giving licenses in the borough under the existing ordinance. There were several amusing tilts between counsel and lawyer that gave the crowd something to laugh at. Lawyer Hetfield offered several objections, but the court overruled them. Wardell gave the impression that he was going to settle in North Plainfield, but borough counsel brought out the fact that for the past two or three months he had been moving about considerable from town to town.

Justice Crosley imposed a fine of $10 or twenty days, and on the advice of Lawyer Hetfield, Wardell refused to pay the fine. He was therefore placed in the borough lockup and will probably be taken to Somerville.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

ENDS A FIGHT IN SOMERSET.

The Judgeship Promised to Be the Life of the Campaign.

The news of the decision of the Supreme Court at Trenton that the Elective Judiciary law is unconstitutional has created quite a panic among the politicians of Somerset county, says the Somerville correspondent of The World. The most vigorous fight in the local campaign was over the judgeship, and the decision of the court brings it to a sudden close.

The Democratic candidates were the present judge, John D. Bartine and ex-Prosecutor of the Pleas William V. Steele. The Republican lawyers who had an eye on the berth were Louis H. Schenck and James L. Griggs. On the Democratic side the contest was especially vigorous, and it was taking a turn which the leaders feared might have made trouble. Many of them feel glad that this danger has been eliminated from the canvass.

Judge Bartine, who was reappointed by Governor Werts last winter, will continue on the bench, so the Democrats lose nothing. The fight for the nomination on the Republican side was not so intense, but it was believed by the Republican leaders that they nominated, and they feel disappointed. It seems likely that no nominations will be made for these offices pending the possible reversal of this decision by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

TROLLEY COMPETITION.

The Jersey Central Has to Meet the Rates of the Trolley.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has issued a new passenger tariff between Roselle, Elizabeth and Newark. The fare between Roselle and Newark, which has been 35 cents for excursion tickets, has been reduced to 33 cents, single fare 21 cents; Elizabeth to Newark and return excursion from 25 to 20 cents, single ticket 12 cents. The new schedule of rates will take effect on September 15. The cause of the reduction in fare is due to the trolley system between Elizabethport and Newark, which has been doing nearly all the business between the two cities at a fare of 20 cents for the round trip. It is said that the trolley company will reduce the round trip to 10 cents, or 5 cents each way. The distance is about the same as between Newark and Orange, where only 5 cents is charged for a single trip. It is said that the Central Railroad will make a like reduction in fare from Bergen Point to Jersey City, where a like competition with the trolley cars is encountered.

Chinatown Mission Work.

William Hauptman, of the Chinatown mid-night mission, will speak to men at the Y. M. C. A. Hall next Sunday afternoon at 4:15. The male quartette will sing. All were highly pleased with Mr. Hauptman when he was here before and a large attendance is anticipated. Go early and secure a good seat.

Trinity Church to Be Painted.

At a special meeting of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church last evening it was decided to give the church edifice two coats of paint and the wardens who have the matter in charge today awarded the contract to Messrs. Marsh, Ayers & Co. They will start on the work tomorrow.

Another Handsome Residence.

Ground is to be broken on Central avenue this week for a handsome residence to be erected for D. M. Moore, of East Fifth street. The property was formerly owned by Frank Raymond, and the house to be built upon it is to be a very fine one with all modern improvements.

A Large Attendance.

The attendance at the public schools yesterday was surprisingly large considering that it was the first day of school. The total number of pupils registered were 1378, who were divided among the different schools as follows: Bryant, 425; Franklin, 430; Washington, 192; Irving, 331.

Well Deserved Punishment.

Two well-known colored men of Plainfield were driving a handsome sorrel horse about town Saturday evening. They tied him to a post and began to abuse him. He broke away at last and dragged one of the men for almost two blocks, badly cutting and bruising him.

That Stench.

The almost unbearable stench in the rear of French's carriage factory is complained of. It is caused by the brook which is in a terrible condition. If it is not attended to pretty soon it will cause an epidemic.

A LOSS OF $80,000,000!!!

Labor-saving inventions or discoveries have often been violently opposed on the ground that they take workingmen's bread out of their mouths. Although experience has shown the fallacy of that theory the feeling, or fear, was natural.

But it is not so much the lack of work as the inability to work that causes poverty and suffering. In England and Wales every workingman averages ten days of sickness every year, with a total loss of wages for all of about $80,000,000 per year. In this country the loss is much greater. In all countries the prevailing disease is indigestion and dyspepsia and its consequences—such as rheumatism, and other ailments resulting from impure blood; a result of dyspepsia.

No thoroug, rapid and trustworthy cure for this universal and obstinate malady existed until the Mt. Lebanon (N. Y.) Community of Shakers placed upon the market their now famous remedy called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is prepared from roots and herbs cultivated solely by them.

Nothing more certain, safe and palatable can be imagined. It expels the impurities from the body by means of the bowels, kidneys and skin, and imparts vigor and tone to the stomach—upon whose proper action all our strength, activity and endurance depends. For many years the Shakers have given earnest attention to this subject, and their final success is thankfully admitted by the multitudes who have been cured by the Cordial after all other means have failed. Their high reputation for skill as herbalists, for honesty and religious sincerity guarantees whatever they recommend.

No invention can ever take your work from you if you are able to work. Health and strength are the vital considerations.

In order to find whether the Shaker Digestive Cordial is adapted to your case try a small bottle. Its effect is immediate. For sale by nearly all druggists.

"ONLY SKIN DEEP," yet freckles, sunburn and tan don't add to one's beauty! What then, aside from the dangerous and poisonous "skin cures" so freely advertised, can we use to clear and bleach a bad complexion? Well, why not try your grandmother's cure—lemon juice? It will surely do all that can be safely done to clear the skin. And try it in the pleasant form of REYNOLD'S LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE. The results will please you. Sprinkler bottles 25 cents at HIS WIFE'S CHUM.

He had been married a year and still found that marital happiness was really a tangible thing, not the fanciful vaporings of poetic enthusiasts. He was able to crumble in the dust the highest and strongest arguments brought forward by cynical bachelors that marriage is a failure. But yet, with all his devotions he was able to appreciate a pretty woman. He kept this appreciation to himself. In a year's time he had learned many valuable truths of whose existence he had not even dreamed before. One of these was that it was far better for a married man to keep some things to himself and to observe a religious silence on others. One subject upon which he kept a religious silence was that of praising pretty women in his wife's hearing. When he had married her he thought his wife the most beautiful creature which the wildest dreams of a lover's fancy would conjure up, but after a year's constant association with her he had been forced to acknowledge to himself that there were others as pretty and at last had decided that some were prettier, but that none was better or sweeter he never doubted.

His wife loved him with that fond private affectionate contempt which is common to all married women and which is the result of their tactful management of apparently refractory husbands who are all unconscious that they are being managed. But take things altogether this husband and wife were as happy together as are all young couples who have been married a year.

One morning at breakfast, as his wife, clad in a bewitching gown, was pouring the coffee, the smart, white aproned maid came in with the mail, and amid the pile of letters was one upon which his wife seized eagerly and tore open with the unconventional aid of the butter knife.

"Oh, Jack," she said, joyfully, as she read on with a smiling face. "Maude is coming. You remember Maude?"

He did not remember Maude and said so.

"Oh, yes, you do," his wife replied. "She was my chum when you came to see me before we were married. She used to plague us by coming in when we wanted to be alone. Don't you remember?"

Jack had a dim recollection of a little girl who used to make herself "too confoundedly humorous," as Jack had once said in a moment of exasperation, but her face he could not for the time call to mind.

Every afternoon at 5:30 the train started back from the big, smoky, noisy L. & A. station, and every afternoon at 5:20 Jack entered the last car with his grip and his paper. In the middle of the week the train was seldom crowded and often Jack found himself entirely alone for most of the journey.

This happened to be one of the days and Jack stretched himself out comfortably and began to read the paper. The main line pulled out in a slow and dignified manner. Jack saw a flash of white fly by the window and the next moment a charming young woman with dark brown hair, laughing brown eyes and a jaunty blue and white shirt waist and a red necktie stood in the door, a vision of summer personified.

She was so extremely pretty that Jack could not help looking at her again as she came down the aisle. She caught his eye, a half surprised expression flashed over her face, she paused uncertainly and then deliberately sat down directly opposite Jack. She arrayed her blue skirt daintily, looked out of the window and then at Jack, who found himself stealing a surreptitious glances at her from the edge of the paper which he was pretending to read. The same little comedy was gone through with again, and this time she smiled slightly but encouragingly, and Jack smiled back. Nay, do not frown. What would you have done under the same circumstances, oh, stern and moral benedicts of a year's standing?

At any rate, Jack smiled, and then, with malice aforethought, as he very well knew, this pretty girl began ineffectually to raise the car window. Now this has been the accepted prelude to car flirtations since the inventions of railroads, and there is good grounds for thinking that it may be the reason why car windows always stick.

As soon as Jack saw her attempts he gallantly sprang up and offered to help her. With a charming confusion she accepted, and after a few vicious tugs the window came up, and Jack sat down beside the charming young woman. He was so exhausted that he had to.

"Oh, thank you so much," she said. "It is so hard to get these windows up. As I was coming through on the main train I tried so hard to get one up and no one offered to help me."

"Have you ever been out this way before?" he asked.

"Oh, yes. I used to live in Boston or about here."

"Yes, indeed, I know—er, that is, I—do not know any one now. Everybody has moved away."

"Now, what the dickens made her blush like that?" thought Jack, as the young lady suddenly became intensely interested in the passing landscape. She turned back again after a time, but evidently had great difficulty in meeting her companion's eyes.

Every reference to Boston or its vicinity was discouraged with restrained confusion. Jack made some tactful attempts at getting her name, but every one was foiled.

"She's a bright girl," said Jack to himself, "but what makes her want to giggle all the time?"

The train approached Alton Center and the young lady made preparations to leave the train, and while it pulled into the station Jack carried her bag to the door and wished her a goodby. She turned as if to speak to him and then ran down the steps.

"She's a mighty pretty girl," mused Jack as he resumed his seat. "But what—wonder if I'd better say anything to Edith about it. No, I won't—no need of it," and he again began to read his paper.

His wife met him at the gate and her face wore a look of disappointment.

"Maude is not coming to-day, Jack," she said. "She wrote me she was going to stop off to see a friend and come on to-morrow on the afternoon train. Isn't that mean, after all my preparations, too?"

Jack thought it was, and the subject dropped. In the evening they went over to the Van Pluy's to play whist and Edith and Mr. Van Pluys beat Jack and Mrs. Van Pluys, much to Edith's delight and Jack's chagrin, for if there is one thing on which Jack prided himself, it was his whist and his famous combination play of the king second hand which had never failed of its object, but did fail signally that night.

For some unaccountable reason the next day did not pass as well for Jack in the city. Everything seemed to go wrong. His typewriter spoiled two briefs when they were almost done, and he dropped his big inkstand and spilled all of the ink on the pretty rug which he and Edith had selected to make the office look more cheery. When it came time for him to go to the station he was glad and sank within his accustomed seat with a sigh of relief.

He remembered the affair of the day before and wished that he had told Edith, and compromised with himself by deciding to tell her when he reached home. The monotonous rattle of clinking cars jarred upon him, and he could not read. When the train stopped at West Alton his temper had not improved materially, and when he ran into a fat man with two grips he did not even beg the fat man's pardon, although he knew it was his own fault, but muttered savagely something about people not looking where they were going.

Edith did not meet him at the gate as usual, and that irritated him more. As he neared the little porch he heard the sound of animated voices. One was Edith's. The other sounded strangely familiar. Where had he heard it before? He racked his brain, but could not determine. As he opened the door to the cool, darkened sitting-room, Edith met him.

"Maude has come, Jack," she said, and dragged him into the room where, seated on the divan with the big cushions was a white form which his eyes, unaccustomed to the dimness of the room, could not make out.

"Maude, this is my husband, Jack," said Edith. "You remember Jack?"

"I believe that we have had the pleasure of meeting more recently, Mr. Strong," said Maude, with a roguish smile.

Jack started back with his mouth open, but no voice came from it. He was petrified. He could only stare at her helplessly. She was the girl whom he had met so unconventionally the day before in the car.

"Er—ah, yes, of course," he managed to gasp, "delighted"—and sank down upon the nearest chair with the perspiration standing out upon his forehead. His wife stood like a statue of ice and looked from Maude, who was smilingly self-possessed, to Jack, who looked like a melting molasses candy image.

"I do not quite understand," she began.

Maude said nothing, but kept her calm, roguish smile. Edith turned to Jack and almost caught him in the act of making a wild, appealing gesture toward Maude. He wilted further.

"John," said Edith—and when she said "John" she meant what she said, and Jack knew it—"John, what does this mean?"

"Er—my dear—it means—I—the fact is— Oh, dash it—I—I—saw her yesterday in the car. That is what it means," and Jack blurted it out in a voice which was a combination of a groan and a shout.

"Met her in the car? Well, I see no reason why you should be so confused about it."

Edith had become very haughty.

Jack said nothing. He was swearing. He was swearing to himself. Maude saw that it had gone far enough, and that it was time for her to speak.

"Come, Edith," she said, "I'll confess. When I entered the car yesterday afternoon I recognized your husband at once and was going to speak to him, but I saw that he did not recognize me. I—well, I do not know why I did it, but you know my fault is liking jokes and all that, and I just thought it would be fun to play a trick on him and flirt with him and then tell you all about it. He kindly helped me"—here she smiled at Jack, who cursed mentally—"to raise the window, and then he talked very nicely to me. And I nearly died with laughing and having to keep it to myself. When I left the train at Alton I intended to tell him all about it, but the thought of seeing the expression on his face when he met me to-day kept me from it. That's all, Edith. It was just one of my awful practical jokes. Forgive me, dear, but I really could not help it."

Jack had straightened up when she began her tale, and when she had finished added emphatically:

"Yes, by George, that's all, Edith. I was going to tell you all about it to-night myself."

Edith looked from one to the other doubtfully, and when she thought of the unutterable woe depicted on the face of poor Jack and his bad quarter of an hour her sense of humor came to her and she was forced to smile and was joined by Maude, who had great difficulty in keeping her face straight for the last fifteen minutes, and by Jack, upon whom the smile of Edith had produced a reaction. They all laughed loudly and long, and Edith kissed Maude, and then everybody went in to one of those delightful little dinners for which the Strongs are so justly famous.

But that night after Maude had gone to her room and Jack was smoking his last pipe, Edith looked up from her book and gazed at Jack long and earnestly. He met her gaze with a fond smile.

"Jack, Maude is a dear girl, isn't she?"

"Why, yes, of course she is."

"She's an old friend of mine, too, and I think a great deal of her. She and I went to school together. She was always so jolly and so fond of practical jokes and that sort of thing, you know."

She paused and fingered the cover of her book. She was deep in thought.

"Jack, don't you think that people who are that way carry things a little too far sometimes?"

And Jack smiled.—Rochester Post-Express.

THE HERRESHOFFS.

Builders of the Defender. The Blind Brothers and Their Accomplishments.

It may be said without question that the people both in this country and on the other side of the Atlantic learned more of Bristol, R. I., and its geographical position in the world during the early part of July than they ever knew of it before.

This was due to the fact that the new American yacht, Defender, was built there by the Iselin-Morgan-Vanderbilt syndicate to cross swords, metaphorically speaking, with the English yacht, Valkyrie III, for the possession of the much coveted America's cup.

But, while the interest of the American and English people were concentrated upon the description given of the Defender the incidental visitors at Bristol became intensely interested in the Herreshoff family, the builders of the new American yacht.

Much has been said and written of the Herreshoff works, and of the seven brothers—three of whom are blind and four of whom have not been bereft of the principal one of the five senses, the eyesight—but only those who have been brought in direct daily association with them knows how interesting the daily life of each is, especially of the four brothers who live in Bristol.

A detailed history of their lives—boyhood and manhood—their mechanical labors, their business conduct and their educational work would make a most readable book. The fame of the Herreshoffs as boat builders has extended to all parts of the world, notwithstanding that no large ocean steamships has been turned out from their works.

Perhaps the largest vessel built by this firm is the torpedo boat Cushing, of the American Navy. The remarkable performances of the Herreshoff boat Stiletto, when on the Hudson River she passed the great steamboat Mary Powell and left her far behind, attracted the attention of the Government to that extent that it was decided to purchase her for the Navy.

There have also been built by the Herreshoffs a number of the fastest steam yachts and sailing yachts that were ever put afloat, the best of them, of course, being the Defender and the Vigilant.

Notwithstanding that blindness is a stumbling block to ambition, there are not many men living who are more farseeing, more intelligent and possessing more desirable accomplishments than the blind brothers—who were not born blind, but lost their eyesight when young lads.

The Herreshoffs are of German descent, the first of the family being Charles Frederick Herreshoff, who came to this country from Germany in 1790.

Nathaniel Green Herreshoff, or "Capt. Nat," as he is called, was born 1848, and is the mechanical genius of the family. It is he who designs and builds the yachts, and he is an expert sailer of yachts as well. He had the tiller of the Defender in all her trial races in Narragansett Bay before she was turned over to the syndicate.

He has the full possession of his eyesight; he lays down the designs, works out the models, makes all the calculations of measurements of hull, spars and sails, and the effectiveness and beauty of the Herreshoff models are due to his genius.

He is a large, muscular man, with a full, brown beard, is slightly round shouldered, and is one of the most active men about the works, looking more like the superintending workman in his dress than one of the owners in such an establishment. He is modest and retiring, appearing brusque at times, which is probably due to the fact that he loves to think more than he loves to talk.

In the building of the Defender the utmost secrecy was observed, and notwithstanding various schemes were retorted to by different ones to obtain information as to the lines and dimensions of the boat, her spars, sails, etc., nothing could be learned from the workmen or any one else having knowledge of the craft.

The designs and drawings were laid down in a room in Nathaniel Herreshoff's house, kept under lock and key; the hull was built in the shipyard, not only kept securely locked but with a watchman outside to keep away all who had no business there; the spars were made in a building a short distance east of the shops on the beach, and securely locked, and the sails were made in a room in the rubber works, about a half a mile from the Herreshoff shops, and no one was admitted to the room without a key to the door.

Willie's Bargain.

"I have just made a splendid trade with my employers," said Willie Wobbles. "They assure me that I have quite gotten the best of them, you know."

"How was it?"

"I told them my time was worth more than the money they gave me, and they told me that, as the time was most valuable, I could keep that and they would keep the money."

THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

By BRANDER MATTHEWS

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER IV.

Although the Whittiers, father and son, spent Sunday out of town, Paul made an excuse to the friends whom they were visiting and returned to the city by a midnight train. Thus he was enabled to present himself at the office of the Rampo works very early on Monday morning.

It was so early indeed that no one of the employes had yet arrived when the son of the senior partner, bag in hand, pushed open the street door and entered the long store at the far end of which the porter was still tidying up for the day's work.

"An' is that you, Mister Paul?" Mike asked in surprise, as he came out of the private office to see who the early visitor might be. "An' what brought ye out o' yer bed before breakfast like this?"

"I always get out of bed before breakfast," Paul replied. "Don't you?"

"Would I get up if I hadn't got to get up to get my livin'?" the porter responded.

Paul entered the office, followed by Mike, still wondering why the young man was there at that hour.

After a swift glance around the office Paul put down his bag on the table and turned suddenly to the porter with a question.

"When does Bob get down here?"

Mike looked at the clock in the corner before answering,

"It'll be ten minutes," he said, "or maybe twenty, before the boy does be here to-day, seein' it's Monday mornin', an' he'll be tired with not workin' of Sunday."

"Ten minutes?" repeated Paul, slowly. After a moment's thought he continued: "Then I'll have to ask you to go out for me, Mike."

"I can go anywhere ye want, Mister Paul," the porter responded.

"I want you to go," began Paul—"I want you to go——" and he hesitated as though he were not quite sure what it was he wished the porter to do. "I want you to go to the office of the Gotham Gazette and get me two copies of yesterday's paper. Do you understand?"

"Maybe they won't be open so early in the mornin'," said the Irishman.

"That's no matter," said Paul, hastily correcting himself. "I mean that I want you to go now and get the papers, if you can. Of course, if the office isn't open I shall have to send again later."

"I'll be goin' now, Mister Paul," and Mike took his hat and started off at once.

Paul walked through the store with the porter. When Mike had gone the young man locked the front door and returned at once to the private office in the rear. He shut himself in and lowered all the shades so that whatever he might do inside the office could not be seen by anyone on the outside.

Whatever it was he wished to do, he was able to do it swiftly, for in less than a minute after he had closed the door of the office he opened it again and came out into the main store with his bag in his hand. He walked leisurely to the front of the store, arriving there just in time to unlock the door as the office boy came around the corner, smoking a cigarette.

When Bob, still puffing steadily, was about to open the door and enter the store he looked up and discovered that Paul was gazing at him. The boy pinched the cigarette out of his mouth and dropped it outside, and then came in, his eyes expressing his surprise at the presence of the senior partner's son down town at that early hour in the morning.

Paul greeted the boy pleasantly, but Bob got away from him as soon as possible, for ever since the young man had told what had gone on in the office when Bob was its only occupant, the office boy was a little afraid of the young man, as though some way mysterious, not to say uncanny.

"I WANT YOU TO GO—" BEGAN PAUL.

Paul thought it best to wait for the porter's return; and he stood outside, under the archway, for five minutes, smoking a cigar, with his bag at his feet.

When Mike came back with the two copies of the Sunday newspaper he had been sent to get, Paul gave him the money for them and an extra quarter for himself. Then the young man picked up his bag again.

"When my father comes down, Mike," he said, "tell him I may be a little late in getting back this morning."

"An' are ye goin' away now, Mister Paul?" the porter asked. "What good was it then ye got out o' bed before breakfast and come down here so early in the mornin'?"

Paul laughed a little. "I had a reason for coming here this morning," he answered briefly; and with that he walked away, his bag in one hand and the two bulky and gaudy Sunday newspapers in the other.

Mike watched him turn the corner and then went into the store again, where Bob greeted him promptly with a request to know why the old man's son had been getting up by the bright light.

"If I was the boss or the boss' son, either," said Bob, "I wouldn't get up till I was good an' ready. I'd have my breakfast in bed, if I had a mind to—an' my dinner, too—an' my supper. An' I wouldn't do no work an' I'd go to the theayter every night an' twict on Saturdays."

"I dunno why Mister Paul was down," Mike explained. "All he wanted was two o' thim Sunday papers with pictures into 'em. What did he want two o' thim for, I dunno. There's readin' enough in one o' thim to last me a month o' Sundays."

It may be surmised that Mike would have been still more in the dark as to Paul Whittier's reasons for coming down town so early that Monday morning, if he could have seen the young man throw the two copies of the Gotham Gazette into the first ash-cart he passed after he was out of the range of the porter's vision.

Paul was not the only member of Whittier, Wheatcroft & Co. to arrive at the office early that morning. Mr. Wheatcroft was usually punctual, taking his seat at his desk just as the clock struck half-past nine. On this Monday morning he entered the store a little before nine.

As he walked back to the office he looked over at the desks of the clerks as though he was seeking some one.

At the door of the office he met Bob.

"Hasn't the Major come down yet?" he asked shortly.

"No, sir," the office boy answered. "He don't never get here till nine."

"H'm," grunted the junior partner. "When he does come, tell him I want to see him at once! At once! do you understand?"

"I ain't deaf and dumb and blind," Bob responded. "I'll steer him into you soon as ever he shows up."

But, for a wonder, the old bookkeeper was late that morning. Ordinarily he was a model of exactitude. Yet the clock struck nine and half-past and ten before he appeared in the store.

Before he had changed his coat Bob was at his side.

"Mr. Wheatcroft, he wants to see you now in a hurry," said the boy.

Major Van Zandt paled swiftly and steadied himself by a grasp of the railing.

"Does Mr. Wheatcroft wish to see me?" he asked faintly.

"You bet he does," the boy answered, "an' in a hurry, too. He come bright an' early this mornin' a-purpose to see you, an' he's been a-waitin' for two hours. An' I guess he's got his mad up now!"

When the old bookkeeper, with his blanched face and his faltering step, entered the private office, Mr. Wheatcroft wheeled around in his chair.

"Oh, it's you, is it?" he cried. "At last!"

"I regret that I was late this morning, Mr. Wheatcroft," Van Zandt began.

"That's no matter!" said his employer. "At least I want to talk to you about something else."

"About something else?" echoed the old man feebly.

"Yes," responded Mr. Wheatcroft. "Shut the door behind you, please, so that that red-headed cub out there can't hear what I'm going to say. And take a chair. Yes. There is something else I've got to say to you, and I want you to be frank with me."

Whatever it was that Mr. Wheatcroft had to say to Major Van Zandt it had to be said under the eyes of the clerks on the other side of the glass partition. And it took a long time saying, for it was evident to any observer of the two men as they sat there in the private office that Mr. Wheatcroft was trying to force an explanation of some kind from the old bookkeeper, and that the Major was resisting his employer's entreaties as best he could. Apparently the matter under discussion was of an importance so grave as to make Mr. Wheatcroft resolutely retain his self-control; and not once did he let his voice break out explosively as was his custom.

Major Van Zandt was still closeted with Mr. Wheatcroft when Mr. Whittier arrived. The senior partner stopped near the street door to speak to a clerk; and he was joined almost immediately by his son.

"Well, Paul," said the father, "have I got down here before you after all, and in spite of your running away last night?"

"No," the son responded, "I was the first to arrive this morning—luckily."

"Luckily?" echoed his father. "I suppose that means that you have been able to accomplish your purpose—whatever it was. You didn't tell me, you know."

"I'm ready to tell you now, father," said Paul, "since I have succeeded."

Walking down the store together they came to the private office.

As the old bookkeeper saw them he started up and made as though to leave the office.

"Keep your seat, Major," cried Mr. Wheatcroft, sternly, but not unkindly. "Keep your seat, please."

Then he turned to Mr. Whittier. "I have something to tell you both," he said, "and I want the Major here while I tell you. Paul, may I trouble you to see that door is closed so that we are out of hearing?"

"Certainly," Paul responded, as he shut the door.

"Well, Wheatcroft," Mr. Whittier asked, "what is all this mystery of yours now?"

The junior partner swung around in his chair and faced Mr. Whittier.

"My mystery?" he cried. "It's the mystery that puzzled us all—and I've solved it."

"What do you mean?" asked the senior partner.

"What I mean is that somebody has been opening that safe there in the corner and reading our private letter-book and finding out what we were bidding on important contracts. What I mean is that this man has taken this information filched from us and has sold it to our competitors who were not too scrupulous as to be unwilling to buy stolen goods!"

"We all suspected this, as you know," the elder Whittier said. "Have you anything new now?"

"Haven't I?" returned Mr. Wheatcroft. "I've found the man! that's all!"

"You, too?" ejaculated Paul.

"Who is he?" asked the senior partner.

"Wait a minute," Mr. Wheatcroft begged. "Don't be in a hurry and I'll tell you. Yesterday afternoon I don't know what possessed me, but I felt drawn down town for some reason. I wanted to see if anything was going on here. I knew we had made that bid Saturday, and I wondered if anybody would try to get at it on Sunday. So I came down about four o'clock—and I saw a man sneak out of the front door of this office. I followed him as swiftly as I could and as quietly, for I didn't want to give the alarm until I knew more. The man did not see me, and as he turned to go up the steps of the elevated railroad station at the corner I saw his face."

"ABOUT SOMETHING ELSE?" ECHOED THE OLD MAN, FEEBLY.

"Did you recognize him?" asked Mr. Whittier.

"Yes," was the answer. "And he did not see me. There were tears rolling down his cheeks—perhaps that's the reason. This morning I called him in here and he has finally confessed the whole thing."

"Who—who is it?" asked Mr. Whittier, dreading to look at the old bookkeeper, who had been in the employ of the firm for thirty years and more.

"It is Major Van Zandt!" Mr. Wheatcroft declared.

There was a moment of silence; then the voice of Paul Whittier was heard saying, "I think there is some mistake!"

"A mistake?" cried Mr. Wheatcroft. "What kind of a mistake?"

"A mistake as to the guilty man," responded Paul.

"Do you mean that the Major isn't guilty?" asked Mr. Wheatcroft.

"That's what I mean," Paul returned.

"But he has confessed," Mr. Wheatcroft retorted.

"I can't help that," was the response. "He isn't the man who opened that safe yesterday afternoon at half-past three and took out the letter-book."

The old bookkeeper looked at the young man in frightened amazement.

"I have confessed it," he said piteously. "I have confessed it."

"I know you did, Major," Paul declared not unkindly. "And I don't know why you did. For you were not the man."

"And if the man who confesses is not the man who did it, who is?"

"I don't know who he is—although I have my suspicions," said Paul; "but I have his photograph—taken in the act!"

DOCTORS TRY MUNYON.

Official Records Open to the Public.

A Well-Known Physician Tests the New Discovery with Most Successful Results.

Dr. George F. Frooks, No. 29 Temple place, Boston, says:

"I have used a good many rheumatism medicines in the course of my practice, but I can candidly say that I never saw a remedy as effective as Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. I gave the sample bottle I got Monday to one of my patients, a lady, who has had chronic rheumatism in her limbs for years. Her knee and elbow joints were stiff, and she suffered great pain. Its effect was simply marvelous. Relief from pain was obtained in a few hours after the first dose, and inside of twenty-four hours the lady was feeling better than she had for years. I shall prescribe Munyon's Cure for all cases of rheumatism that come under my care in the future."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism tism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago or pain in the back speedily cured.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

Those who are in doubt as to the nature of their disease should address Professor Munyon, 1505 Arch street, Philadelphia, giving full symptoms of their disease. Professor Munyon will carefully dignose the case and give you the benefit of his advice absolutely free of all charge. The Remedies will be sent to any address on receipt of retail price

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR RECEPTION.

The Westfield Societies Will Give One to the Camp Wolf Workers.

The Christian Endeavor societies of Westfield will give a reception to Miss Curry, the matron, and all the helpers at Camp Wolf, the fresh air fund camp, at Westfield. The reception is to be held in the Presbyterian chapel on next Monday evening. The two Plainfield societies, those from the Park Avenue Baptist and the Congregational churches, who contributed to the support of the camp, have been invited to attend, and also to furnish one number for the programme.

Both societies accepted the invitation, and the Park Avenue Baptist society selected Miss Emma V. Fish to give a recitation as their share in the programme. The Congregational society have not definitely settled on their part of the programme as yet.

MRS. COX GETS THE EMBLEM.

She Has Brought the Largest Number of Odd Ladies Members.

Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I, O. L., met last night for the first, in their new rooms in Red Men's Hall. Three applications for membership were acted upon and one received. It was decided to hold the anniversary exercises Monday, September 23d, with an entertainment and supper. As a mark of distinction Mrs. Andrew Cox was presented by the lodge with a gold emblem for bringing in the most members during the past three months. Mrs. Mattis made the presentation with a few excellent remarks and Mrs. Cox accepted it in her usual happy manner.

A Large Pumpkin.

Charles Vail, whose farm is located on Rockview Terrace, has quite a curiosity in the shape of an immense pumpkin, as large as a wash tub, being over three feet across. A number of his friends advised Mr. Vail to send it to the State fair, but Mr. Vail says he is going to see how large it will finally grow.

THE BITING POWER OF MAN.

A Scientific Test of the Power of the Jaws in Eating.

The man with the iron jaw used to be a prominent figure in the traveling rural shows. He did all sorts of wonderful things with his teeth—picked up barrels full of water, bent iron bars and held his wife in the air while he himself hung head downward from a trapeze on his toes. All this time the jaws of the audience were wide open—a favorite rural manifestation of astonishment.

If they had only read of the recent experiments of Dr. G. W. Black they might not have been so overcome with wonder. Dr. Black has been measuring the biting power of all kinds of persons—men, women and children—and he finds that in muscular strength the jaw compares favorably, for its size, with any other part of the body. And no wonder. It has plenty of practice.

A man may reduce his biceps to flabbiness by inaction; he may cause his calves to dwindle by always patronizing the street cars instead of walking, but unless he feeds entirely on gruel he must exercise his jaw muscles thrice a day or starve.

And the strength he must exert in chewing is by no mean contemptible, either. To crush a piece of steak, according to Dr. Black, a bite of 40 to 45 pounds is necessary. That is, if the proper machine was so rigged that by seizing a double lever between the jaws an object could be lifted from the floor, a 40 pound weight could be so lifted by the force necessary to crush a bit of steak.

Repeat this effort every time you chew and you can get an idea of how much exercise is required to eat one's dinner. The idea of doing work with one's jaw has generally been regarded as a fiction of the humorist, and is the subject of countless funny paragraphs about boarding house fare, but there is really nothing about it. It is real downright hard work for Dr. Black says so, and his statistics back him up.

And what makes it harder still is that most people habitually use much more force than is necessary in chewing their food. For instance, in chewing steak whose crushing point is at 40 to 45 pounds, the persons tested by Dr. Black used a force of 60 to 80 pounds—from 15 to 40 pounds more than was necessary. All this extra force, of course, is worse than wasted, but probably the generality of mankind will keep on wasting strength just so till a more systematic method of eating is to be adopted.

An Oversight.

"Have you read Brown's speech to the jury in that murder case he has been trying?" asked the merchant.

"I glanced it over," replied the lawyer, in a deprecatory way.

"It seemed to me that it had some very strong points," suggested the merchant.

"Oh, yes; there were some pretty good points in it," returned the lawyer.

"I couldn't see a chance to find fault with it anywhere. It was one of the ablest arguments I ever read."

"Oh, that's because you are not a lawyer. The argument was all right, but from a truly legal point of view the speech was faulty, extremely faulty."

"In what way?" inquired the merchant in surprise.

"There were some fearful oversights in it," explained the lawyer. "It violated all precedents in at least two instances."

"What were they?"

"Well, at the opening of his address he failed to say that it was the most intelligent jury that he had ever had the honor of addressing. That was an almost unheard-of oversight and reflects seriously upon his training as a lawyer. Then when he closed he failed to compliment the jury on its patience and close attention to the proceedings."

"But it wasn't patient or attentive," protested the merchant.

"That makes no difference," replied the lawyer. "No real attorney was ever known to leave those remarks out of his speech, no matter what kind of a jury he had. Such neglect is unprofessional in the extreme."—Chicago Post.

Not a Question of Profit.

Those brewers and liquor dealers who complain that they lose money by the closing of saloons on Sunday are furnishing an argument to many minds in support of keeping up Sunday prohibition, and they are demolishing one of the strongest arguments against it. Those people who believe that Sunday selling leads to excessive drinking and the squandering of the money of the poor will find in this complaint conclusive evidence that they are right, and will regard the loss of brewers and saloon keepers as the saving of people who need the money more than they do, and who will make better use of it by not using it in drink. Those who have maintained that shutting off the business of saloons on Sunday would not lessen drinking, but would lead to the buying of drink on Saturday and its secret and excessive consumption elsewhere than in saloons on Sunday, will find in this same complaint a conclusive answer to their chief argument. It involves an admission that less liquor is sold, that less money is spent for it, and consequently, that the results of the traffic, be the same good or bad, are curtailed.

Going Too Far.

"And so you are married?" said Mrs. Keedick to her niece from the West.

"Yes, auntie."

"Joined for life, eh?"

"Oh, it's hardly that bad. I'm a Chicago girl, you know."

BLOOMERS NOT IMMODEST.

Founder Bradley, of Asbury Park, Says They Are All Right.

Let the bloomered woman rejoice. Founder Bradley, of Asbury Park, says bloomers are modest. He is an authority on modesty in women. He says:

"The costume that I liked best that I saw on a woman bicyclist during the meet was buff—that's what it's called, I think—buff bloomers with leggings. Leggings set a costume off, I think."

Mr. Bradley placards his hundreds of Asbury Park pavilions with this reminder:

Modesty is as becoming to a lady in a bathing suit as it is to a lady dressed in silk or satin. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Mr. Bradley has gained notoriety all over the country because of these placards. He is the first man who had the audacity to attempt and the energy to enforce a censorship of the summer girl's bathing attire.

But Mr. Bradley, who has been called all sorts of names, even reformer, and has been compared to Anthony Comstock, is on the side of the woman bicyclist in bloomers. Mr. Bradley also says that bicycling on Sundays isn't a sin, and that the inventor of a bicycle for the woman was a benefactor of the human race, because he has added to the sum of happiness in married life.

There will be no proclamation issued by him against bloomers in Asbury Park. Of course, if bloomers should dwindle away to the dimension of tights if half a dozen impossible so-called French fashions in giddy bicycle bloomers should invade his brick bicycle path he might change his opinion. Just now he is the friend and champion of all the be-bloomered woman on wheels.

Mr. Bradley has every symptom of becoming a bicycle fiend himself in due time. The league meet has had a disastrous effect on him. He is only enthusiastic now, but there are stages in bicycle enthusiasm. He has reached the first stage.

And here's a secret. Mr. Bradley, in the half admiring, wholly proud tone of the small boy who calls attention to his first pair of trousers, confessed:

"I'm learning to ride the bicycle."

In a further burst of confidence, he added:

"I've taken two lessons."

Every bicyclist who remembers his or her feelings after the second lesson will be able to guess at what stage Mr. Bradley's enthusiasm is now.

At present he is confident he will master the art of riding a bicycle, and when he does acquire it there certainly will be something new to discuss at Asbury Park.

The last of the bicyclists were just leaving Asbury Park when Mr. Bradley was asked what opinion he had formed concerning bicycling for women.

"It's going to increase the happiness of married life and make happier homes," said he. "When men go off with their wives on bicycles for long rides together isn't that a good thing? The man who invented the bicycle and adapted it for the use of women was a true benefactor."

He Knew Enough.

The esteem in which the sailor's calling is held in Massachusetts coast towns is indicated by a true story that comes from Gay Head, a primitive community on the island of Martha's Vineyard.

A teacher was wanted at the village, and a sailor, with Indian blood in his veins, applied to the town committee for the position. He had to pass an examination by the committee, and trembled at the ordeal, being sadly unlearned in book lore.

"Mr. ——, what is the shape of the earth?"

"It is round, sir," the candidate answered.

"How do you know?"

"Because I have sailed around it three times."

"That will do, sir,"

He received his "certificate" as a teacher without another question being asked."—Youth's Companion.

Another Woman.

"Has my wife been in here?" he asked.

"Medium-sized woman in bloomers?" suggested the clerk.

"Yes."

"Very determined air?"

"Yes."

"Well, a woman of that description was in here a little while ago. She seemed to know just what she wanted, and she bought it without bothering the clerks and went right out."

"No; that wasn't Maria."—Judge.

Not the Bloomers of Scripture.

An Allegheny clergyman thinks he has found a Scriptural arraignment of the bloomer costume in the text from Deuteronomy, which reads: "There shall not be the garment of a man upon a woman, and a man shall not wear the garment of a woman, for an abomination to Jehovah thy God is every one doing these things." There is nothing in this contention, for bloomers were never worn by men. They were invented by a woman and are distinctively a feminine vestment.—Atlanta Constitution.

It Depended.

Woodnough—Was that your sister you had with you on the beach last night?

Rejected—What time was it when you saw us?

Woodnough—About 10 o'clock.

Rejected—Oh, she was my sweetheart then.

Distinction Without Difference.

"Sir," she said, stamping her foot, "I must beg you to cease all talk of love. I am becoming angry."

"Pardon me," he corrected with great suavity. "Getting angry. You are not becoming angry."

And after that, somehow, she kept her temper.

ACTIVE WINTER IN ATHLETICS.

Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS PREPARING FOR ALL SORTS OF GAMES.

Baseball Will Resume This Week, Then Football, Basketball and All Other Manly Sports—Good Material for Teams.

The Young Men's Christian Association has been very prominent in many cities in a physical and mental line, as well as moral. And now that the Y. M. C. A. of this city is so well provided for in its new building, this coming year promises to be a red-letter year in more directions than one. Until the time when the Y. M. C. A. fair was held last Thanksgiving week, the Y. M. C. A. took no part in athletics, but this season Physical Director MacPhie expects to place three teams in the field, beside the regular classes in the gymnasium.

The baseball nine played most of the early part of the summer, until the majority of the players left town on their vacations. Next Saturday the baseball season reopens with a game with the nine from Scotch Plains, and play will be continued up to the last of October, if the weather permits. The players of the club have returned now, and the previous good record of the club will be equalled or excelled.

With the beginning of cool weather the football appears and holds sway over the hearts of the athletically inclined until the snow comes. Plainfield has in it the material for a crack football team, and it will be one object of the athletic department to get it together and organize a team, composed of only Y. M. C. A. members, that will be a credit to Plainfield. The league that is to be formed among the surrounding towns will offer a splendid opportunity to secure plenty of exciting games.

When the snow comes and the football enthusiasm dies out, then the game of basket ball, which found such favor among the young men of Plainfield last winter, will come into prominence. Two teams will be selected from the Y. M. C. A. to play against each other. A team will be formed from the best players of the other two and Y. M. C. A. teams from other cities challenged. These games will furnish plenty of excellent sport during the winter months. The bowling alleys will be another source of enjoyment for the members. A team will be selected and games rolled with outside clubs.

Beside the different special branches of athletics, the regular classes in gymnastics will commence on October first and continue through the rest of the winter. Supplementary contests will take place all through the season, but in the spring another general athletic tournament will close the season. On or near Christmas and New Year's Day, special features will be presented. There will be a prize given for the best attendance at classes during the year and another for the best general improvement, besides the prizes in the special events.

INJURED BY FALLING GLASS.

A Young Man Receives a Broken Window Pane in the Face.

Glass is a dangerous thing to run against some times, and Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. building one of the members came very near being seriously injured by falling glass from a broken window.

The young man was in the swimming tank and started to lower the window. In some way it was jarred, and the glass was broken, falling directly into the lad's face. Some of the falling pieces struck the young man's feet, cutting them quite severely.

Telephone Service in Plainfield, $30, $40 and $50.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line: full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address, The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

Kean Men Chosen.

John Kean received word yesterday morning that his delegates were chosen Monday night in Metuchen, Woodbridge and Piscataway. The Voorhees men counted confidently on winning in each of these places.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SPECIAL MEETING OF COUNCIL.

Sewage Bed Resolutions to be Reconsidered Friday Night.

A special meeting of the Common Council will be held on Friday evening, September 13th, at eight o'clock, to reconsider or rescind the resolution adopted September 5th, directing the advertisement for the construction of disposal beds and appurtenances and fixing time for receiving and opening said bids, and also to adopt a new resolution directing the advertisement for bids for construction of disposal beds and appurtenances and fixing time for opening bids, and to take other action in reference to said resolution of September 5th, or in reference to the proposed new resolution, as to the Council shall desire, and to transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

The necessity for calling this special meeting and rescinding the ordinance and repassing it again is on account of the failure of the News to publish the ordinance last Saturday, which was doubtless caused by the sweat-shop methods of paying Chinese wages to the compositors employed thereon.

Cheap labor cannot be expected to do much, and the ex-featured-member-of-a-barn-storming-stranded-theatrical-troupe editor would evidently rather have the Common Council hold a special meeting, and delay local legislation, than be compelled to employ an extra compositor, whom he would have to pay at the decent rates which The Daily Press pays, and publish the ordinance within the limit of the time which the law says he shall do as one of the official papers.

Is there any man in Plainfield to whom a dollar looks bigger than to the man who runs his office on the sweat shop principle.

Rathbone Sisters to Visit Elizabeth.

At the meeting of Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, held last evening an invitation was accepted by the Temple to attend a reception to be given by Rathbone Temple, No. 1, of Elizabeth, on Monday evening, September 16th, in honor of Mrs. M. D. Wood, of Kansas City, Mo., Supreme M. of R. and C., who will pay an official visit to that Temple. Any member wishing to go will please be at the North Avenue station for the seven o'clock train.

O'Flynn in Mexico Tonight.

The Bubb Comedy Company will present in Music Hall this evening. "O'Flynn in Mexico," with Alfred Kelcy in the comedy role. The play is one full of funny situations and has proved a popular hit wherever presented. The descriptive pieces and popular music played by the orchestra are greatly appreciated by the patrons of the Hall this week.

Want Dr. Riggs to Talk.

The Ladies Aid Society of Trinity Reformed church are planning to have Prof. Riggs, of New Brunswick, deliver a lecture in the church at an early date. Prof. Riggs is a thoroughly interesting speaker and those who heard him preach in Trinity Reformed church recently will be glad of the opportunity of hearing him again.

A Farewell Surprise.

Miss Anna Larkin, of New Market who leaves this week for Alfred, N. Y., to attend the University, was given a pleasant surprise Sunday evening at her home by a number of the young people from the Seventh-Day Baptist church. It was a thoroughly enjoyable occasion and all wished Miss Larkin God-speed in her new field of labor.

Court Cases.

Justice Newcorn issued summonses yesterday in the case of Griffin against Tombs, on contract, which is returnable September 16th, and Cannon against Beekman, in tort, which is returnable September 17th.

It Will Do No Good.

It is said that Westfield Republicans are out strong for Foster M. Voorhees for Governor. Assemblyman Codding and ex-Postmaster Whittaker are among those who are hustling in the interests of the Senator.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A LEGAL AUTHORITY DEAD.

ROWLAND M. STOVER PASSES AWAY THIS MORNING.

Was Editor of Several Recognized Legal Works and a Prominent and Active Democrat—Had Been Ill Several Months.

Plainfield lost a valued and highly respected citizen this morning in the death of Rowland M. Stover. For the past four years Mr. Stover had been ill, but at times he seemed better and hopes were entertained that he would recover his full strength and health, but there was a gradual giving away of the vital forces. From December 1, 1894, his illness became serious and since that time he was confined to the house.

Mr. Stover leaves a wife and five sons, Alfred E., Charles Arthur, Frank E., Louis M., and Herbert W.

The funeral will be held from his late residence on East Ninth street at four o'clock Friday afternoon. The interment will be at Greenwood cemetery in Brooklyn on Saturday.

Rowland M. Stover was born in Pittstown, Rensellaer county, N. Y., in 1830. In 1856 he married the eldest daughter of Nathan Howard, Jr., then editor and publisher of Howard's Practice Reports, which began in 1848 on the adoption of the old code of procedure, and has continued its even way as the acknowledged authority of the State of New York on questions of practice. In 1860 to a certain extent he gave up the practice of law and connected himself with Mr. Howard in the editorship and publication of that series of reports. In 1876 Mr. Stover moved from New York to Plainfield, N. J., since which time he has continued to edit "Howard's Practice Reports," which publication in 1884 had reached sixty-seven volumes, when he considered it advisable to commence a new series, which still continues as the recognized authority on questions of practice.

Mr. Stover at this time made a digest of "Howard's Practice Reports," consisting of two volumes of 1,000 pages each. In 1886 Mr. Stover began the publication of the New York State Reporter, which he continued to edit up to and including the twenty-fifth volume. He is the present editor of a work entitled "Stover's Annotated Code of Civil Procedure," which consists of three volumes of 1,000 pages each.

Mr. Stover was a life-long Democrat, and when he took up his residence in Plainfield became actively identified in politics. He was elected to the Common Council of Plainfield in 1878, taking a prominent part in that body's deliberations. He twice received the nomination for Assembly at the hands of his party. Though defeated he so reduced the Republican majority that he was only beaten by less than 100.

In 1879 he was elected to the Board of Chosen Freeholders, the first and only Democratic freeholder ever elected from the city of Plainfield. Mr. Stover was nominated for Surrogate on the Democratic ticket in 1894, being the unanimous choice of the convention, no other name being presented as a candidate. He was a most respected citizen, a warm-hearted and genial friend and kind neighbor, well equipped in mental capacity for the responsible duties which he performed in a private and public way.

WOODEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

A Jolly Party of Friends Surprise Mr. and Mrs. George Winans.

Mr. and Mrs. George Winans, of Somerset street, were given a complete surprise Monday evening upon the occasion of the anniversary of their wooden wedding. Mr. Winans was busily engaged when the door bell rang. He went to the door and found a jolly crowd of friends. They were made welcome and the evening was given up to vocal and instrumental music and general sociability, after which refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Winans were the recipients of many valuable and useful presents.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Breakey, Mr. and Mrs. J. Upson, Miss Lizzie Elwood, Mrs. Mary Wiseman, Miss Lizzie Milligan, Mrs. Frank Boden, of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ammerman, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Mundy, Mr. and Mrs. William Spear, Miss Anna Spear, George Spear, William Titus, Truman Bilyeu, Harry Kleiner, Mr. and Mrs. George Demler, Jr., Harry Acker, of North Plainfield and Washingtonville.

—The Central Railroad has ordered a special car to be attached to the train bringing the remains of Mrs. Walter G. Runyon from Elizabeth to this city this afternoon.

A MURDER AT WESTFIELD.

AN ITALIAN FOUND DEAD IN A LOT THIS NOON.

No One Knows Who Committed the Deed, But Wholesale Arrests Will Be Made This Afternoon—Found By a Boy.

A murder was committed in Westfield this noon, but who either of the parties are it has been impossible to learn up to the time of going to press, other than that the murdered man was an Italian and it is supposed that his assailant was of the same nationality. Shortly after twelve o'clock Edward Frazee, a fourteen-year-old boy, was crossing a vacant lot at the corner of Park street and Central avenue, when his eyes fell upon the prostrate body of a man lying obscured from the road by the high grass and weeds. He hurried out into the road and met Judge Collins driving from the depot, after getting off the train from New York.

The lad told the Judge that a drunken man lay asleep in the lot, and the latter immediately got out of his wagon to investigate. As soon as he stooped over the man's body he saw that his coat was covered with blood, which was still oozing from a wound directly over the heart, doubtless made by a keen-bladed knife. The man was dead, though his body was still warm, so that he could not have been laying there but a few minutes. There is no trace of who the murderer was. It is thought that the assailant is one of the gang of Italians employed by Contractor Marsden on the Westfield sewers.

The place where the man lay is only two hundred feet from the house occupied by Mr. Russell and family, but the occupants say that they saw no men or heard any cries that would indicate that any murder had been committed. The Italian camp is also located near the lot.

The County Prosecutor was notified at Elizabeth, and Judge Collins told a Daily Press reporter at half-past one o'clock that every Italian who was in the shanty during the dinner hour will be put under arrest in order to find out who committed the deed.

A RACE WITH A STORM.

And Walter Williams Won It By a Neck.

Plainfield just missed a heavy shower last evening, but the towns to the southeast of Plainfield got it with all its force. Walter Williams started out soon after five on his way to Perth Amboy to visit friends.

He was all right until he reached Metuchen when he saw the storm coming. Then, of course, his chain snapped, he repaired it with a piece of wire and hurried on with the rain coming close behind. After going at a terrific pace he just reached the house for which he was heading. He expected to return home late in the evening but did not until this morning on account of the muddy roads.

Well Known Educator.

Miss Emily M. Coe, of New York, who is to have charge of the kindergarten normal training class at Rockview school, is one of the best known educators in the country. She was awarded prizes for her work and material at the Centennial in Philadelphia and also at the World's Fair. She is now preparing an exhibit for the Ford Exhibit, to be held in Madison Square Garden during October. Miss Coe's visits to Plainfield this winter will afford rare opportunities to all who desire to study the kindergarten system.

Good Players to Meet.

The Crescents of this city will try their skill at baseball against the strong team from the Raritan Athletic Club at Raritan on Saturday. The Raritan team has the reputation of being a very strong team, having defeated the famous West Ends, of Somerville, and a good game is expected. Moran and Fleming will be the battery for the Plainfield team. T. Lyons will play short stop, and E. Connors, formerly of the Westfield Athletic Club, will cover first.

One Had Money, the Other None.

Louis C. Teller, for being drunk and disorderly, was arrested on Somerset street last night and as a result will spend five days in the lock-up, according to Justice Crosley's decision, as he had no money to pay his fine. Harry Dorris, colored, for the same offence, was fined $5 which he paid.

An East Front Street House.

J. K. Large, Chief Detective of the Central Railroad, has purchased property adjoining that of E. P. Thorn, and belonging to N. W. Pike, and will erect a handsome house thereon. Ground for the cellar was broken yesterday.

THE BEST NEWS SERVICE.

The Daily Press Gave the Best Account of the Yacht Race in This City.

The international yacht races for America's cup have been of paramount interest to the American people during the last few days, and every item of news regarding them was eagerly read by Plainfielders as well as the rest. The Daily Press was the only paper in this city, however, that thought enough of the citizens of Plainfield to issue bulletins of the race yesterday. Soon after one o'clock, when the first bulletins were received, up to six o'clock, the sidewalk in front of the Daily Press office was thronged with interested spectators who eagerly watched the bulletins as they were continuously posted to learn the latest details of the race.

The Daily Press was also the first to publish the account of the victory of the Valkyrie. A detailed account of the race, a column and a quarter in length, appeared in yesterday's paper and the readers of the Daily Press were enabled to learn all the circumstances of the accident and the position of the yachts throughout the the race, not very long after the race itself had been finished. The Daily Press has to thank both the Western Union and the Postal Telegraph companies for their superb service in transmitting the news of the race so rapidly, for through their aid the Daily Press was enabled to display the bulletins as promptly as it did, and to be the first paper in Plainfield to publish the result of the race.

ONE WAS ENOUGH.

A Terrific Crash and Flash Startled Plainfield Last Night.

The terriffic crash of thunder that startled Plainfield households at about quarter of seven o'clock last evening, came from a clear sky. A severe storm passed just to the south of Plainfield, and the one bolt was all that came anywhere near. That one, however, made up for several lesser ones. Luckily there was no damage done, the lightning running down a tree in front of the house of Peter Neuman, on East Sixth street, and digging a hole about a foot deep in the edge of the road close by the tree.

Mrs. S. W. Giles, who resides opposite, was just passing by and was within twenty-five feet of the tree when the crash came.

WILL IT BE DECLARED OFF.

Regatta Committee of Yacht Club Considering the Protest.

The Regatta Committee of the New York Yacht Club, having under consideration the Defender's protest of yesterday's America's Cup race, met this morning at the clubhouse to decide the matter. The committee consists of H. Nicholson Kane, Irving Grinnell and Chester Griswold.

Mr. Flack's Side.

James Flack, the story of whose discrepancies was told in The Daily Press on Monday, called at The Press office this afternoon and stated the exact condition of affairs. Mr. Flack states that he furnished ample security for whatever was missing from his accounts with the East Third Street Mission, and that the arrangements were satisfactory to the officials. The time that he made the unfortunate mistake was about a month ago when he suffered an accident.

Wagon Pole Struck His Head.

When working in the shed adjoining Hedden's stable yesterday afternoon, Theodore VanNess accidentally struck the stick which supported a heavy wagon pole, letting it fall on the side of his head. A severe bruise and cut was the result.

No Business Transacted.

The Colored Republican Association met last evening but, as many of the members were absent, the meeting was immediately adjourned. A number of the members will attend the meeting of the county association this evening at Elizabeth.

The entries for the bowling tournament of the Crescent Wheelmen close tonight.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C. A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

McGILL SAID TO BE WILLING.

THE CHANCELLOR WOULD PROBABLY ACCEPT A NOMINATION.

He Realizes the Importance of His Declaration, and He Will Therefore Give a Decisive Answer in a Few Days.

Chancellor McGill, who returned from Europe Monday, appeared at his chambers in Trenton yesterday, and was plied with all manner of questions by local politicians as to the use of his name in connection with the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination.

He told an interviewer that the situation was one of much embarrassment to him. His position as Chancellor, he said, was to his taste; for political life he had no disposition or inclination. To answer off hand or lightly without due consideration whether he would be willing to change from a judicial to a political life and thus change its whole course, might commit him to a stand which later on he should wish to alter.

The Chancellor said he realized the importance of an early declaration of his intention, and he would therefore make a public announcement of it in the course of a very few days. He intimated in the mildest sort of way, and it was more in his manner than in his words, that if the better elements of the Democratic party demanded that he should stand for the party he would do so.

TOWNSHIP BOARD OF HEALTH.

Physicians Appointed to Seek Out Unhealthy Places.

The North Plainfield Township Committee met last evening at Washingtonville for the purpose of organizing a Board of Health.

Elias Allen was made chairman and Frank Mobus secretary and treasurer. Drs. Cooley and Carman were appointed a committee on ordinances, and Constable Stewart was appointed inspector. His duty shall be to hunt up the various nuisances and report them to the board.

After auditing the bill of $4.75, which pays for the handcuffs that were ordered at the last meeting, the committee adjourned.

Nearly Outraged.

Last Saturday John H. Moore, of Summit, met Mabel Gironf, nine years old, a daughter of Andrew Gironf, of Summit, and tried to entice her with candy to go with him. She refused, when he forcibly took her in an outhouse and had nearly succeeded in outraging her when she was rescued. Moore was arrested and committed by Judge Kelly to the county jail in Elizabeth.

May Become Chairman.

R. F. Lindabury, of Elizabeth, who was prominent in the fight against the racetracks, was in Newark yesterday, and said in reply to a question that he might be induced to accept the chairmanship of the Democratic State Committee if a good candidate should be nominated. If Chancellor McGill were nominated he would accept the chairmanship.

A Day at The Rock.

With the approach of cool weather the picnic has to be given up, but a party of young people from this city and the borough started this morning for their last picnic of the season at Washington Rock. Among those who started for the Rock were the Misses May Woodruff, Ada Woodruff, Florence Smith, and Amy Burt, and Charles H. Angleman, Raymond A. McGee and E. Maxwell Honeyman.

Plainfield Has Heard Him.

John G. Woolley, the great temperance orator, who spoke so interestingly in Music Hall, last winter, will address the first mass meeeting of the Christian Citizenship Union, tomorrow evening in the Second Presbyterian church, Elizabeth.

A number of Christian Endeavorers from this city will attend.

Will Stay in Plainfield Awhile.

H. C. Corsa, formerly of Col. Waring's staff, is now in Plainfield and will remain here with his family till the courts in New York settle the difference between himself and the Colonel.

Proposed Camera Club.

The Camera Club met last evening for the first time since the summer intermission. Routine business was transacted and then the question of having an exhibition this fall. No definite action was taken.

Lawyer Blatz Wins a Case.

Charles Anderson was caught by Marshal Wilson yesterday riding his wheel on the sidewalk. Frank Blatz appeared for Anderson and Justice Crosley suspended sentence.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT

Louisville's Great Throng of Visiting Veterans.

Over Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Strangers in the City—Many Unable To Secure Transportation. All Entertained Royally by the Blue Grass Residents.

Louisville, Sept. 11.—Louisville seemed to be full to overflowing this morning, but the cry is "Still they come," and her hospitable citizens have appreciated to the full extent the contract that they undertook in inviting the boys in blue to cross the imaginary line and bivouac once again on southern soil. Rough estimates last night from railroad and steamboat officers showed that fully 100,000 strangers had been brought in since noon Sunday, but these figures were dwarfed a little later when computations of the veterans and excursionists en route from distant points, or who had bought tickets for early morning trains from points all over Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky had reached a total in the neighborhood of something more than 250,000.

Enjoying Kentucky Hospitality.

The full legion of the visitors enjoyed Kentucky hospitality yesterday and royally it flowed upon them. The business men generally left their establishments for the day and gave themselves and their time-fraternizing with the department delegations and posts, while society women by the hundreds deserted their homes and worked unmercifully to make things pleasant for their sisters from abroad. For the ride to which the visiting women were treated in the afternoon 200 swell turn outs of all description were loaned and the list of guides and chaperones represented many pages of the blue book. The inpour of strangers last night was incessant, and the streets for miles were uncomfortably crowded with pedestrians, vehicles and marching delegations.

Railroad Facilites Insufficient.

There are reports this morning that several trains from distant points are in a blockade with slight chances of reaching here in time for the demonstrations this afternoon, while passengers on trains arriving from Tennessee, Indiana, Ohio and this state say that at every station people were left behind through inability to get even standing room in the cars.

Diamond Badge for the Commander

Outside of the naval veterans parade the chief public events yesterday were the presentation to Commander-in-Chief Lawler, by his staff and aides representing every state and territory, of a magnificent diamond badge, and the reception tendered the same official and his staff at the Galt house by the national officers of the Woman's Relief corps. The latter was a brilliant function participated in by two thousand representative citizens and visitors. Secretary of State Palmer of New York, Gov. Upham of Wisconsin, Gen. Fairchild and Gen. Wallace were also the recipients of the women's welcome.

Denver in the Lead.

Denver is in the lead for the next encampment, but the women are working hard for St. Paul. The heat to-day is intense and many old soldiers have been prostrated. Twelve were taken to the city hospital. None of the cases are considered serious.

Encampment for Convicts.

Across the river in Jeffersonville a celebration, unique in encampment annals, was in progress yesterday. Within the walls of the Indiana penitentiary are forty-four convicts who once wore the blue. In order that they might not be debarred from some of the pleasures of the reunion, Warden Hart has organized a little encampment of his own and the imprisoned veterans have been given a two days' holiday with leave to mingle and exchange reminiscences. A camp fire and a visit of sympathy from a delegation of the Woman's Relief corps, together with a change in the prison menu by a spread of all the delicacies of the season, will also tend to mitigate the feelings of mortification with which the convicts read of the great goings on a few miles away of men who were once their comrades.

POWDER MILL BLOWN UP.

One Man Burned to Death and Another Badly Injured.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 11.—John Morris, aged 25, was burned to death and William Laidlaw, another employe, badly injured yesterday afternoon by the explosion of powder in the Robin Hood Smokeless Powder company's mill near this city. The mill was destroyed.

National League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 2; Chicago, 13. At Boston—Boston, 4; St. Louis, 0. At Philadelphia—Philadelphia, 11; Louisville, 5. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 5; Cleveland, 2. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 2; Cincinnati, 1. At New York—Second game, New York, 8, Chicago, 8.

Damage Claim Dismissed.

Albany, Sept. 11.—The state board of claims has dismissed the claim of Morimer Murphy of Poughkeepsie against the state for $25,000 damages for injuries received while employed in the construction of the Hudson River State hospital.

Wongo Knocked Out.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Jack Hanley of Philadelphia and Wongo, the Indian, of Norfolk, fought last night at the Eureka club, opposite this city. Wongo threw up the sponge at the end of the twenty-third round.

Mr. Aldridge Much Improved.

Albany, Sept. 11.—The physicans who are attending Supt. Aldridge of the department of public works said this morning that he was much improved and was now considered out of danger.

Dr. Parkhurst's Return.

Liverpool, Sept. 11.—The White Star line steamer Germanic, which sailed for New York to-day, had among her passengers the Rev. Drs. C. A. Briggs and C. H. Parkhurst.

Davis Murder Trial.

Albany, Sept. 11.—A jury was secured in the Davis murder trial yesterday and the taking of testimony commenced this morning.

SEIZURES IN BEHRING SEA.

Enforcement of the Regulation Against the Use of Firearms.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 11.—The Victoria sealer Beatrice arrived here yesterday under seizure for alleged violations of the Behring sea regulations. She reports the seizure of the schooner Ainoko. The Beatrice was boarded by the United States revenue cutter Rush Aug. 20. A few sealskins marked as if by buckshot were found on board. Although no guns were found, the vessel was seized on the charge of having used firearms in the sea, towed to Unalaska and turned over to the British ship Phesant, by whom she was ordered to report to the naval authorities here. The Ainoko was seized on the charge of going in the sixty-mile protective zone after seals. Ainoko left Unalaska before the Beatrice, but is not yet here. Both cases will be tried in the admiralty court. Their value with fittings is about $9,000 each. The Beatrice reports a light catch of seals. She had only 700.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weekly Weather Bureau Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The weather crop bulletin for the past week gives the condition in eastern states as follows: New England: crops ripening and being harvested very fast: rain badly needed for pastures. New York: very favorable for fall work and maturing corn and buckwheat; corn cutting begun; beans being harvested; severe drought in southeast continues. New Jersey: corn beyond help, being cut for fodder; grapes and cranberries very promising; central and northern portions suffering for rain; plowing and seeding greatly delayed. Pennsylvania: rains beneficial to late lowland crops; prematurely ripened corn; tobacco and buckwheat being cut; pasturage short and some stock being fed. Maryland: rains of 6th improved pastures, late corn, tobacco and truck; tobacco being housed and corn cutting commenced.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRATS.

Opening of the State Convention at Williamsport This Morning.

Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 11.—This city is crowded this morning with politicians from all sections of Pennsylvania, and the convention which assembled in the opera house at 10:30 o'clock is largely attended. All of the 454 delegates are on hand. As a result of the conference between the leaders ex-congressman B. F. Meyers of Harrisburg will be nominated for state treasurer. No judicial slate was decided upon. A platform was prepared this morning. It is said that it will endorse Cleveland's administration, proclaim for sound money, censure Gov. Hastings' appointment of superior court judges to serve factional ends, condemn the last legislature for its partisan work, and call attention to the tidal wave of prosperity under the democratic administration.

H. H. HOLMES' VICTIMS.

Identification by Mrs. Pietzel of Her Son's Overcoat.

Indianapolis, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Carrie A. Pietzel, the wife and mother of H. H. Holmes' victims, was before Coroner Castor and the county grand jury yesterday with her daughter Bessie. She told the story of Holmes' movements, particularly in leading her over the country while he was making way with her childern. She identified her son Howard's overcoat, and was prostrated by grief. Mrs. Pietzel first described the garment accurately. It was then shown to her. She burst into tears, and said: "It is poor Howard's coat." She was so distracted that the investigation was suspended.

SEVERE STORM AT ALTOONA.

One Woman Meets With Death in a Peculiar Way.

Altoona, Pa., Sept. 11.—This city was visited by a very severe thunder storm yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Benjamin Yerger was killed in a peculiar manner. The gas fixtures had been removed and the pipes plugged. A bolt of lightning striking the side of the house had the effect of blowing out one of these plugs or caps with such force that when it struck Mrs. Yerger on the temple she was instantly killed.

A School Teacher Fatally Injured.

Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 11.—The worst hail and electric storm for years visited Johnstown and vicinity yesterday afternoon. Great damage was done to hillside farms, where the heavy rains washed out potato crops. Lightning probably fatally injured Miss Maggie Barry, a school teacher. The memorial hospital was slightly damaged by lightning.

Ten Eyck Defeats Casey.

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—The professional single scull race for the championship of New England between James Ten Eyck of Worcester and Jerry Casey of South Boston was rowed off Long Island, Casco Bay, yesterday afternoon. For the first mile Casey maintained a slight lead, after which Ten Eyck recovered his lost ground and was never headed.

Shot from Ambush.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 11.—The dead body of Lum Ward was found yesterday near Union City with several wounds from bullets. He was shot, it is said, from ambush. He was on his way to appear before the grand jury in cases against two men named Palmer with whom he had had a difficulty.

Accidentally Poisoned Her Infant.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 11.—Harry Curtin, the infant son of H. C. Curtin, a prominent confectioner of this city, died yesterday from an overdose of laudanum given by his mother for a stomach ache remedy. Mrs. Curtin, it is feared, will lose her reason.

Irving's Company Arrive.

Quarantine, S. I., Sept. 11.—Bram Stoker, manager, and sixty-six members of Henry Irving's company were on the steamer Southark from Southampton, which arrived here late last night.

Senator Raines Renominated.

Lyons, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The forty-second district republican senatorial convention renominated John Raines by acclamation to succeed himself in the state senate.

Battle of Lake Erie Anniversary.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 11.—The anniversary of the battle of Lake Erie received but little observance here. The flags about the city were all displayed.

SYNDICATE IS SILENT

Treasury Gold Below the Reserve Limit.

At the Close of Business Last Night It Stood at $97,544,666—Nothing Official from Belmont-Morgan as to Their Intentions—Treasury Officials Are Not Disturbed.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Nothing official as far as can be ascertained has been received at the treasury department from representatives of the Belmont-Morgan syndicate indicating whether or not they intended to make good the treasury's depleted gold reserve. At the close of business yesterday the reserve stood, all withdrawals deducted, at $97,544,666, or nearly $2,500,000 below what is usually regarded as the reserve limit. In ordinary operations the treasury lost $16,000 in gold yesterday, owing to payments in San Francisco. A small withdrawal of gold at New York for export, $150,000, was reported in the afternoon. Treasury officials express no uneasiness over the declining gold reserve, as they feel assured that the syndicate and the New York national banks will not permit it to fall below the limit of confidence. What that point is shifts daily with the changing conditions.

ROBBED BY A POLICEMAN.

A Crime Which Led to the Suicide of a Brooklyn Man.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—About a month ago George C. Smyth, a barkeeper of Brooklyn, N. Y., came to this city, and after drinking heavily, fell in with a policeman, who agreed to take one drink with him and then see him to a hotel. A few hours later Smith was found by two other policemen in an alley, having been robbed of his valuables, among them a diamond shirt-stud valued at $500. Efforts to find the missing jewel were unavailing, and a week later Smyth committed suicide Last night Charles B. Cullen, a policeman of previous good standing on the force, was arrested and subsequently confessed that he robbed Smyth of his jewels, leaving him in an unconscious and drunken condition in the alley. Cullen is only 24 years old.

FOR BLIGHTED LOVE.

Miss Pearson Sues Dr. Edwards at Providence for $10,000.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 11.—A most sensational breech of promise case has been instituted here by Miss Minnie A. Pearson of Moosup, Conn. The defendant is Dr. Frederick E. Edwards of this city, who in June last was wedded to Miss Clara A. Spink. The plaintiff is only 21. She claims that Dr. Edwards called upon her persistently at her home in Moosup and that he promised to wed her the present year. Dr. Edwards claims he attended the girl professionally, but that he never had any idea of marrying her. Miss Pearson wants $10,000. Bail was furnished the doctor by Mrs. Caroline A. Danforth, aunt of his wife.

FOREST FIRES IN MICHIGAN.

Farmers Said To Be Leaving Their Homes for Safety.

Harbor Springs, Mich., Sept. 11.—The Beaver island forest fire is still raging and making considerable headway. People on this morning's boat say that farmers are leaving their fields and flocking to St. James and the coast. Between the fire and St. James is a big swamp which it is hoped will check the flames. Much valuable timber has been destroyed. Clouds of smoke hang over the lake and cinders fall on the mainland. The blaze could be seen last night at Cross village, thirty miles away.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

A Man and Two Horses Killed at Attica, N. Y.

Corning, N. Y., Sept. 11.—While Frank Gardner, aged 25 years, of Attica was at work with his team of horses in a bean field a storm came up and a bolt of lightning struck the spot where Gardner was working, instantly killing him and both the horses. The man was struck squarely on the head, as the crown of his hat was torn away from the rim.

Indiana for Harrison.

Laport, Ind., Sept. 11.—Peter E. Studebaker of South Bend has returned from a conference of eastern politicians in New York. Mr. Studebaker, who is named as the probable republican candidate for governor, said that the state of Indiana will send a Harrison delegation to the national convention.

Democrats on an Outing.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 11.—The democrats of the state had an outing and clambake yesterday at Rhodes-on-the-Pawtuxet. All the prominent party leaders were present and there were a number of speeches upon matters of party interest.

Expelled from Boston 'Change.

Boston, Sept. 11.—At a meeting of the directors of the Boston chamber of commerce, Frederick N. Chaney, the ex-treasurer in whose accounts a shortage was discovered recently, was expelled from membership in the association.

B. & O. Buys the Valley Railroad.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company has bought the Valley railroad property at the United States court sale for $3,070,000. This gives the Baltimore & Ohio a through line from the lakes to the seaboard.

Forbidden the Use of the Mails.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The postoffice department has issued an order forbidding to Weart & Co. of 1,305 Arch street, Philadelphia, the use of the United States mails on account of alleged violation of the postal regulation.

Mrs. Beard Committed to an Asylum

Old Orchard, Me., Sept. 11.—Frances E. Beard of Andover, Mass., who was recently bound over to the supreme court for attempting to kill her daughter, has been committed to the insane hospital at Augusta.

Acting Attorney General.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Solicitor General Conrad has returned from his vacation and, in the absence of Mr. Harmon, is acting attorney general.

MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Unequalled in the History of Medicine. Honesty, Excellence, Faithfulness Fitly Rewarded.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkhams wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful

Ailments of Women

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham's remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms, — Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

DEATH TO CHRISTIANS

Outrages in Armenia Are Again Resumed.

Five Villages Sacked, the Men Tortured and the Women and Children Outraged—An Anti-Christian Society Formed with the Avowed Intention of Slaughter.

London, Sept. 11.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Kars, Armenia, says that the entire district of Kumaks is surrounded by Turkish troops, dispatched by Zekki Pasha under the plea of arresting Armenian revolutionists. The villages of Carni, Tiruguener, Tortan, Horopoul and Marig are reported to have been completely sacked, and the population, aggregating 5,000 people, were foully treated. The men were tortured and the women and children outraged. The four monasteries of Abukasur, Sourpace, Thervorith, Choga and Souphagop were sacked and the altars and images were destroyed. The excitement and alarm are universal. Authentic information from Moush is to the effect that an anti-Christian society of Turkish officials has been formed there and at Bitlis, with the avowed intention to slaughter the Christians in the event of the acceptance by the porte of the scheme of reforms presented by the powers. It is declared that Consul Pampson is to be the first victim.

MRS. FLEMING MAY GO FREE.

New York Officials Have No Positive Evidence Against Her.

New York, Sept. 11.—It looks very much as if the prosecuting officials believe they have not enough evidence in their possession to convict Mrs. Fleming of the murder of her mother. The coroner's jury yesterday afternoon returned a verdict that Mrs. Bliss came to her death through acute gastritis, the cause of which was unknown to it. Mrs. Fleming's name was not mentioned. Her lawyer then demanded that she be discharged, but the district attorney insisted that she be committed. He hurried to the grand jury room and had her case taken up at once, but the grand jury failed to indict the woman. Judge Fitzgerald was then appealed to. He issued an order of arrest and set the hearing down for to-day. Mrs. Fleming was returned to the Tombs.

WANTS AN APOLOGY OR BLOOD.

Editor Moffets Challenged To Fight a Duel by Special Writer Chartier.

Cincinnati, Sept. 11.—J. C. Moffets, news editor of the Cincinnati Tribune, was challenged yesterday to fight a duel by Dr. Chartier, a French newspaper man, who once before created a sensation in St. Louis by his aggressive methods and who has been connected with the Tribune recently as a special writer. A simple question of judgment as to publishing an item which Mr. Moffets rejected, was the occasion of the trouble. Dr. Chartier is vehement in his claims that the affair is one of honor and one of two things only will heal his wounded feelings. He must have an apology or he must have blood.

NEW PAPER INCORPORATED.

The Herald-Democrat Will Succeed the Central New Jersey Herald.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 11.—Articles of incorporation of the Herald-Democrat, a daily and weekly newspaper, were filed here yesterday with the clerk of Union county. The incorporators are Thomas D. Taylor, E. W. Taylor, William F. Taylor and Thomas P. Colhouer. The capital stock of the plant is placed at $10,000 and business is begun with $1,000. The paper will succeed the Central New Jersey Herald and takes its place as the local Democratic organ.

LONG ROW IN A TUB.

Frates Paddled from Portland to Long Island in Seven Hours.

Portland, Me., Sept. 11.—Gus Frates, the champion tub sculler, on a wager, paddled in a small tub from Portland to Long Island in 7 hours, 5 seconds, winning the wager. He was unaccompanied by boat. The water was very choppy and the wind was high. Frates was exhausted and had to be carried from his tub when he arrived at Long Island.

Prize Fighters Arrested.

Lynn, Mass., Sept. 11.—Mike Sears and Dick O'Brien, both pugilists, were arrested on the arrival of the Nahant boat at Lynn last evening by Nahant officers. The fighters assaulted a man said to be Jimmie Kelly, their trainer, at Nahant yesterday and injured him severely.

Next Year's Styles in Coffins.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—The burial case manufacturers of the country met in annual conference yesterday at the Auditorium hotel. There was an informal discussion as to the styles for next year, the prevailing opinion being that cloth covered caskets will give way to polished wood.

Built the First Locomotive Tender.

Canajoharie, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Henry J. Robinson, a prominent citizen of Buel, aged 95 years, died yesterday. He constructed the tender for the first locomotive used on the Albany & Schenectady railroad, nearly sixty-five years ago.

ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

Great Preparations in Progress for Opening Day Celebration.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 11.—Great preparations are in progress to make the opening day at the Cotton States and International exposition—September 18—a tremendous success. Atlanta is already filled with strangers. The governors of half a dozen states will be present, there will be an imposing military parade, and addresses will be made by distinguished gentlemen, the opening oration to be delivered by Judge Emery Speer of Georgia. The business houses of the city will close from 12 until 4 o'clock, and the whole city will go en masse to Piedmont park. At night the principal attractions will be the electric fountain and Pain's pyrotechnic display on the lake of the storming of the Chinese fortress at Wei-Hai-Wei by the Japanese. Saturday, the 21st, will be Blue and Gray day. Thousands of the veterans from both armies will attend. Everything will be done to make the opening a brilliant success.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

A Train of Soldiers Attacked—Dynamite Exploded Under a Car.

Havana, Sept. 11.—According to official reports reciyed here a railway train loaded with Spanish soldiers was attacked by a band of insurgents near Guantanamo. The rebels fired upon the train and exploded a dynamite cartridge under one of the carriages, which killed two soldiers and wounded several others. Gen. Martinez de Campos has arrived at Sagua. Of the troops that arrived here Monday from Spain the Engineers' regiment was sent to Guines and a battalion of the Laria regiment to the province of Santa Clara under the command of Generals Arderius and Suera, respectively. Great crowds assembled to see the departure of the soldiers, who were enthusiastically cheered as they marched through the city.

SHOT BY A GUARD.

Private Coffee Killed While Attempting To Desert.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—Privates Williams and Coffee, two deserters restrained at Fort Sheridan twenty miles north of here, attempted to escape yesterday while working in the rear of the hospital. Private Christ, who was on guard duty, detected them and ordered them to halt. They refused and the soldier fired a number of shots at them in quick succession, killing Coffee and wounding Williams. Williams succeeded in escaping although pursued by a number of soldiers. Coffee's body was taken to the fort. The top of his head had been blown completely off and his death was instantaneous. He was regarded as a tough character.

TO PROHIBIT CIGARETTES.

Petition Against the American Tobacco Company Adjourned.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The petition of C. A. Whelan & Co. for an action in the name of the people to prohibit the American Tobacco company from selling cigarettes in this state was slated for a hearing before Attorney-General Hancock yesterday afteernoon. Attorney Ralph Oakley, of the firm of Oudin & Oakley, attorneys for the trust, asked for a postponement on the grounds that there had been inadequate time allowed to get ready for the argument. In spite of the vigorous protests of Attorney Wilson for Whalen & Co. the hearing was adjourned to Sept. 23.

FIERCE STORM AT SCITUATE.

The Historic Lafayette Tree Split by Lightning.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 11.—The town of Scituate Monday evening was visited by one of the most terrific thunder storms experienced in many years, and $5,000 worth of property was destroyed in the neighborhood of the former home of ex-congressmann Charles H. Page. The famous Gen. Lafayette tree was split in twain. The tree is the only historical one in Rhode Island and is the one the general ate his dinner under while the continental troops were marching from Rhode Island to Connecticut.

OFFICER RYAN EXONERATED.

Mrs. Grannis' Charges Not Sustained by the Board.

Albany, Sept. 11.—Mrs. Elizabeth B. Grannis, the well-known reform agitator of New York city, appeared before the police board of this city yesterday to prosecute charges against Patrolman Ryan, which she preferred a month ago, alleging gross neglect of duty. The board dismissed the charges and exonerated Ryan from all blame.

Conscience Contribution.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The secretary of the treasury yesterday received in an envelope, postmarked New York, from an unknown person, the sum of $1 which has been deposited in the treasury on account of conscience.

MR. ISELIN'S PROTEST

Regatta Committee Will Decide It To-day.

Believed That Valkyrie's Victory Will Be Thrown Out on Account of the Fouling of Defender—The American Boat's Gallant Work After Becoming Crippled.

New York, Sept. 11.—The regatta committee of the New York Yacht club, who have Mr. Iselin's protest and Lord Dunraven's version of the fouling of the Defender by the Valkyrie yesterday just as the starting gun sounded, will make their decision known some time to-day. It is generally believed that it will be in favor of Defender. While no one suspects the owner of the visiting yacht of such unsportsmanlike conduct as intentionally fouling the Yankee yacht, yet the way he raked his great steel boom over the deck and tore down the other fellow's rigging, and then sailed away at his best pace over the course, was not pleasant to patriotic Americans to contemplate. From the first every attempt to secure fair play for the visitor has been made, and methods that are tried in England when American boats compete are not tried here.

Cause of the Accident.

The boats in jockeying for the line had shown some of the prettiest work that has been seen here, and the jockeying resulted in the Valkyrie obtaining the windward position. As the two boats headed for the line there were murmers of disappointment in the crowd when it was discovered that the Valkyrie had the windward position. Both finally approached the starting line with Valkyrie leading and to the windward of the Defender. Had both held their courses there would have been no trouble, but the anxiety of the British skipper to get his boat over the line first and to the windward of the enemy made it a question if he would not cross before the starting gun sounded. To prevent such a predicament the Valkyrie bore away a trifle and eased out her sheets. The main boom of the Britisher swept over the deck of the Defender, carrying away the topmast shrouds on the starboard side and tearing out the jaws of the spreader. The topmast cracked and was badly sprung.

Protest Flag Displayed.

Just as the crash came the starting signal was given and Valkyrie sped away like a rocket. Defender was luffed in the wind, the jibtopsail lowered, the wreckage removed, and Mr. Iselin decided to continue the race. Probably a couple of minutes were wasted making repairs before the boat continued on her course. A protest flag was displayed, and the committee boat showed an answering pennant. Then the gallant Defender and her plucky crew went in pursuit of the British cutter.

A Fine Race Was Promised.

But for the accident the race would probably have been one of the finest in the history of America's Cup contests. Nothing was lacking to make it a memorable affair. The crowds of spectators and the fleet of excursion craft and private yachts were present to lend animation to the scene. There was a good sailing breeze, the sky was clear after the mist of the morning had been dispelled and the ocean was comparatively smooth.

Good Work of the Crippled Boat.

It was a good day for Valkyie, but it would have been a better one for Defender had she not met with an accident. The weakened topmast of the American boat prevented her from carrying the sail that Valkyrie carried, and she could not keep the pace set by Dunraven's boat. In the beat of ten miles to windward to the first turn Valkyrie gained an advantage of two minutes and fifty-two seconds. At one time she led by fully a mile, but as the wind freshened from six knots at the start to fifteen at the first turn and eighteen shortly afterwards, the Defender, crippled though she was, began to gain. The second leg of the reach was a broad reach and Valkyrie used a balloon jib topsail, while the people on the Defender had to be content with a baby jib topsail.

Defeated Only by 47 Seconds.

In spite of her handicap the Defender gained seventeen seconds on the second leg. On the run home the Defender continued her good work, gaining one minute and seventeen seconds. The time allowance of Valkyrie to Defender is twenty-nine seconds, and allowing for this, the difference between her time over the course and the Defender's time was forty-seven seconds only.

Threaten To Go Home.

In an interview Captain Cranfield of the Valkyrie defended the course he had taken and said he could not see how the Defender's protest can fairly be sustained. The reporter inquired: "Shall you object to run the race over again if the committee decides against you?" "Well, I don't know," replied Captain Cranfield; and he added with just the shadow of a smile: "I rather think that if the protest is upheld we shall make our way home again and call it one win each."

OPINION IN LONDON.

Some Remarks of British Papers on the Race.

London, Sept. 11.—The Daily Graphic commenting upon the result of yesterday's race for the America's Cup says that however slight the damage sustained by the American boat in being fouled just before the start gun was fired, it was probably sufficient to effect the result of the contest. The Daily News says that it is evident that the Defender and Valkyrie III. are beautifully matched and that this fact promises to make the races between them interesting to the very end. The Times says that Lord Dunraven and his countrymen will feel that a success which can plausibly be disputed is not the sort of victory that Englishmen love to win. The cup committee's decision will be accepted loyally by the competitors and their countrymen.

Will Close the Mine.

Ishpeming, Mich., Sept. 11.—Section 21 mine of the Lake Superior Iron company will be permitted to fill with water and all mining suspended until next year if the men do not return to work by 5 o'clock this afternoon. This mine has employed 275 men.

A Philadelphia Ledger correspondent figures that Kean will get the whole Republican delegation from Union county.

The weather bureau records August as the driest month in the history of the office. There were other things in New York besides the weather that were dry.

Advance sheets of the report of the State Labor Bureau on Co-operative Building and Loan Associations show that it is a very interesting document. Twenty-one new associations were incorporated in the State since the last report. The 294 local associations reported 572,459 shares in force, valued at $36,347,439, an increase over the previous years of 3,618 shares, and $3,021,418 of net assets. Of the shares reported 193,479 are borrowed on by 24,670 shareholders. There were forty-five associations which had in all ninety-eight securities in default, with a reported value of $155,944. There were 2,343 dwellings acquired during the year with money furnished by the associations so far as reported, but the returns under the heading are very incomplete.

Must Have Wagons.

The Postal Department has placed notices in the postoffice and in the waiting room of the railroad station, calling for sealed proposals for carrying mail between the railroad station and the postoffice. The bids call for horse and wagon service, and will be received till September 22.

HIGH SCHOOL CHANGES.

How the Classes Are to Be Arranged and Seated.

The arrangement of the classes in the High School will be entirely different this year from what it was last. The changes to Assembly Hall have made it into a room for study, and not only for assembling for morning exercises as in previous years. The senior, junior and third classes will this year all occupy the third floor. The pupils will be seated in the large room and use the small rooms occupied last year by the fourth class, as recitation rooms. On the second floor the labaratory will remain the same as ever. The rooms formerly occupied by the junior and third classes are now to be taken possession of, and the old senior room will be retained to make room for the growth of either the high or grammar classes.

Morning exercises will take place the same as usual, except that the high school will not march in and out of the room. The assembly hall will now be filled with single desks instead of benches and each class will sit in a body.

Passing Comment.

"The finest peaches I have seen this year" was the general exclamation of those who saw the display at J. A. Smith & Brother's yesterday and today. Another big lot is expected tomorrow. They also have plums and Bartlett pears. Come early and take your choice. It is expected that peaches will be cheaper tomorrow.

A Human Monstrosity.

A Rahway woman Saturday gave birth to a child with a head shaped like that of a frog. The infant, which otherwise was fairly developed, was born dead, and Dr. Daley, who attended the case, has the body preserved in alcohol at his office as a medical curiosity.

A Habeas Corpus Proceedings.

Lawyer Hetfield secured a writ of habeas corpus which he served on Justice Crosley last night releasing William Wardell, who was locked up upon his failure to pay his fine. The case will come up in the Supreme Court.

While S. C. Crane was riding on the Crescent Oval Monday evening with some friends, it was so dark that he did not see the bank and rode off the edge of it, smashing the wooden rim of his wheel. Although Crane turned several somersaults on the way down he was not injured in the slightest.

Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

PROTECT BABY

Dangers Peculiar to Early Fall Weather.

Extreme Liability to Bad Intestinal Trouble.

Lactated Food Should Be Used in September.

Child's Digestion Left Weak by Hot Summer.

Peril of Sudden Change in Fall to Ordinary Diet.

Mothers should remember that the baby had a hard fight through all these hot days and nights of summer.

Even if your baby has so far resisted the prevalent fatal disorders, cholera infantum and diarrhoea, its strength and power of digestion has certainly been much weakened. It will take but little to overturn its stomach and precipitate an attack of the dreaded cholera infantum.

This is the history of so many fatalities among infants in September.

Prudent mothers will take the advice of physicians and continue to make lactated food baby's regular diet. The early fall weather is as perilous as the worst month of summer. There are extreme changes in temperature; the return home from the seashore or country brings new conditions in baby's surroundings that it is not easily accustomed to. Physicians know that the food of children must be most carefully watched while baby is getting used to fall weather. There is security from diarrhœa and from faulty nutrition in lactated food. Babies and young children always develop a strong appetite when fed on this best of all infant foods. Lactated food encourages under-fed babies to take a proper amount of nourishment. The difficulty and the prime importance of arousing such a healthy desire for food has not for an instant been left out of sight in the preparation of lactated food.

Lactated food solves the problem of keeping very young children well nourished at all seasons.

Babies often become so weakened by faulty nutrition that they grow listless, hardly hold up their heads and take little notice of things about them. Time and time again has lactated food been given to these little pining infants to the immense gratification of parents. It takes but a short time for the splendid food to brighten the dull eyes and to make a romping, noisy, plump baby, that was but a little while before a thin, pitiable, white-faced child and a source of extreme anxiety to its parents.

Thousands of homes are today freed from the dread of cholera infantum and such wasting diseases of childhood by lactated food. Countless mothers now sleep soundly, knowing their precious charges are safe. Lactated food fully meets every need of growing children. It is a perfect substitute for mother's milk—sugar of milk is the basis of both. Children weaned or deprived of breast milk grow steadily and keep strong and well on an exclusive diet of lactated food. It brings them safely through the teething period and makes them develop strong bones and a robust constitution. No mother with a sickly child should delay putting it on a diet of lactated food. It means a vigorous child in the place of a weakling.

Good Field for Work Here.

An effort is being made by members of the W. C. T. U. to secure Lawyer Hubbell, of New York, to come to Plainfield and lecture on the subject of tobacco and cigarettes. Mr. Hubbell organized an anti-cigarette league in New York which now has a membership of 40,000 boys. If he should come to this city there will be a league formed here under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The sewer pipes are now being laid on West Second street.

—The Westfield Athletic Club play baseball at Staten Island on Saturday.

—Doane & Edsall have just received eighty cases of rubbers for the fall trade.

—Peaches, delicious in flavor and reasonable in price, at Neuman Brothers tomorrow.

—Remember the fine canning peaches that will be on sale at Neuman Brothers grocery tomorrow.

—The work of making the sewer connections from the curb to the houses and stores has commenced and is progressing favorably.

—Edward Mundy, of Somerset street, is giving out the contracts for a new $3,000 residence to be built for himself on Summit avenue.

—A horse belonging to Thorpe & Ivins fell into a pit at the barn on Watchung avenue this morning and was quite badly injured. Dr. Herbert was called.

—According to the borough bicycle ordinance any person over eight years of age can ride on the sidewalks of the borough before seven o'clock in the morning or after nine o'clock at night.

—Mrs. Waters, of East Third street, while walking in the yard last night stepped on a rusty nail which penetrated her foot. While no serious results are expected the wound is very painful.

—At Fulper's, 207 West Front street, tomorrow, you will see a great display of peaches and Bartlett pears, and the prices will be low. Don't delay purchasing too long, as the peach season is closing.

—Policeman Flynn captured a cycler in this city Sunday night for riding without a light. W. H. Rogers loaned the man, who lived in Rahway, his wheel to ride home, and he secured his own wheel yesterday.

—David S. Dunavan, of East Second street, received a check yesterday for $40 from the Fidelity and Casualty Insurance Company, through their representative, S. P. T. Wilbur, for four weeks indemnity for a dislocated shoulder.

Thomas, and response by the President; 11:00—Address on Normal Work, by Rev. E. M. Fergusson; 11:20—Brief Reports of Township Secretaries; 12:00—Appointment of Committees; 2:00—Prayer and Praise; 2:15—Minutes of last Convention; Report of Treasurer; Report of County Secretary; Report of State Secretary; 2:45—Address by Joseph D. Doty, Chairman of the State Executive Committee; 3:00—Annual Address by Rev. W. H. Morgan, of Mendham, N.J. Subject: "The Sunday-school Teacher in the World's Work;" 3:35—Election of Officers; Miscellaneous Business and Collection; Four—Primary Address, by Miss Margaret D. Ellis. Subject: "Joshua Renewing the Covenant:" (the lesson for Sunday, September 22d;) 4:30—Adjournment.

Some Weather Facts.

The weekly crop bulletin of the State weather service this week has the following report from John Neagle in Plainfield:

Plainfield—Everything looks well, but more rain is needed; the ground is dry and retard plowing. Rainfall for week 0.05 inch. The season just ended, taken as a whole, has been a good growing season; the farmer has realized a good crop of corn notwithstanding the elements he had to contend with. The total rainfall from May 1st to September 7th was 14.64 inches, 0.24 inch less than last year; the number of days on which 0.0 inch or more of rain fell during the season was 41, against 46 of last year. The average temperature of the season was 69.6, and of last year, 70.3 degrees.

Held for Stabbing Costa.

Frank Epolia was lodged in the Union county jail last night from Cranford for stabbing Nocola Costa. Epolia was employed with others constructing the Cranford sewer. The men quarreled yesterday and a fight ensued. Costa, who is a brother of the contractor, attempted to separate the men when Epolia suddenly plunged a knife into Costa's side. The blade struck a rib.

Miss Mary Lewis, of Central avenue, left this morning for Fort Wayne, Ind., to resume her position as vice-principal in the young ladies' seminary at that place. Her sister, Miss Eveline Lewis, accompanied her and will enter the seminary.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE ENDEAVOR TRAIN.

Union and Somerset County Delegates Will Have a Special Train.

The Plainfield '96 special excursion train on the Central for the State Convention at Atlantic City will leave Somerville at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday, October 9th; returning Saturday morning, October 12th.

This will be the only train on which special rates will be given for the convention. All delegates will be enrolled on the train and receive their souvenir badges and admission tickets, thus saving delay at Atlantic City. The two hotels, "The New England" and "The Bryn Mawr," have been secured for those coming on this special train. The total expenses for railroad fare, board and room at the hotels, souvenir caps which are to be worn at the convention, etc., will be only $6.50. Special praise services conducted by prominent Endeavorers will be held in every car.

Railroad and hotel tickets with convention caps may be secured at L. W. Randolph's drug store. The schedule of train is as follows: Somerville, 12:30; Bound Brook, 12:40; Dunellen, 12:47; Plainfield, 12:53; Westfield, 1:03; Cranford, 1:08; Roselle, 1:13.

E. E. Anthony and J. M. Hawkins, of this city, are on the committee having charge of the arrangements.

COLLEGE ROOMS SECURED.

Rev. A. A. Phelps Has Decided to Locate in This City.

Rev. A. A. Phelps, A. M., has decided to open the "Plainfield Business College" in the Babcock building, October 1st. He has rented the largest room in that magnificent structure, with side rooms attached, on the fourth floor, next to the elevator, and will proceed at once to make all needed arrangements for a first-class school.

As a fitting introduction to a stranger who has come to add another good thing to this town, the following testimonial of Professors J. M. Wade and J. G. Gesherich, principals of the Lebanon, (Pa.,) Business College, with which Mr. Phelps was recently connected, is timely:

This is to certify that the bearer, A. A. Phelps, A. M., has been associated with us for several months, and has given us the very best kind of service. He is a man of strong character and business ability, and will do just what he says. It affords us more than the ordinary pleasure to recommend him to the supreme confidence of the people of any community.

Mr. Phelps will gladly five full information to any who will drop a letter of inquiry in the Plainfield postoffice.

The Woman's Suffrage Lectures.

The following are the five lectures which are to be given in the Y. M. C. A. building in this city in October for the benefit of school suffrage for women: October 1st, 4 p. m., Mrs. Etta Morse Hudders, "The Influence of Food on Health;" October 9th, 4 p. m., Miss Jane M. Slocum, "The Ethics of Citizenship;" October 15th, 4 p. m., Miss E. Marguerite Ludley, "The Coming Girl and How we Shall Rear Her;" October 22d, evening, Prof. John Gifford, an illustrated lecture on Forestry; October 29th, 4 p. m., Mrs. James Scrimgeom, "The Newer Patriotism."

Caught in the Ruts.

The deep ruts on Somerset street near the bridge almost caused an accident Monday afternoon. A team of spirited horses were being driven close by the car tracks when the driver tried to turn out for a road wagon that was standing by the curb. The ruts were too deep, however, and the wheels of the two carriages became locked. The two horses danced around in a most lively manner and threatened to run away, but a cool head quieted them, and the carriages were separated without damage.

A Newspaper Incorporated.

Articles of incorporation of The Herald-Democrat, a daily and weekly newspaper in Elizabeth were filed yesterday morning with the Clerk of Union county. The incorporators are Thomas D. Taylor, F. W. Taylor, William F. Taylor, Thomas P. Colhouer. The capital stock of the plant is placed at $10,000, and business is begun with $1,000. The paper will succeed The Central New Jersey Herald, and take its place as the local Democratic organ.

—The County Board of Elections met at Elizabeth yesterday, when Joseph F. Sheppard, of this city, was appointed as election officer in the Third ward in place of Louis G. Timpson, who resides in the Second ward instead of the Third. The Board adjourned to meet October 7th.

WAS IT A CHICAGO FOOT?

At Any Rate It Was Big Enough to Crush the Mouse.

It was only a small mouse, but its presence brought terror to the heart of a young woman in one of Plainfield's homes. For several months the little rodent had been inhabiting the parlor, but no one could gain sufficient courage to capture him. Finally one evening a young man called, and while the two were conversing on the various topics of the day, a noise and a rustle was heard. Of course the young woman knew the cause of it, but the young man did not. Presently the ever annoying tenant appeared on the floor and had a game of tag, which brought the young woman to her feet. The mouse was frightened and ran under the carpet, and the young woman not wanting to appear timid placed her foot on the spot where the innocent creature was supposed to be. A corner of the carpet was then raised; and to the surprise of both, the mouse had passed in his checks and left this life never to return.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK.

Young Dodson was especially fortunate in two respects. In the first place he and Dr. John were great friends; a rare distinction, for Dr. John is one of those individuals who picks his friends, has few of them, and remains "true blue" to all he does acknowledge as such. Than again he was very much in love. Now, to some cynically-minded persons, to be in love does not necessarily imply that state of affairs which we usually term fortunate. But to young Dodson they were one and the same thing. He had reason to congratulate himself, for he knew that she looked on him with very favorable eyes, yet he had never revealed his feelings, for he wanted to be sure of his position beforehand, and was unwilling to put an end to the enjoyment of her society by too hasty an avowal.

Miss Van der Cleve was a very independent girl—one could tell that by the way she walked—wore cunning little studs in the bosom of her shirt, and strode along with her hands thrust deeply into the pockets of her tailor-made jacket—in fact, was very mannish. She was fond of walking and all sorts of exercise, was a great admirer of athletics, and thought a man only half a man unless he could distinguish himself in the various branches of sport. Young Dodson had lied to her assiduously in regard to his ability to perform all sorts of feats of strength and nerve, and afterward told himself reassuringly that he was certain he had done them, or at least could have done them when at college, he wasn't sure which. He was reasonably sure of his ground and would have been absolutely certain, were it not for some of her absurdly foolish ideas about athletics and sport. He joined an athletic club solely on her account, and then found that he had got himself into a scrape, for she insisted upon his taking part in the next exhibition. The matter was finally settled by young Dodson's importing a poor chap from up the country somewhere who resembled him somewhat in face and figure, and having him enter under the name of Dodson. The fellow, who was something of a kicker and a jumper, managed to carry off a second prize, and the real Dodson was obliged to be content with that. Miss Van der Cleve complimented him afterward on his success, but added that she would scarcely have recognized him if she had not seen his name on the card. Dodson explained that a man looked very differently in his "gym" suit from what he did on the avenue of a Sunday afternoon, and Miss Van der Cleve was satisfied.

Poor Dodson led a hard life, for he was continually coming across some new requirement in the athletic line which taxed his inventive faculties sorely.

The doctor informed him that his most difficult task lay yet before him; that Miss Van der Cleve was a devoted fisherman—or fisherwoman, whichever way he chose to have it—and that she would assuredly require an equal amount of enthusiasm and success on the part of her future husband. He then went on to tell how Jack Talbot—who, two years before, was in his position exactly—lost everything because he could not pull out more than a pound trout before her. He had remembered her saying once that she would never marry a man who could not land at least a two-pounder; so he had felt that for him the game was up, and went down to New Orleans and married a planter's daughter who hated fish.

This was sad news for poor Dodson, who was completely overcome. He decided to cast no die that night.

A few weeks later both young Dodson and Dr. John received an invitation from Miss Van der Cleve's uncle to come up for a week's fishing at his lodge in the Adirondacks. Dodson knew that this was to be his final test, and was consequently anxious over its result. It was a thing that he could not spin yarns about, but would have to perform before Miss Van der Cleve's very eyes.

To tell the truth, he knew as little about fishing as he did about baking bread, and cared even less. He had never caught a trout in his life, and could not make a cast to save his neck. His ideas about fishing were always associated with impaling slimy worms upon a hook, and like unpleasant proceedings. However, he determined to trust to luck and rely upon the good doctor to help him out of his difficulties.

The next week or two passed all too quickly for young Dodson. He spent all his spare time in pouring over piscatorial literature, or haunting like a troubled ghost the establishments where fishing tackle was sold. He bought himself a beautiful lancewood rod.

One morning found young Dodson and his professional friend comfortably seated in the train on their way northward. They had their fishing gear nicely packed and stowed away with the rest of their baggage, and were content to lean back luxuriously and bless the man who first invented parlor cars. At least one of them did, but young Dodson, with a look of determination on his face, was carefully going over the names of the flies in his book, making hasty reviews of the various instructions of "How to catch a trout," and was busy generally.

They arrived at their destination after a long drive in the dark, and were heartily welcomed by Miss Van der Cleve, her aunt and genial uncle. The evening was most delightfully spent in conversation, and Dodson for a time forgot his anxiety, as he monopolized Miss Van der Cleve's society in a corner. The doctor talked politics with the uncle and was in the midst of a fierce denunciation of the tariff, when he overheard young Dodson's voice raised in a glowing description of a fight with an enormous trout.

Yes, he was a beauty, and thrashed the water into foam as he tried to escape from the ten-pounder he was, too, and as he was about to make a rush away from the boat, instead of letting out my line and tiring him, I grew impatient, and with one tremendous jerk I——"

Here Dr. John trembled for his friend's safety as he heard Miss Van der Cleve say with astonishment:

"You couldn't have jerked a ten-pounder out with that light rod, Mr. Dodson."

"Oh, no, I—I didn't get him out; the tip broke and I lost him," was the prompt rejoinder. Dr. John breathed more easily.

At last when they were parting for the night arrangements were suggested for the first fishing trip on the morrow.

"I think it will rain," began the uncle, but young Dodson, who happened to remember having read somewhere that bait was better in rainy weather than flies, broke in with:

"In that case we had better use bait, had we not, Miss Van der Cleve?" and was rewarded by a smile of encouragement at this display of practical knowledge.

At last they reached the spot where they were to begin. Miss Van der Cleve was soon ready and stood on a neighboring rock, while young Dodson gazed longing and enviously at her trim and graceful figure, as she made cast after cast in beautiful form. She noticed that he was not fishing, and called to him.

He clambered up by her side and told her that much as he loved fishing he would prefer watching her; beside it was not quite late enough to suit him. At length after repeated hints that he would better go to work and positive assurance that she would not fail if he left her, young Dodson mournfully set about to get his line and rod ready. But here a difficulty presented itself—he had never put them together before and was utterly at sea.

Dr. John, however, came to his assistance and he was soon fitted out. Miss Van der Cleve, who had already landed several from the hole where she was fishing, told him to come and try his luck, but poor Dodson knew that would be fatal. He shook his head, put his fingers to his lips and stared fixedly into the water in front of him as if watching a fish. He had forgotten everything! He could not remember which foot his guides had said was to be in front of the other in making a cast. He thought it was the right and still he was not sure but that it was the left. He asked Dr. John who was standing by, and was much relieved to learn that it made no difference.

He let out as much line as he thought was necessary, and then, when Miss Van der Cleve was not looking, made a wild pass through the air with his rod, in his endeavor to make a long cast. Alas for the line! The leader caught in the branches of a tree overhead.

"I lost him! A beauty!" Dodson cried out excitedly, "and got my line caught. Too bad, too bad."

He was at his wits' end how to get away where Miss Van der Cleve would not see him. At last he said:

"Where does old 'Methuselah' hold forth—the trout you spoke of on our way out here, Miss Van der Cleve?"

"About three yards above here you will find a deep pool with branches overhanging from the farther shore. It is there that he usually hides. But you'll never catch him. He has been sought after for five years, and although he is seen every season, he has never yet been hooked," was the very discouraging rejoinder.

"I like big and difficult game best," young Dodson answered boldly, and moved up stream with the doctor to the place indicated.

The doctor played his flies about the edge of the hole, while Dodson made a cast, after a fashion, from above stream, and, fearing that he could not make another as good, allowed his flies to sink. Presently Miss Van der Cleve appeared and stood watching the two men. Dodson was so nervous at her approach that he allowed his line to be borne down by the current.

Suddenly he saw the doctor give a start and saw his rod bend, while he felt an enormous tug at his own and saw a large fish of some sort leap into the air and fall back with a loud splash. He lost his mind completely, and stood, rod in hand, staring at the water until aroused by a stage whisper from the doctor.

"Don't be a fool. We have our lines tangled, and you have a fine fish on the end of yours. I shouldn't wonder but that it is 'Methuselah.' Look out! Steady, there, Miss Van der Cleve is watching. Get him toward the shallow water or you will sure lose him."

Even now Dodson can't tell how it was done, but somehow, the fish, after its strength was spent, was gradually worked into shallow water. All he heard was:

"Here, take my rod, while I use the net. When I say 'one, two, three jerk!' jerk both rods for dear life, and between us I think we'll land him," from the doctor.

Finally after seemingly ten years of waiting, "one, two, three, jerk!" came in sharp, quick tones from his friend, and at the word he closed his eyes and put all his strength into an upward movement of the two rods. He heard something fall to the ground and something break. Opening his eyes, he saw the body of a huge fish lying in a heap of tangled lines, while his own rod was broken.

He immediately picked up the fish as best he could, and, having killed it, walked toward Miss Van der Cleve and laid it at her feet. Dr. John thought it proper to disappear just then to hunt for the scales to weigh it. When he returned he found Dodson radiant and Miss Van der Cleve happy, while her uncle, who had come up, was looking at the fish and saying:

"That's 'Methuselah,' sure enough. Well, you are a fisherman!"

"Thus did young Dodson catch his last (and first) trout," said Dr. John to a group of friends in the smoking room the night of the wedding reception. "And the fun of it all is he doesn't know to this day that the fish was caught on my hook."—Detroit Free Press.

THE SUMMER GIRL.

Her oval cheek is like a peach that ripened in the sun.
Her locks are lit with beauty from the summer newly won.
She is brighter than the daisy in the dell.
And she dances every day
Like a naiad in the spray,
This dainty little seaside belle.

I love to list the patter of her feet upon the sand,
I love to watch the motion of her small brown hand.
Till every pulse is thrilling to the spell.
I could meditate a week
On the dimple in her cheek,
The saucy little sea-side belle.

I would I were the breezss that about her tresses blow,
I long to be the flowing tide to kiss her pinky toe.
Alas, no rhyme her charm can ever tell,
For we meet and love and part,
And she never breaks my heart—
The darling little seaside belle.

A Snake Among the Worshipers.

The camp meeting at High Bridge, Ky., came to a close, and with it ended one of the most successful enterprises of its kind in point of order and attraction in the State.

Just as Gen. Cozens finished his sermon, which was very late, and as the people was just beginning to leave, some men discovered a large snake in one of the rafters of the north wing several feet above women's heads, and began an attempt to kill it by punching it to death with a huge limb that had been torn from an adjacent tree.

The reptile was not to be destroyed without a chance for its life, for suddenly entwining its slimy body about the limb, it leaped to the ground in among a throng of women, and hastily glided beneath their feet. The ladies became frantic, and some came very near fainting.

A mouse wasn't a circumstance as to a cause for skirt dancing as was this snake. Women climbed over benches upon the backs of those near, and the display of limbs was forgotten in fright. Men came bravely to their aid, but the snake would have certainly got away had it not been for the timely act of W. K. Shugare, a business man from Lancaster. He grasped the cause of consternation by the tail and dashed his head against a post near by.

The panic soon died away and everything went on as if nothing had happened. The snake was a large black racer, measuring about six or seven feet in length. Even when almost dead it coiled around Shugar's leg and gave him a good thrashing with its tail.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Rapid Recovery.

"Talk about your faith cure," said the man on the end seat; "'tain't alongside o' what happened up to Si Stover's house only yesterday.

"You see, Si's wife was took awful bad, and they thought she was dyin' sure. So they got Si to go for the doctor. When they told him to hurry, he said: 'All right. I'll get him fast enough; but as I've got to go by the shoemaker's I may as well drop in and see if my shoes are done, and perhaps I'd better call and see how the Widow Stomes does—haven't see her for a day or two, and ——'

"Before he could get any further his wife raised up from her bed and slowly said:

"'You needn't mind about seein' any doctor for me. I guess I'm all right now.'

"And so she was. She got up and has been as well, if not better, than ever she was, ever since. But she doesn't say anythin' particularly lovin' about Widder Stomes, and she does occasionally give Si a look that makes him shiver and get out o' the house as soon as he can conveniently."—Boston Transcript.

The Man Who Persisted.

About twenty of us got off the east bound train at Elmer Junction to take the train over to Washburn, and though we had been told that we would have to wait two hours, it wasn't ten minutes before one of the crowd went into the little office where the agent was at work on his books and asked how long before the south bound train came along. The agent answered him and hung out a sign reading:

"The south bound train is due here at 4:30.

"This is the first train due.

"It arrives at Washburn at 6:10.

"It will probably be on time.

"I can't hurry it up any.

"I am not a bad man, but should any person persist in annoying me after reading the above——"

All of us read the sign, and it was satisfactory to all but a tall, stoop-shouldered individual.

He read it aloud twice over to himself and was evidently puzzled. He finally knocked on the door of the office, and when the agent put his head out the tall man said:

"You have left sunthin' off your sign out here."

The agent glared at him and retreated, and the tall man got a piece of paper and a pencil and wrote and put up this sign under the door:

"I am a peaceful man.

"But I can't be bluffed.

"I persisted, and the kuss didn't do a blamed thing!"—Detroit Free Press.

None Comes Out.

"No, Maude, dear, we do not think the cat's voice is musical, even if the animal is full of violin and banjo strings."—Philadelphia Record.

An Interruption.

"I trust," the very careful grocer said.
"I'm glad," the buyer said. "I'm sure you ought——"
"Hold on—" (the grocer grew a trifle red)
"I trust that cash you'll pay for what you've bought!"

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as poasible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

THE TWINKLING OF AN EYE

By BRANDER MATTHEWS

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

CHAPTER V.

When Paul Whittier said that he had photographs of the man who had been injuring the Ramapo Steel and Iron Works, showing him in the act of opening the safe, Mr. Whittier and Mr. Wheatcroft looked at each other in amazement. Major Van Zandt stared at the young man with fear and shame struggling together in his face.

Without waiting to enjoy his triumph Paul put his hand in his pocket and took out two squares of bluish paper.

"There," he said, as he handed one to his father, "there is a blue-print of the man taken in this office at ten minutes past three yesterday afternoon, just as he was about to open the safe in the corner. You see he is kneeling with his hand on the lock, but apparently, just then, something alarmed him and he cast a hasty glance over his shoulder. At that second the photograph was taken, and so we have a full-face portrait of the man."

Mr. Whittier had looked at the photograph, and he now passed it to the impatient hand of the junior partner.

"You see, Mr. Wheatcroft," Paul continued, "that although the face in the photograph bears a certain family likeness to Major Van Zandt's, all the same that is not a portrait of the Major. The man who was in here yesterday afternoon was a young man—a man young enough to be the Major's son!"

The old bookkeeper looked at the speaker.

"Mr. Paul," he began, "you won't be hard on the——" Then he paused abruptly.

"I confess I don't understand this at all," declared Mr. Wheatcroft irascibly.

"I am afraid that I do understand it,"

"I'M AFRAID I DO UNDERSTAND IT," MR. WHITTIER SAID.

Mr. Whittier said, with a glance of compassion at the Major.

"There," Paul continued, handing his father a second azure square, "there is a photograph taken here ten minutes after the first—at three-twenty yesterday afternoon. That shows the safe open and the same young man standing before it with the private letter-book in his hand. As his head is bent over the pages of the book, the view of the face is not soo good. But there can be no doubt that it is the same man. You see that, don't you, Mr. Wheatcroft?"

"I see that, of course," returned Mr. Wheatcroft, forcibly; "what I don't see is why the Major here should confess if he isn't guilty!"

"I think I know the reason for that," said Mr. Whittier gently.

"There haven't been two men at our books, have they?" asked Mr. Wheatcroft; "the Major and also this fellow who has been photographed?"

Mr. Whittier looked at the old bookkeeper for a moment.

"Major," he said, with compassion in his voice, "you won't tell me that it was you who sold our secrets to our rivals? And you might confess it again and again, I should never believe it. I know you better. I have known you too long to believe any charge aginst your honesty, even if you bring it yourself. The real culprit, the man who is photographed here, is your son, isn't he? There is no use of trying to conceal the truth now, and there is no need to attempt it, because we shall be lenient with him for your sake, Major."

There was a moment's silence, broken by Mr. Wheatcroft's suddenly saying:

"The Major's son? Why, he's dead, isn't he? He was shot in a brawl after a spree somewhere out West two or three years ago. At least that's what I understood at the time."

"It is what I wanted everybody to understand at the time," said the old bookkeeper, breaking silence at last. "But it wasn't so. The boy was shot, but he was not killed. I hoped that it would be a warning to him, and that he would make a fresh start. Friends of mine got him a place in Mexico—but luck was against him, so he wrote me, and he lost that. Then an old comrade of mine gave him another chance out in Denver, and for a while he kept straight and did his work well. Then he broke down once more and he was discharged. For six months I did not know what had become of him. I've found out since that he was a tramp for weeks and that he walked most of the way from Colorado to New York. This fall he turned up here in the city, ragged, worn out, sick. I wanted to order him away, but I couldn't. I took him back, and got him decent clothes and told him to look for a place, for I knew that hard work was the only thing that would keep him out of mischief. He did not find a place—perhaps he did not look for one. But all at once I discovered that he had money. He would not tell me how he got it. I knew he could not have come by it honestly; and so I watched him. I spied after him, and at last I found that he was selling you to the Tuxedo Company."

"But how could he open the safe?" cried Mr. Wheatcroft. "You didn't know the combination."

"I did not tell him the combination I did know," said the old bookkeeper, with pathetic dignity. "And I didn't have to tell him. He can open almost any safe without knowing the combination. How he does it, I don't know. It is his gift. He listens to the wheels as they turn and he sets first one and then the other; and in ten minutes the safe is open."

"How could he get into the store?" Mr. Whittier inquired.

"He knew I had a key," responded the old bookkeeper, "and he stole it from me. He used to watch on Sunday afternoons till Mike went for a walk and then he unlocked the store, and slipped in and opened the safe. Two weeks ago Mike came back unexpectedly and he had just time to get out of one of the rear windows of this office."

"Yes," Paul remarked, as the Major paused, "Mike told me that he had found a window unfastened."

"I heard you asking about it," Major Van Zandt explained, "and I knew that if you were suspicious he was sure to be caught sooner or later. So I begged him not to try to injure you again. I offered him money to go away. But he refused my money—he said he could get it for himself now and I might keep mine till he needed it. He gave me the slip yesterday afternoon. When I found he was gone, I came here straight. The front door was unlocked; I walked in and found him just closing the safe here. I talked to him and he refused to listen to me. I tried to get him to give up his idea—and he struck me. Then I left him, and I went out, seeing no one as I hurried home. That's when Mr Wheatcroft followed me, I suppose. The boy never came back all night. I haven't seen him since; I don't know where he is—but he is my son, after all, my only son. And when Mr. Wheatcroft accused me, I confessed at last, thinking you might be easier on me than you would be on the boy."

"My poor old friend," said Mr. Whittier, sympathetically, holding out his hand, which the Major clasped gratefully for a moment.

"Now we know who was selling us to the Tuxedo people, we can protect ourselves hereafter," declared Mr. Wheatcroft. "And in spite of your trying to humbug me into believing you guilty, Major, I'm willing to let your son off easy."

"I think I can get him a place where he will be out of temptation because he will be kept hard at work always," said Paul.

The old bookkeeper looked up as though about to thank the young man, but there seemed to be a lump in his throat which prevented him from speaking.

Suddenly Mr. Wheatcroft began, explosively: "That's all very well!—but what I still don't understand is how Paul got those photographs."

Mr. Whittier looked at his son and smiled. "That is a little mysterious, I'paul," he said, "and I confess I'd like to know how you did it."

"Were you concealed here yourself?" asked Mr. Wheatcroft.

"No," Paul answered. "If you will look around this room you will see that there isn't a dark corner in which anybody could tuck himself."

"Then where was the photographer hidden?" Mr. Wheatcroft inquired with increasing curiosity.

"In the clock," responded Paul.

"In the clock?" echoed Mr. Wheatcroft, greatly amazed. "Why there isn't room in the case of that clock for a thin midget, let alone a man."

Paul enjoyed puzzling his father's partner. "I didn't say I had a man there or a midget, either," he explained. "I said that the photographer was in the clock—and I might have said that the clock itself was the photographer."

Mr. Wheatcroft threw up his hands in disgust. "Well," he cried, "if you want to go on mystifying us in this absurd way, go on as long as you like! But your father and I are entitled to some consideration, I think."

"I'm not mystifying you at all. The clock took the pictures automatically. I'll show you how," Paul returned, getting up from his chair and going to the corner of the office. Taking a key from his pocket he opened the case of the clock and revealed a small photographic apparatus inside with the tube of the objective opposite the round glass panel in the door of the case. At the bottom of the case was a small electrical battery and on a small shelf over this was an electro-magnet.

"I begin to see how you did it," Mr. Whittier remarked, "but I'm not an expert in photography, Paul, and I'd like a full explanation. And make it as simple as you can."

"It's a very simple thing, indeed," said his son. "One day while I was wondering how we could best catch the man who was getting at the books, that clock happened to strike, and somehow it reminded me that in our photographic society at college we had once suggested that it would be amusing to attach a detective camera to a timepiece and take snap shots every few minutes all through the day. I saw that this clock of ours faced the safe and that it couldn't be better placed for the purpose. So when I had thought out my plan, I came over here and pretended that the clock was wrong, and in setting it right I broke off the minute-hand. Then I had a man I know send for it to repair it; he is both an electrician and a photographic expert. Together we worked out this device. Here is a small snap-shot camera loaded with a hundred and fifty films; and here is the electrical attachment which connects with the clock so as to take a photograph every ten minutes from six in the morning to seven at night. We arranged that the magnet should turn the spool of film after every snap shot."

"Well," cried Mr. Wheatcroft, "I don't know much about these things, but I read the papers and I suppose you mean that the clock 'pressed the button,' and the electricity 'pulled the string.'"

"That's it, precisely," the young man responded. "Of course, I wasn't quite sure how it would work, so I thought I'd try it first on a weekday when we were all here. It did work all right and I made several interesting discoveries. I found that Mike smoked a pipe in this office and that Bob played leapfrog in the store and stood on his red head in the corner there up against the safe——"

"The confounded little rascal!" interrupted Mr Wheatcroft.

Paul smiled as he continued: "I found also that Mr. Wheatcroft was captivated by a pretty book agent and bought two bulky volumes he didn't want."

Mr. Wheatcroft looked sheepish for a moment.

"Oh, that's how you knew, is it?" he growled, running his hands impatiently through his shock of hair.

"That's how I knew," Paul replied. "I told you I had an eye on you. It was the lone eye of the camera. And on Sunday it kept watch for us here, winking every ten minutes. From six o'clock in the morning to three in the afternoon it winked ninety times and all it saw was the same scene, the empty corner of the room here, with the safe in the shadow at first and at last in the full light that poured down from the glass roof over us. But a little after three a man came into the office and made ready to open the safe. At ten minutes past three the clock and the camera took his photograph—in the twinkling of an eye. At twenty minutes past three a second record was made. Before half past three the man was gone and the camera winked every ten minutes until seven o'clock quite in vain. I came down early this morning and got the roll of negatives. One after another I developed them, disappointed that I had almost counted a hundred of them without reward. But the ninety-second and the ninety-third paid for all my trouble."

Mr. Whittier gave his son a look of pride. "That was very ingeniously worked out, Paul, very ingeniously, indeed," he said. "If it had not been for your clock here I might have found it difficult to prove that the Major was innocent—especially since he declared himself guilty."

Mr. Wheatcroft rose to his feet to close the conversation.

"I am glad we know the truth, anyhow," he asserted, emphatically. And then as though to relieve the strain on the old bookkeeper he added, with a loud laugh, at his own joke "That clock had its hands before its face all the time—but it kept its eyes open for all that!"

"Don't forget that it had only one eye," said Mr. Whittier, joining in the laugh. "It had an eye to its duty."

"You know the French saying, father," added Paul: "In the realm of the blind the one-eyed man is King."

AN ERUDITE BRAKEMAN.

A West Point Graduate Working His Way Up in the Railroad Business.

A rather grimy young man, in dusty corduroys and a stubby black beard, sat chatting with Freight Traffic Manager McCormick yesterday, says the Cincinnati Inquirer.

"Let me introduce Mr. Charlie Hine, a freight brakeman on our Chicago division," said Mr. McCormick.

Mr. Hine rose, and, acknowledging the reporter's greeting, put out his hand—he was shy a finger nail in the way of business as the result of his first month's experience on the road.

"Mr. Hine has resigned his commission as Lieutenant in the United States army to turn freight brakeman," continued Mr. McCormick. "He is a graduate of Washington High School, of the West Point Military Academy, and of the Cincinnati Law School. But he is ambitious and wants to graduate in the Big Four College. He is taking the operating department course and will go in for his examination and degree of superintendent one of these days."

The Enquirer published the announcement of Mr. Hines' resignation from the army a month or more ago. His old friends would hardly recognize him now. There is nothing of the trim and jaunty appearance left, and he has lost some pounds in weight while hustling local freight and twisting brakes, but he looks at you with determined eyes that smile cheerily and do not shift as he explains his position.

"My ambition is to be a superintendent," he says. "I have studied the theory, but I want the practice. Theory and practice combined produce the ideal condition in any profession, and in railroading, a profession which is comparatively new, nearly all the higher officers rose from the ranks.

"After the war there were thousands of educated men who came out of the service, and, finding themselves displaced in their old vocations, began life over again by taking subordinate positions on railroads. These men naturally rose, and now fill the official positions. I am simply doing from choice what many were forced to do by circumstances, that is all. There is nothing Quixotic about it."

"I suppose you didn't think there was enough danger in the profession of arms and thought that you would try freight braking?" asked the reporter. "The railroad companies killed or maimed nearly 35,000 employees in 1893, you know,"

Mr. Hine smiled, and, glancing at his wounded finger, said that he "didn't propose to get killed or maimed if he could help it, but that was part of the game. I have just drawn my first month's pay, $60.20," he added, "and I rather think that I earned it. My companions are good fellows and have received me very kindly.

"The work comes a little hard, but I'm not at all discouraged, and mean to go through with it. I have fallen through a cattle guard once and knocked off a finger nail and hustled freight, but it's all right; I knew what I was getting into when I began it."

The young man is 28 years of age, of spare figure, and it is evident that he is not very strong physically. He is a native of Virginia. He has no special influence or backing to bring promotion, and says that he doesn't expect it except as he earns it in the regular course

THE SCIENCE OF A DRUNK.

Dr. Keeley, of Gold Cure Fame, Holds Original Views.

I hold that alcohol acts by poisoning—producing certain modified physiology relating to co-ordination, motion and sensation, recognized by everybody as intoxication. This condition is acute or chronic, so-called, corresponding with the fact whether the poison is continued from day to day or is taken for only a short time. Chronic alcoholism is simply a continued series of drunks or acute intoxication.

Alcohol being taken in excess what is not consumed by oxygen and converted into heat and corelated into cell energy circulates in the blood, and, of course, reaches all tissues. It coagulates albumen to a certain extent, perhaps, but its effects are on the general physiology. It modifies cellular nutrition, reproduction and special function, and causes a variation in the cell of specific character. This variation gives the cell a greater or less amount of increased resistance to the poison. This law holds good with every poison and in all poisoning.

If a debauch lasts several days, the man on the first day will make himself "blind drunk" on a pint of whisky. When he wakes the next morning he can drink a pint of whisky before breakfast and go down to the table steady enough, though smelling badly and showing the poisonous effects of the debauch.

The second pint does not make him drunk. It requires a quart or more during the day to put him in the condition of the first evening. Now why is this? There is no possible way of explaining the fact except by the law of natural selection. The acute poisoning by the first pint of liquor has created a tolerance or an increased resistance to the poison.

To get drunk again, a larger quantity must be taken the next day. What happens next is the hereditary transmission of something. If the cells acquire something they must transmit it. Like produces like, subject to variations during the reproduction. In this case the thing acquired by the cell and which it transmits is the variation which gives the new cells a greater power of resisting the poison and not resisting the presence of the poison, for its presence is now a necessity, but with an increased power of resisting the poisonous action. If the quantity of alcohol were not increased beyond the power of resistance gained by the variation of cells the debauchee would not show further symptoms of intoxication, nor would there be further poisoning; provided, of course, all the tissues of the body had acquired an equal resistance.

The tissue cells are now, such as live at all, naturally selected to exist in the presence of alcohol; but this poison is now a necessity. Let us see why. If an animal is selected by nature in this manner to live on grass we may assume its teeth are adapted to browse and graze, and that the form of the teeth is a variation from that of a former type of animal which lived on some other diet. If a grass eating animal begins to eat flesh it may in time undergo a variation of teeth and stomach, and have tusks and different molars and lose its original type of stomach.

What will happen now if the environment of these animals is suddenly changed? Suppose there is no grass for the grass eating animal and no prey for the carnivora. Suppose they are given a new kind of food; then a new variation must be undergone if the animals live, but the change would be anything but agreeable and would illustrate a feature of the struggle for existence.

The cells, as well as individuals, transmit whatever they acquire as part of their likeness in reproduction. Suppose each generation in a family for one hundred generations are subject to alcohol. By the law of heredity these people would acquire a great tolerance to the poison of alcohol. These are the people who consume the greater part of the liquor drunk. They keep the wine cellars and drink alcohol in wine or beer on the table. They are not known as drunkards. They have the power of "stopping when they get enough," and do not get drunk. Their cells have undergone, by the influence of heredity and variation, an evolution which enables them to live on food and alcohol, and enjoy the pleasures of the table and sideboard without imminent danger.

It is clear that heredity in alcoholism, by transmitting the power of resisting alcohol, acquired by conflict with the poison, does not cause inebriety by heredity. The writers who cite their little cases wherein a man's son and the man are both drunkards do not know what heredity is when they limit its horizon to their narrow view. The fact is that this family has not yet acquired an immunity to this poison, and the son probably drinks for the same convivial reason that his father did provided he has no other diseases. I do not know, of course, how many generations are required to gain an immunity to alcohol, but I do know what the laws of heredity are.

A Plea for the Parent.

The Watchman says:

"All sorts of doctrinaires are laying hold of the public school system for the promulgation of their fads."

Everyone seems to think he or she has more right to the children than the parents have, and that he knows better what should be done with the children. By the eagerness to have everything a child ought to learn taught in the schools and the Sunday schools, these doctrinaires seem to labor under the impression that parents are all dead or worthless. This attack on the family is one of the most general and most insidious.—Louisville Western Recorder.

A QUARREL OVER THE CARDS.

THE WESTFIELD MURDER WAS BROUGHT ON BY THIS.

The Murdered Man Only Known as No. 29—His Assailant an Italian Boarding House Keeper—Several Arrests.

The circumstances of the murder of the Italian sewer digger at Westfield yesterday are this morning told by the New York Sun as follows:

There is a considerable settlement of Italians at Westfield, and at present many others are there at work on the village sewer. The men were sent to the contractors by Nicholas Orchetti, an Italian lodging-house keeper, and were known to the foreman only by number. The body of the dead man was identified as that of No. 29. It was learned that he had been playing cards nearly all the morning at Orchetti's house with Guiseppe Venharelli, Michael Sholian, and Joseph LaGuary. Constable Pickell arrested these men, and they were taken before Justice Collins. The story gathered from the men was substantially as follows:

Nicholas Orchetti, who supplied the laborers to the contractors, Stratford & Cox, recently had a quarrel with their foreman, O'Flynn, and yesterday morning endeavored to call off his men. The only ones who responded were the three prisoners and the man who was murdered. His companions said that the only name by which they knew him was Jack.

The four men went from their work to Orchetti's house and there began playing cards for beer. A quarrel arose over the score, and Orchetti attempted to eject the men. In the fight No. 29 was stabbed. He staggered from the house and started to cross a vacant lot. He went only a short distance, stumbled, and fell where his body was found a few minutes later.

At the examination of the prisoners yesterday afternoon Sholian accused Orchetti of committing the murder and Orchetti retaliated by accusing Sholian. The others refused to implicate either of their companions. One of the officials said last night that he had secured the name of an Italian who declared that he saw Orchetti stab No. 29, and that others had seen the two struggling on the floor with Orchetti on top. When the men were arrested no weapons were found on them, nor were there any blood stains on their clothes. It was said, however, that Sholian had changed his clothing and was preparing to leave the place when he was arrested.

Orchetti is the leading man af the Italian colony and is said to be wealthy. Immediately after his arrest he sent for a lawyer. The four prisoners were taken to the Union county jail at Elizabeth. Today Coroner Hornung will hold an inquest on the body.

The Sweat Shop Sheet.

A city councilman this morning confirmed the statement made by The Daily Press of last evening in regard to the penurious methods adopted by the News editor about the publishing of the sewer ordinance, and said that he must either be short of help or else employs cheap labor that is not able to do the work. He said it was for that alone that a special meeting of the council had to be called.

Walked and Slept.

Some people go to sleep standing up, but a little newsboy on Park avenue yesterday afternoon apparently was dreaming as he walked along. A woman cyclist had just mounted her wheel in front of Willett's shoe store when the youngster walked right into the wheelwoman bringing her to the ground. The lad was so badly frightened that he took to his heels and fled.

Promenade Concerts Considered.

There is some talk of holding a series of promenade concerts this fall and winter in the Crescent Rink. Only a small admission fee would be charged, the money to go for expenses and to provide a series of open-air concerts next summer. The concerts would be a continuation of the open-air concerts first proposed by Councilman Frost.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AN OPEN-AIR CONCERT.

A Van of Calves Entertain West Front Street People All Night.

Plainfield people like open-air concerts as a usual thing, but they look upon it as too much of a good thing when they had one last all night. A large cattle van, drawn by two horses, came along West Front street toward Plainfield last evening at about seven o'clock, with a load of calves. After passing Washington avenue, the driver tried to get his load out of the car tracks and in doing so the left hand rear wheel was dished and there was a fall in veal. The wagon was drawn to one side of the road, and the men in charge set down to wait until morning.

There was a little music when the collapse occurred, but it was not until eleven o'clock that the calves began to tune up. The residents who had managed to get to sleep were suddenly awakened by a tremendous bellowing. Heads appeared at the upper windows of the houses in the vicinity to see what was the matter, but the driver and his companion sat there talking of the weather, the crops, and an early fall, utterly unconscious of the music nearby. And from that time until six o'clock in the morning the neighbors had no rest, for when one lot of calves had sung as long as they could another band chimed in and took up the good old tune. In the morning a new wheel was procured and the musical party started forth, and the strong language, that had heretofore filled the air in that vicinity, ceased.

WRECKED IN THE CAR TRACK.

Kelly Loses a Black Wheel and Borrows a Yellow One.

The trolley car tracks brought another carriage to grief yesterday afternoon. H. H. Kelly, of South Plainfield, who keeps a wagon repair shop on East Third street, was driving down West Front street in the car track accompanied by his wife. In front of Voehl's bakery he started to turn out when the spokes in the left rear wheel snapped. The buggy was driven to the side of the street and a new wheel procured at Homan's. The running gear of the injured buggy was painted black, while the borrowed wheel was yellow, but Mr. Kelly said to a Daily Press reporter. "I don't care as long as we get home," and they started out in the rather odd looking rig.

WHEEL FELL OFF.

One of DeMott's Stages Brought to a Sudden Halt.

A sudden drop in the direction of Mother Earth was a rather surprising sensation to the occupants of DeMott's stage, which runs between Plainfield and Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon. The stage was just approaching Plainfield and had crossed Richmond street when one of the rear wheels came off. Investigation showed that the nut had worked loose and dropped off, allowing the wheel to follow suit. Wyatt Barnes, of Norwood avenue, rode back on a bicycle and found the missing nut in front of the John Taylor Johnston residence. The wheel was put on again and the stage continued on its journey.

Good Things to Know.

Library card holders who were out of town during the summer, and who thus missed the notice in The Daily Press, will be interested to know that Saturday afternoons have been added to the circulating hours at the Free Public Library, so that the delivery hours are now: Daily, from 2 until 5:30 p. m., and Saturdays from 7:30 until 9 p. m. Also, that it has been decided, for the convenience of borrowers desiring to draw more than one book at a time, to issue an extra non-fiction card. For particulars inquiry should be made at the library.

To Enter the Training School.

William H. Jessup, formerly of the Y. M. C. A., of this city, arrived in Plainfield yesterday from Europe. Owing to the large crowd coming over he was obliged to take the American Line steamer Ohio, which goes to Philadelphia. From the latter place he came to Plainfield. He left last night for Springfield, Mass., where he will enter the Y. M. C. A. Training School.

Bicycle Riding Taught.

The Crescent Cycle Academy, under the management of Joseph L. Wiseman, the plans for which were exclusively told in The Daily Press, will open on or about October 1st in the Crescent Rink as a bicycle academy. The academy will be furnished with all the modern apparatus, and instruction will be given from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m., on all days except Sunday.

BAD RUNAWAY THIS NOON.

A SCOTCH PLAINS PARTY SCATTERED INTO FRONT STREET.

The Horse Became Frightened, Bolted and Threw the Occupants in Different Directions, Badly Injuring Them—Details.

A surrey with both right wheels dished and a general assortment of things strewn across East Front street was all there was to show for an exciting runaway and smashup at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street, this afternoon at about quarter to one.

George Stone had driven Mrs. Sowden and Miss Beech, who are spending the summer at Fanwood, down town to do some shopping. They went in the two seated surrey, drawn by a spirited grey horse, which belongs to the house at which they are boarding. They had turned into Watchung avenue when the horse threw her tail over the left line.

Stone tried to release the line and kept saying "whoa," but the horse became frightened and started to run. The wheels grazed the curb on the left hand side of Watchung avenue and then the horse plunged to the right into Front street to Scotch Plains. The curve had just been rounded safely when the frightened animal gave another spring to the right and sent the driver flying through the air to strike on his head on the sidewalk. The surrey went over on its left side and both women thrown out. John Arnold caught the horse then and prevented further damage. Mrs. Bowden's dress was caught in some manner in the carriage but otherwise she was free. Her companion was imprisoned inside the upset vehicle and received the worst injuries of the two.

Stone lay listless on the sidewalk and was carried into a neighboring house by Letter-carrier Bob Loughlin and another man who stood near by. Dr. Jenkins was called and the ambulance sent for. He soon recovered and sat on the piazza in a half-dazed condition. His injuries consisted of a bad cut on the head and numerous bruises; he also bled at the ears from the shock. Miss Beech had one wrist sprained and sundry black and blue spots on her face. Mrs. Bowden's injuries were not as great, her finger being the only injured part.

As soon as the women had been released from their unvoluntary imprisonment they were taken into a house nearby and then carried home in one of Roberts' carriages. Dr. Jenkins attended them.

The carriage had both left wheels badly dished and was placed on one side of the road. The runaway horse was brought to Roberts' stable and the ambulance sent back as its aid was not required.

A large crowd gathered as soon as the accident happened and remained around the scene of disaster for some time.

A Sunstroke This Morning.

An Italian employed by Wm. D. Johnston, the mason, was overcome by the heat this morning while digging a drainhole in the yard of James A. Baker at Scotch Plains. The Italian, whose name is Dominick, started to go to the pump in front of Emery's Hotel for a drink. When he had gone about half the distance he was seen to stagger and fall by Edward Johnston, who was working with him. Johnston started and ran to his assistance and with the help of others he was carried in the shade and the usual remedies applied, but it was some time before he was able to go to his home on Front street.

Off to Boynton Beach.

The men in the employ of J. H. Tier & Sons, ice dealers, went to Boynton Beach to day in Captain Hand's stage to enjoy their andual outing which is always given by this popular firm. They took lots of good things along to eat and they no doubt will have a glorious time.

Made Good and Was Let Go.

Wm. Cockran, of the borough, obtained $1 from a man named Hall under false pretenses a short time ago. Last night Cockran was arrested and taken before Justice Crosley. Upon the promise of the man to make it good sentence was suspended.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

VALKYRIE QUITS

A Pilot Boat Gets in the Way and She Flukes.

THE DEFENDER SAILS ON.

A Brisk Wind Was Blowing—Immense Number of Steamboats Carrying Excursions Around the Starting Point.

The Defender finished the sail of the course at 4:01.

Under the rules of the Yacht Club the cup will be held by the Defender unless Lord Dunraven agrees to sail the race of Tuesday over again.

Sandy Hook, September 12—The third international yacht race for the America's Cup started this morning and resulted in a fluke by the Valkyrie withdrawing.

An 18-knot westerly wind prevailed this morning. There was every indication that the wind would shift to the south after noon. The day was by no means an ideal one for yachting.

It was a typical September day. The air was hot and oppressive. A hazy fog overhung the water, making it well nigh impossible to distinguish an object five miles away without the aid of powerful glasses.

The Valkyrie did not deign to take any preliminary practice. She drifted aimlessly around the Sandy Hook Lightship. The breeze was not strong enough to help the Defender's crew to any idea as to how strong or good the new topmast was.

To the spectators on the cable-boat anchored close to the start and to those on shore it looked as though it was Lord Dunraven's intention to make a start, so that a race would be declared whether he finished or not. From the canvas Valkyrie carried, it was plain that she had no intention of going on when she crossed the line.

The starting gun was fired at 11:20. Defender was almost on the line, and she went over twenty-four seconds after gun-fire. The official time of the start was as follows:

	H.	M.	S.
Defender	11	20	24
Valkyrie	11	21	59

Defender broke out her spinnaker and balloon jib topsail as she went, while the challenger, still under short canvas, went on a few yards and then turned back in the wind and headed towards the Hook.

As usual, the fleet of excursion boats, tugs and every imaginable craft, were there bearing a crowd of yachting enthusiasts anxious to see the yachts sail their third race. At first they hung back and gave the yachts something of a chance, but when the white wings to the big racers crossed the line, the desire to have a good view prevailed and a vast number of crafts steamed around. The pilot boat, Fannie Williams, more brazing than the rest, shot directly in the path of Dunraven's yacht and the next instant up went the signal that something was wrong from the Valkyrie.

She raised the New York Yacht Club pennant to her peak and made a signal to the judge's boat which was regarded as meaning that she gave up the race. That she had done so was evident, as a few minutes later she lowered her sails one after the other and took a tow towards Sandy Hook.

The judges boat recognized the flag salute of the valkyrie, but meanwhile the broad sails of the American cup defender had caught the brisk breeze and she was speeding down the Jersey coast in a wind blowing eighteen miles an hour.

The judges' boat started in pursuit to notify her, but as might as well have chased the wind, for the wind that was blowing carried the Defender away from the judges' boat as easily as from the English yacht.

At two o'clock the Defender was sailing before the wind and had almost reached the turning buoy. The judge's boat was in the rear unable to keep up with the American yacht.

WARM WEATHER DIDN'T INTERFERE.

St. Joseph's People Danced and Enjoyed themselves at Saengerbund Hall.

Ice-cream and lemonade were a great success last evening at the festival of the St. Joseph's R. C. church held in Saengerbund Hall, on Somerset street, even if it was rather warm to dance. Those that went, however, didn't mind a little warm weather, but enjoyed the dancing and then the refreshments. The attendance was fairly good, but a much larger crowd is expected tonight. The music, furnished by Professor O'Reilley, was enjoyed by all. The ice-cream booth, at one corner of the hall, was very prettily arranged and the frozen cream was distributed to the purchasers by Mrs. D. T. Kenney and Mrs. Andrew L. Carney. In another corner lemonade was served from a tastefully decorated booth by Mrs. James Harper, Mrs. Alfred Wilkins, Mrs. James E. Bailey and Miss McCaffrey.

The tickets were sold at the door by Thomas Neeley, while James Nolan guarded the entrance and allowed none to enter without showing their ticket. The floor was under the charge of Fred Huff, Garret Powers and William Kiely, who performed their duties in a most satisfactory manner.

The entire festival was under the care of a committee of arrangements consisting of R. H. McCullough, R. A. Boyce and D. T. Kenney, to whose energetic efforts the complete success of the festival is due.

The festival will be continued this evening and a very large attendance is expected.

The Tournament Begun.

The bowling tournament of the Crescent Wheelmen began last evening and one match was bowled between Vincent W. Nash and Herbert Schutt. Nash defeated Schutt 160 pins to 133. There was a number of practice games bowled and several high scores made. The tournament will be continued tonight.

Primary Sunday-School Teachers.

A meeting of primary Sunday-school teachers will be held in the Y. M. C. A. building tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock for the purpose of discussing the question of forming a primary teachers union to systematically study primary methods of teaching children. Every primary teacher in the city is urged to be present.

The Last of the Summer Dances.

The last of the series of three subscription dances, to be held in the Casino this summer will take place on Monday evening in the Casino. A special feature of the dance will be that Elliot, of New York, who supplies the music for the principal dances there, will furnish the music on this occasion.

The Boston Convention Illustrated.

A stereopticon lecture on the Boston Convention will be given in the Park Avenue Baptist church this evening. Admission is free, but a collection will be taken. Invitations have been sent to the Christian Endeavor societies of Plainfield and vicinity, and it is hoped that the attendance will be large.

According to number of local messages sent and joint use of line; full long distance equipment. Private lines and speaking tube systems installed at reasonable rates. Address, The New York & New Jersey Telephone Co., 175 North ave., Plainfield.

The Makeup of the Team.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will cross bats with the Scotch Plains team on Saturday afternoon at 3:30 on the Olympia diamond at Scotch Plains. The following is the personnel of the team:

Cory, Townley, Symons, McKelvey, Schoonmaker, Bolsterli, Freeman, McLaughlin, Burt, Schenck.

Did Up Out of Town Cracks.

There was an exciting match of tennis played on the courts of Henry V. Ryder, of East Front street, yesterday afternoon, when H. V. Ryder and T. U. Smith, defeated J. Hazelwood Craig, champion of Dunellen, and Mr. McArthur, a crack from Passaic. The score was 6-4, 6 1, 6-2.

State Convention of Odd Ladies.

The Odd Ladies of New Jersey will hold their annual convention at Atlantic City next week. Mrs. P. A. VanFleet, of East Third street, will represent Rebekah Lodge, of this city.

Call and Get One.

The "Plainfield '96" song has been printed in a neat form by The Daily Press, and will be given free to any who will call at the business office and ask for one.

SHAKE-UP IN THE CRESCENTS

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WHEELMEN A LIVELY ONE.

Members Who Want the Executive Committee Sessions Public—By-laws to Be Revised by a Special Committee.

There was a general shaking-up at the annual meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen last evening that bids fair to change the entire aspect of the club. For some time there has been a number of members who have objected to the action of the executive board in keeping all their actions secret. Last evening, when the meeting began, it was proposed that the election of officers take place at once. A. M. Franklin arose and made a speech that brought down the house. The reports were not entirely ready and it was decided that they should be made at a special meeting to be held next Wednesday evening.

A number of remarks were made, and it seemed to be the general opinion that an entire change should be made. The present bylaws, which keep the actions of the executive board so secret, came under the general criticism, and a committee, consisting of Alexander M. Franklin, Vincent W. Nash and Samuel P. T. Wilbur, was appointed to revise them and report at next Wednesday evening's meeting. The election of captain next took place, and Charles C. Lister was chosen to fill that position.

Then followed the election of the executive board which resulted as follows:

H. C. Coward, Samuel P. T. Wilbur, Vincent W. Nash, Louis G. Timpson, J. F. Buckle, Fred J. Pope, J. W. VanSickle, W. J. Stephenson, Clarence E. Teel, Alexander M. Franklin and Charles M. Runyon.

The board meets tomorrow night to elect officers and decide upon the winter campaign. The new board intends to hustle affairs right along and to have no privacy in anything they do.

Captain Lister will appoint his lieutenants and other assistants after tomorrow's meeting. He has already decided to call a run for next week, probably on Thursday.

A Mind Picture of All Others.

A Republican member of the City Council in speaking of Plainfield's two daily papers, said that he formerly read the News altogether and never looked at The Daily Press, but on examination found that The Daily Press contained more news, covered the town better, and best of all it was most accurate. The Daily Press is always glad to receive such unsolicited compliments, but the words of the Councilman seem to be the public's sentiment.

Counsel Engaged.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders Tuesday decided to engage the services of Lawyer R. V. Lindabury as associate counsel in the mandamus proceedings in the stone-road matter. Freeholder Perry and Director Staats were chosen a committee to attend the hearing. The salary of the County Physician was fixed at $50 per annum, he to furnish medicines and attend to patients in jail, and to be paid regular coroner's fees for other services.

Codding Continues to Hustle.

Ex-Assemblyman Codding, of Westfield, was in this city yesterday and talked over the political situation with a number of local G. O. P. statesmen. The ex-Assemblyman is hustling in the interests of Foster Voorhees, but he about realizes that it is a hopeless hustle.

A Train of Empties Wrecked.

An axle broke on a westbound coal train at South Branch last evening at about eleven o'clock, and eight empty cars were wrecked, blocking both tracks for six hours and delaying all trains that passed through there. No one was injured.

An Address On Tarsus.

A special missionary meeting will be held by the Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational church, Sunday evening, S. M. Mileonyan now studying for the ministry at Princeton, will speak on his native land, Tarsus, Asia.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

GOOD CYCLING RACING

Several Records Broken at Springfield, Mass.

Porter Wins the Five-Mile Handicap in 11:34 2-5 Breaking the Professional Record—Eddie Bald Proves Himself a Wonder—Newton Makes a Good Showing.

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 12.—Fully 8,000 people were present at the first day of the actual racing of the Springfield Bicycle tournament. The card was a varied one, with two events for the professionals. The greatest interest of the day centered in the latter class, and some record breaking riding was realized. Porter, of Waltham, scratch man (as neither Sanger nor Tyler started in the event), was the winner of the five-mile handicap in the remarkable time of 11.34 2-5, breaking the professional record for that distance by 16 seconds. Eddie Bald proved himself the fastest rider in the country and capable of giving distance to any rider in any of the classes. In the one-mile open it was believed Bald, Cabanne and Gardiner would make a close and exciting race. The pacing for the event was done on a tandem, and Gardiner, after a lively spurt with Bald for the lead, captured it, the latter riding in second place for the first three-quarters. He then proceeded to prove false the general idea that the man who catches the pace will always win the race, for with a burst of speed he shot like a rocket to the front, and finished sitting up, three lengths away from Cooper and Cabanne, who had both passed Gardiner in the stretch. The reason given for Gardiner's poor showing was that this is practically the first race he has ridden in since his fall at South Bend, Ind., where Ziegler broke his arm after running over him.

Two World's Records Broken.

Of the class A men, C. R. Newton of Stafford Springs, Conn., showed himself easily the superior of any riders in that division. He started in three events and won all of them, and in two broke world' records. In the mile open, class A, W. S. Reynolds of Hyde Park, caught the tandem which was pacing, and succeeded during the race in breaking the record for the half and three-quarters, but Newton passed him in the stretch and won in 2:04 4-5. In the half-mile open Newton lowered Reynolds' mark for the half one-fifth second, bringing it down to 1:02 3-5. In the record trials which followed the regular racing card, Coburn and Landry, two local riders, succeeded in equaling the world's record for the tandem half-mile of 0:55 1-5.

AGAINST CAPTAIN SUMNER.

Indications That He Will Be Punished for Injuries to the Columbia.

Washington, Sept. 12.—Secretary Herbert announced last evening that Capt. J. Sands had been assigned to the command of the cruiser Columbia, relieving Capt. George W. Sumner, recently tried by court martial. While the findings of the court martial in Capt. Sumner's case have not been made public, the fact that he has been detached shows that the verdict was unfavorable to him. In will probably be some time before Capt. Sumner's fate is made known, as the case will go to the president.

GERMANY'S PLAY WAR.

The Northern Army Routed by Forces Led by the Kaiser.

Stettin, Sept. 12.—The southern army, commanded by the kaiser in person, made an attack yesterday upon the northern army, which is trying to force the southern army toward the Oder. The southern army succeeded in dislodging the northern army from its positions at Hohenholz and Pritzlow after five hours' fighting. The northern army was driven beyond the railway upon Smagerow.

COKE STRIKE THREATENED.

Indications That the Movement Is Rapidly Gaining a Foothold.

Uniontown, Pa., Sept. 12.—The coke workers held numerous meetings Tuesday, and reports received thus far indicate that the strike movement is rapidly gaining a foothold throughout the region. The fact that the new Atlas company has granted the demand for the 11 per cent. advance convinces the cokers that the other companies can also pay the increase.

OFFICER ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

His Revolver Exploded While He Was Changing His Clothing.

New York, Sept. 12.—Policeman Sullivan of the sixth precinct accidentally shot and killed himself last evening at his home on East Sixthtieth street. While changing his clothes his revolver exploded, the ball entering his forehead.

PLOT AGAINST FERDINAND.

Twenty Persons Arrested in Bulgaria on a Charge of Complicity.

Bucharest, Sept. 12.—A plot against the life of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria has been discovered at Rustchuk. Twenty persons have been arrested upon the charge of complicity.

Princeton's Football Team.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 12.—The first day's practise of the football men was commenced yesterday. The men were put through light practise, consisting of passing, punting and fallig on the ball. The names of the men are Lea, Reiter, Bannard, Poe, Cochran, Smith, Rhodes, Kelly, Andrus, Beymer, Reynolds, Armstrong, Townsend and Tucker.

De Sota Placed Under Bond.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 12.—Ralph De Sota, cigar dealer of this city and Philadelphia, was put under $300 bail yesterday for the alleged part he played in the Cuban expedition. He is bondsman for ten of the alleged filibusters arrested on August 30.

Warmest Day of the Season.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The thermometer registered ninety-two degrees in the shade here yesterday afternoon. It was the warmest day of the season.

Fell Dead While His Barn Burned.

Corning, N. Y., Sept. 12.—At Smithport George Stickles, aged 70, fell dead while at work removing his property from his burning barn.

EXCISE VIOLATORS PUNISHED.

Heavy Sentences Imposed by Justice Jerome at New York.

New York, Sept. 12.—Justice Jerome kept his word in dealing with excise violations yesterday and all who came before him were given severe sentences. Alexander Henderson was sentenced to fifteen days in city prison and fined $200 for selling beer to a minor. Michael Smith, a restaurant keeper, was fined $100 for selling beer at meals on Sunday. Dora Blackstone was fined $200 and sentenced to fifteen days in city prison for selling adulterated milk. The imprisonment part of the sentence was remitted on account of her infant. Mary O'Hearn, a widow with one small girl, was sentenced to three months in the penitentiary and fined $300 for selling a glass of whiskey on Sunday. Her bartender is now serving a sentence for excise violation.

ACCUSED OF FRAUD.

First Charge Against a New York Exchange Member in Years.

New York, Sept. 12.—Charges will be served on a member of the New York Stock Exchange, probably to-day, for fraud. This is the first time in thirteen years since the Hutchinson episode that any member of the board has been accused of flagrant fraud. When it is considered that the membership of the board numbers eleven hundred and that thousands of millions securities change hands annually, the record is not a bad one. Owing to the high character of the member accused his name is withheld, but when the matter is made public there is little doubt that the developments will prove a surprise to Wall street. The governing committee meet on September 25. The penalty for the offense is expulsion.

WILSON'S TROUBLE INCREASES.

Must Give Bonds for the Support of His Wife or Remain in Jail.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 12.—John K. Wilson, the theological student from Auburn seminary, who married Elizabeth Nagle in Syracuse, June 1, under peculiar circumstances and afterwards posed as a single man while filling a pulpit at Brownsville, this county, has been ordered to give bonds for the support of his wife or remain in jail. He is now in jail awaiting examination on the charge of abandonment. He failed to produce proof of the charges he made against his wife and the fight he made only brought out damaging testimony against him, among which were letters to his wife containing oaths and abuses.

ROOSEVELT TALKS AT BUFFALO

His Entire Address a Reply to Senator Hill's Recent Criticisms.

Buffalo, Sept. 12.—Police commissioner Theodore Roosevelt of New York delivered an address before a mass-meeting held at Music hall last night under the auspices of the Catholic Abstinence union. He gave his whole attention to Senator Hill's recent criticisms of his method of enforcing the Sunday closing laws in New York, treating the senator with vigorous terms.

NEWS FROM THE WINDWARD.

The Jackson-Harmworth Polar Expedition at Varde, Norway.

London, Sept. 12.—Word has been received here that the yacht Windward, carrying the Jackson-Harmworth polar expedition, which sailed from the Thames on July 11, 1894, has arrived at Varde, on the north coast of Norway, in latitude 18 degrees north and longitude 32 degrees east, after having broken out of an ice belt between Franz Josef Land and Barents sea.

BIG BATTLE IN CUBA.

Spaniards Repulsed, Leaving Over Fifty Dead on the Field.

Key West, Fla., Sept. 12.—Passengers arriving by the steamship Mascotte last night report that a big battle has been fought near Camaguey between the insurgents under Maximo Gomez and the Spaniards under Gen. Melo. The battle is said to have lasted 48 hours and the Spaniards were repulsed with heavy loss, leaving over fifty killed and wounded on the field.

BURIED BY AN AVALANCHE.

Six Persons and 300 Head of Cattle Killed in Switzerland.

Berne, Sept. 12.—An avalanche from the Altels glacier has fallen upon the hamlet of Spitalmatte. About two square miles of land has been covered. It is feared that six persons and 300 head of cattle have perished.

HOHENLOHE IN RUSSIA.

The German Chancellor Granted an Audience with the Czar.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 12.—The czar to-day gave a lengthy audience to Prince von Hohenlohe, the German chancellor, who afterwards had an audience with the czarina.

More Delay for Cuban Suspects.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 12.—The session of the United States court yesterday was very brief and an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, September 18. The Cuban suspects will have to wait another week while awaiting the action of the grand jury.

Amsterdam Senatorial Deadlock.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Sept. 12.—Up to the time of adjournment last evening 364 votes had been taken in the deadlocked republican senatorial convention of the Twenty-seventh district. The convention will meet again to-day.

THE BLUE AND GRAY

Grand Parade of Conquerors and Conquered.

Yesterday a Memorable Day in the Annals of the G. A. R.—Stars and Stripes with an Emblem of Peace Carried by ex-Confederates at the Head of the Procession.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 12.—Fifty thousand ex-soldiers of the union army marched through the streets of this southern city yesterday afternoon. Before them, at the advance of the column were two Kentuckians who enlisted in the confederate service at the outset of the hostilities and fought to the last ditch. One bore aloft the stars and stripes, the other a silken banner of white having in its centre a golden dove and in its mouth an olive branch. This was typified "The emblem of peace," the reunion after thirty years of the victors and vanquished. Three hundred thousand people lined the streets and windows and house tops and gave the marching hosts a reception that will be memorable in Grand Army annals, and remembrances of which will be carried by every participant to his last hour. In these great throngs of spectators were tens of thousands of those who fought on the other side, that even today speak with pride of the fact that they rallied under the stars and bars and wore the gray that was so dear to southern hearts. These were the loudest in their plaudits and the most vociferous in joining in the chorus when the strains of "Rally Round the Flag" and other war songs filled the air, and proudly the unarmed army received the plaudits of their one-time foemen.

Like a Home Coming.

Full of sentiment and pathos also were the demonstrations of the women folks when a maimed or crippled veteran came hobbling along. For fully a mile in the aristocratic residence district, lawns and gardens were filled with the fairest buds of a state of beautiful women, their costumes of white adorned with tri-colored sashes of miniature American flags. These admirers, not content with waving of handkerchiefs and similar modes of feminine greeting, showered flowers on the heads of the aged and crippled soldiers as they passed along. From start to finish it was more like the home coming and passage of a victorious army fresh from the battle field, than a reunion of conquered and conquerers three decades later.

A Monster Parade.

The parade was four hours and a quarter in passing the reviewing stand. It moved like clock work and was remarkably free from tedious outbreaks. Despite the intense heat, the large majority of the paraders went over the entire route of two and a half miles, although many were compelled to drop out early in the march. There were numerous cases of heat prostration, which were promptly treated by the emergency corps.

Six Salute-Firers Killed.

The terrible accident of the morning, the explosion of a caisson which resulted in the death of six men of the First Kentucky artillery, somewhat marred the pleasures of the day. The accident occurred on Broadway between Third and Fourth streets when the First Kentucky artillery were going to Phoenix hill for the purpose of firing the morning salute. There were sixty pounds of powder in the caisson. Eyewitnesses of the shocking accident say that the explosion was probably caused by the dropping of a primer on the cap of a cartridge. The bodies of two men were blown over the housetops and were horribly mangled. Two horses attached to the cannon were so badly mangled that they had to be killed. All the killed were members of battery A, First Kentucky artillery of Louisville, considered the finest military organization in the state. Their names are: Albert Robinson, corporal; Charles Oestrich, Charles Woods, McBride Hutchins and Howard Irwin, privates; William Adams (colored), driver.

THE BURNETTS SEPARATE.

TO-DAY MAY END IT

If the Valkyrie Does Not Win the Cup Remains.

The Regatta Committee Compelled To Give Tuesday's Race to Defender—Both Mr. Iselin and Lord Dunraven Would Not Agree To Calling It No Race.

New York, Sept. 12.—Unless Lord Dunraven and Mr. Iselin agree between themselves to declare the race of Tuesday "no race" to-day's race will settle the present contest for the America's Cup for this year—that is, of course, provided Defender wins the race. The regatta committee brought forward strong efforts to bring about a mutual agreement to recall the race, but Lord Dunraven and Mr. Iselin insisted upon judgment on the protest. This left the committee only two things to do—to decide that Valkyrie fouled Defender, or that Defender fouled Valkyrie. As the occurrence was directly under their eyes and was also witnessed by thousands of spectators there was only one decision possible; and that was to give the race to Defender. Everyone conversant with the sailing of yachts and rules of the road at sea agree that the British yacht was at fault.

Claimed Their Boat Was Crowded.

Lord Dunraven and his friends held, however, that his boat was crowded by Defender and that the accident was unavoidable. The committee gave each side ample opportunity to state their case and took the testimony of the captains of each yacht and of others who were on board. All the interested parties were at the yacht club house until late in the afternoon and it was 4:30 p. m. when the decision was announced. Lord Dunraven accepts the decision and announced that he would have Valkyrie at the line to-day for the third of the international races.

Demands a Clear Course.

Lord Dunraven left the club house after the hearing. He declined to talk. Messrs. Kearsey, Glennie and Ratsey of the English contingent were equally reticent. After the long session of the regatta committee was ended Mr. Irving Grinnell, one of the members of the committee, was asked if there was any question that Lord Dunraven would race again in view of the published report that he would not do so if the decision should be averse to the Valkyrie. "No," replied Mr. Grinnell, "he accepted the decision as any true sportsman would. He did say, however, that he would not race unless the course was kept clear of excursion boats. Some of these boats behaved very badly on Tuesday and Lord Dunraven was very emphatic in his protest against them."

Repairs to the Boats.

Both Defender and Valkyrie were dry-docked at Erie basin yesterday to fit them for to-day's race. The Defender went to the dock to repair the injuries received at the start of Tuesday's race, and the Valkyrie went in for another coat of pot lead on her botton. It was the first time that both have been out of water together, and there was a big crowd of people compairing their lines all day. The Defender's cracked topmast and starboard spreader were taken down. The horn of the spreader was broken entirely off, while the topmast had a split in it about one-third of the distance up from the the mainmast head. It seems to be an outside break. All repairs were completed before sundown. The Defender's water-line was not remeasured, but the Valkyrie's was. Eighteen pigs of lead, weighing about one and one-quarter tons were removed from her hold, and she now sets higher on the water.

Dunraven Gives Up Hope.

Lord Dunraven was seen early this morning just as he was taking a tug for the Horseshoe to board the Valkyrie. He said: "I shall sail this race to-day as a sportsman, because I have no occasion to do otherwise. I believe in the honesty and ability of the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club. I believe that no effort has been made to influence their decision. I believe them to be gentlemen and yachtsmen, and, while I do not care to say anything about the Valkyrie, I yet think that Mr. Watson has fulfilled his engagement to build me a good boat. I do not expect that Mr. Iselin will offer a chance for a resail or anything of the sort. While it is very certain that the America's Cup is lost by reason of the Valkyrie's racing showing, it is not so certain that some time the cup may not be carried across the Atlantic."

Says Defender Will Refuse It.

When it was announced last night to Capt. Haff that the regatta committee had decided in favor of the Defender, he exclaimed: "That's right. And now Defender will refuse to take the race on foul, and will offer to sail it over again."

BRITISH PRESS COMMENTS.

English Views on the Decision of the Cup Committee.

Glasgow, Sept. 12.—Tht Mail says today regarding the decision of the America's Cup committee to give Tuesday's race to the Defender: "The decision of the committee is sure to be challenged in this country. It is certain that all Americans who have the true interests of sport at heart will receive the verdict with dismay. Had the committee declared the race void on account of a technical breach few persons would be disposed to cavil, but surely they have overstepped the bounds of fair play in awarding the race to the Defender. This seriously hadicaps the British yacht and robs future races of all interest as international contests.

Poor Reciprocity.

The Daily News says: The committee has not only taken Tuesday's supposed victory from the British yacht, but has given it to the American. This seems to be rather sharp practice. It may be the rigor of racing law, but it is hardly sport. If the umpire had done his duty he would have recalled the yachts and had a fresh start. The committee's severe award makes poor reciprocity for the generous treatment of the Cornell crew at Henley.

Defender the Better Boat.

The Chronicle says: We confess we see no reason in the decision of the committee awarding the race to the Defender. The foul occurred before the starting gun was fired and before the line was crossed. The Defender might have backed out, but she elected to race. Had the Valkyrie wilfully fouled the Defender during the race, the penalty could not have been greater. The committee's explanation does not improve matters. We should not be surprised if Lord Dunraven declares the rest of the races off and refuses to compete again, but if he consents to continue, as we hope he will, Thursday's race will probably settle the matter, as there is not much doubt now that the Defender is the faster yacht.

JAMES ASHBURY DEAD.

The First Challenger for the Cup Dunraven Is Now Trying For.

London, Sept. 12.—James Ashbury, who took the yachts Cambria and Livonia to America in 1870 and 1871 respectively to compete for the America's Cup, is dead.

Beaten by 39 Minutes.

New York, Sept. 12.—Mr. Ashbury was the first challenger for the Queen's Cup brought to this country by the schooner America. His first attempt was made with the schooner Cambria, which in a race across the ocean beat the Dauntless by a few hours. He had to meet the entire schooner fleet of the New York Yacht Club, the conditions being the same as those governing the Queen's Cup contest. The race was sailed on August 8, 1870, and according to a contemporaneous report the public interest was such that "Wall and Broad streets deserted for the day and the courts and public offices had but few attendants." Among the twenty-two competitors Cambria finished tenth. Magic, the winner, leading her by thirty-nine minutes. America, altered since her great victory in England twenty years before, was thirteen minutes ahead of Cambria.

Second Effort Also Failed.

Mr. Ashbury challenged again next year with the schooner Livonia, and claimed the privilege of a race for each of the twelve clubs he represented. Correspondence rather acrimonious on his side followed, which resulted in an agreement to give him five races, the committee to choose the defender on the day of each race from four schooners previously selected. Livonia was beaten easily, twice by Columbia and twice by Sappho. She won one race owing to the loss of Columbia's jib, which resulted in the breaking of her steering-gear. He claimed another, in which Columbia led 4 1-2 minutes in a half-gale on the ground that she rounded the outer mark on the wrong hand. The committee decided against him.

$3,000,000 DEPOSITED.

Bond Syndicate Places Gold in the New York Sub-Treasury.

New York, Sept. 12.—The managers of the government bond syndicate late yesterday afternoon deposited $3,000,000 in gold in the sub-treasury. W. H. Crossman & Brother will to-day export $1,000,000 gold withdrawn from the sub-treasury yesterday. Nesslage & Fuller will export $100,000 gold also withdrawn yesterday. There was a further demand at the sub-treasury yesterday for small currency bills and silver dollars for distribution at southern points for use in moving crops. Small bills amounting to $25,000 were ordered to be paid out at the New Orleans sub-treasury. Orders were received for $10,000 in silver dollars to be distributed to points in Alabama and Texas.

VISITING FRENCH FIREMEN.

Exhibitions Given by the New York Department for Their Benefit.

New York, Sept. 12.—Yesterday afternoon the visiting representatives of the Paris fire department, including Col. Varigault, the chief, and his aides, Capt. L. Cordier and Major A. Krebbs, under escort of the French consul-general, Edouard Bruvaert, visited the headquarters of the New York fire department. Exhibitions were given by members of the different divisions of the department, and the visitors were highly pleased with what they saw. The purpose of the French officers' visit is to get points of value to incorporate in a reorganized fire service for the city of Paris.

GORE CAUGHT IN FRANCE.

He Robbed a New York Paper of $10,000.

New York, Sept. 12.—The district-attorney's office has been informed by the state department at Washington that Charles Gore had been arrested in Paris, France. Gore on July 15 went to the Chemical bank and drew $10,000 for the weekly payroll of the New York Herald, by which he was employed. After getting the money he disappeared. The next heard of him was his arrest by the police of Paris. Requisition papers will be made out and an officer sent to France for the absconder.

GREAT RAILWAY SPEED

Race Against Time from New York to Buffalo.

One Hundred and Thirty-Six and One-half Miles Traversed in 6 Hours and 47 Minutes—Average Rate, 64 1-8 Miles an Hour—Some Great Spurts of Speed.

Buffalo, Sept. 12.—The special train which left the Grand Central station in New York yesterday at 5:40:30 a. m. in endeavor to establish a new world's record for long distance speed was successful, knocking nearly three-quarters of an hour from the latest much vaunted English record of 450 miles from Euston to Perth in 7 hours and 45 minutes. The official time of the run was: Left Grand Central station, New York, 5:40:30 a. m. Arrived at East Buffalo station 12:34:57 p. m. Elapsed time, 6 hours, 54 minutes, 27 seconds. The actual distance traversed was 436 1-2 miles, and the actual running time (exclusive of stops to change engines) six hours and forty-seven minutes. This makes the average rate of traveling sixty-four and one-third miles an hour. The English record was 63 1-4 miles an hour. The English train was much lighter, being only 106 tons, while the weight of the Central flyer was 175 tons. Nearly the whole distance the train ran into the teeth of a heavy wind.

The Fast Spurts.

Some of the fastest spurts were made as follows: From Poughkeepsie to Albany, 70 miles, in 62 1-2 minutes. Stopped at Albany, changing engines in 1 minute and 35 seconds. Left Albany at 7:56:45 a. m. Arrived at Syracuse at 10:17:10, a distance of 148 miles in 140 minutes and 35 seconds. Stopped at Syracuse, changing engines in 2 minutes and 25 seconds. Left Syracuse at 10:19:35. Arrived at East Buffalo at 12:34:57 p. m., a distance of 145 1-2 miles, in 135 minutes and 22 seconds. Some delay was caused between New York and Spuyten Duyvil by repairs on a bridge and about eight minutes were lost there. The time of running through the East Buffalo yards was also necessarily slow. Charles Hogan, the pilot of engine 903, was surrounded by a crowd eager to congratulate him on the run from Syracuse, 148 miles in 141 minutes. Hogan said he could have done ten minutes better, but for a heavy wind which he encountered in the run from Batavia. As it was, he made the last thirty miles in twenty-four minutes, averaging forty-eight seconds to the mile. Several miles, however, were run much faster than that average.

PENNSYLVANIA DEMOCRATS.

Their State Ticket Made Up at Williamsport Yesterday.

Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 12.—It was nearly 9 o'clock last night when the democratic state convention completed its labors in the Lycoming Opera house and adjourned. John M. Garman was permanent chairman. The following candidates were nominated: State treasurer, ex-congressman Benjamin F. Meyers of Harrisburg, by acclamation; judges of the superior court, Harmon Yerkes of Bucks county; J. S. Moorehead of Westmoreland; C. H. Noyes of Warren; P. P. Smith of Lackawanna; Oliver P. Bechtel of Schuylkill and Christopher Magee of Allegheny. The platform adopted was one of condemnation of republican precepts and of confidence in the democray of Jefferson and in President Cleveland.

HOLMES AGAIN INDICTED.

Indianapolis Charges Him with Murder in the First Degree.

Indianapolis, Sept. 12.—Coroner Castor announced to-day in his verdict in the inquest of the remains of Howard Peitzel that the child came to his death at the hands of H. H. Holmes. His findings were immediately filed. The Marion county grand jury also found an indictment agaiust Holmes for murder in the first degree and should he escape trial in Philadelpha he will be brought here for trial, as the chain of evidence is much stronger.

There was not a public library in the United States a century ago.

And still the murder cases pile up in Union county, but let us congratulate ourselves; they are all out of Plainfield. That is something to our credit.

The New woman will not fine a man for splitting wood on Sunday, as they do in New Jersey. She will be only too glad to find a man to do it.—Terre-Haute Express.

America can beat England on land as well as water. The New York Central yesterday ran a train from New York to Buffalo, a distance of 436¼ miles, in 407 minutes, the average speed being 64¼ miles an hour. This breaks all previous records.

The neglect of the News to publish the sewage bed ordinance within the time limit which the law said it should, thereby delaying its becoming a law, proves better than anything else the claim of the Daily Press that the News editor runs his office on sweat shop ideas.

A Jersey City man has discovered a verse in the Bible which he thinks stigmatizes the bloomer girl as an evil thing. It is Deuteronomy 22-5, which is as follows:

The woman shall not wear that which pertains to a man, neither shall a man put on a woman's garment, for all that do so are abomination unto the Lord, thy God.

This is a great year for Johns—not exactly a Johnnie year, but a good Jack year. In the Republican circles there is John W. Griggs, John Kean, John J. Toffey, John J. Gardner, and in the Democratic bailiwick we hear much about John P. Stockton. Two years or so ago the name George prevailed. There was George Werts, George Peffer, George T. Cranmer, George McGuire, George Olcott, and other Georges. This year the Johns come to the front and they are likely to be heard from.—Newark Advertiser.

By the withdrawals of gold from the Treasury for export, on Monday, the reserve was reduced a trifle below the limit, but it was understood, yesterday, that the bond syndicate would at once make a deposit which would again make the reserve intact. Since July 13th, the beginning of the gold export movement, about $21,700,000 has been sent from this country to Europe, and within that time, it is stated, the Belmont-Morgan syndicate has paid into the Treasury in excess of their bond requirement about $11,000,000 in gold.—True American.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the State that the Linden Township Committee of Union county must pay back to the Linden Blood Horse Association $5,000 which was obtained nominally for the building of a sewer, but practically as consideration for a racing license, was a righteous one. The money has probably been spent by the township, and it will be hard for it to refund. But it ought to be a lesson to public officials everywhere that honesty is the best policy. The transaction was a scandalous one, and the rebuke was necessary and wholesome.—Paterson Press.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Matilda Hortsman, of Brooklyn, is visiting friends in the borough.

Fishing On the Passaic.

Plainfield contains many enthusiastic fishermen but none greater than Samuel P. T. Wilbur. He has been telling his friends about a wonderful place in the Passaic river, where the fish were as thick as flies, the location of which was known only to several friends and himself. Yesterday Mr. Wilbur, in company with J. Hervey Doane and W. J. Stephenson, went to this celebrated place and last night they returned. Their experience had been varied. Mr. Doane and Mr. Stephenson had each caught a few but their guide had not had a bite during the entire day.

—Peter Seader has rented the house on Warren street recently occupied by Mr. Powlison and family.

—Leggett carries a great combination of powerful medicines, all of which is told in his new ad today.

—The regular Wednesnay evening prayer meeting of the Monroe Avenue chapel was conducted by the Salvation Army last evening. There was a large attendance, and the meeting lasted until 10 o'clock.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

The Funeral of the Late Father Freeman Took Place Yesterday.

One of the most impressive services ever seen in the neighborhood was held in the church of St. Francis at Metuchen yesterday, on the occasion of the funeral of Father Nicholas Freeman, late priest in charge of that church, who died Monday morning. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, assisted by sixty-four priests, took part in the ceremonies. Father Campbell, of Long Branch, who had been a firm friend of the deceased since childhood, preached the funeral sermon. Father Detrick, of New Brunswick, and Father Miller, of North Plainfield, were the chanters.

The singing was very fine, being furnished by a double quartette of priests, among whom was Father Miller, of North Plainfield.

There was a very large attendance at the funeral from all the neighboring towns. Plainfield was represented by over forty.

After the services were concluded, the remains were carried to New Brunswick and laid to rest in St. Peter's cemetery.

Those who went from Plainfield said it was the most impressive service they ever beheld.

Father Freeman was some years ago pastor of St. Joseph's church in North Plainfield.

TO SETTLE DOWN AGAIN.

Justice Mosher Acts as Peacemaker Between a Wrangling Couple.

Gilbert Thompson, the one armed bootblack on Park avenue, was arrested last night on a warrant issued by Justice Mosher charging non-support of and assault on his wife. The examination was set down for 10 o'clock this morning, but Mrs. Thompson was late, and after holding the case open for quite a time the justice discharged the colored man. Shortly after this the wife appeared, and through the efforts of the justice the couple had a conference which will probably result in amicably setling their differences, and once more living together as two hearts that beat as one. The couple parted about three months ago.

Kean Wins in New Brunswick.

The Republican primaries to elect delegates to the Gubernatorial convention were held throughout Middlesex county on Tuesday night. The result, as announced, is strongly in favor of John Kean, who will get nearly the entire vote of the Middlesex delegation. Senator Voorhees is the second choice of some of the delegates, while Griggs will probably receive five or six votes if his name comes before the convention on the first ballot. Kean, however, is the favorite with the Middlesex delegates. The county sends thirty-two delegates to the convention and from the reports received by the leaders in New Brunswick, it is estimated that twenty-five will cast their ballots for Kean.

ALL SOMERSET AT THE FAIR.

The Exhibition This Year Declared Better Than Usual.

The Somerset County fair held at Somerville, was attended yesterday by about 6,000 people, and the managers expect double that many today. Yesterday was children's day, and most of the schools in the county were closed, so the scholars supplied with free tickets could attend. The exhibits are much more elaborate than thay have been for several ye ars. The display of fruits and vegetables is magnificent. The parade of show horses yesterday morning was a striking display of horseflesh. The cattle pens are filled with valuable herds, including a World's Fair prize bull, which is exhibited by J. B. Duke, who has a stock farm near Somerville. The display ladies' fancy goods, too, is of unusual merit. Today is politician's day. The Governor was invited to be present.

In the two-mile novice bicycle race yesterday Louie Stevens of Somerville, won in 5m. 47½s., with C. W. Leonard, of South Bound Brook, second. There were eight starters from the county. Today there will be a two-mile open race. In the three-minute trotting Alpa, J. F. Gibson, New York, won in three straight heats. Captain, Belle Meade Stock Farm, was second. Ambulator, of the Belle Meade Stock Farm, won the 2.21 pacing event; John Sprague, J. V. D. Beeklan, Hightstown, second.

The 2.34 trotting class was marred by an accident, which resulted fatally for Jefferson, owned by M. Darcy, of Hartford, Conn. The horse fell and broke his ankle. The race was won by May K., Jacob Klotz, Somerville, in three straight heats. Little Dick, Richard Carr, Keansbury, was second.

Dunellen.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who have been visiting Mrs. Dunham, have returned to Flemington.

Mrs. C. Coriell is the possessor of a new horse.

Mrs. Messeler, who has been ill, is slowly recovering under Dr. Nelson's care.

Joel Giddis is ill with chills and fever. Dr. Brakeley is in attendance.

Mr. Ward and family, who have been occupying the house owned by G. Churchill, have returned to Brooklyn.

Mrs. E. Teel, who has been entertaining her mother from Easton, has returned home.

Miss Minnie Shotwell has returned home after spending a few days with her cousin, Mrs. Howard Giles.

Miss Meyers, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Brokaw, has returned to Waterbury.

Master John VanMiddlesworth, of Liberty street, Plainfield, spent Tuesday with relatives on Front street.

Mrs. John Huff has returned home after visiting relatives at Oyster Bay.

Mr. Gise has about finished putting a new ceiling in the house occupied by W. H. Cole. When finished Mr. Bodine will put in a furnace.

Mr. Lewis will move into the house on Dunellen avenue, formerly occupied by Peter Huff, the last of this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nelson and a few friends attended the Somerville Fair on Tuesday.

Clarence Marlue has accepted a position as clerk in T. H. Gise's hardware store.

Mrs. T. J. Jones, accompanied by her niece, Miss Lewis, spent Wednesday at Brooklyn, visiting relatives.

Suing the Street Car Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Porr, of New York, whose seven-months-old child died last Saturday through the carelessness of a street car conductor in New York two weeks ago, have brought suit against the company in the New York courts. The verdict rendered at the coroner's inquest was that there was a clot on the brain which was caused by the fall and resulted in death.

—Phillip Zimmer, of Somerset street, expects to effect a settlement with the insurance company on account of the loss caused by the fire in his rooms last Friday night.

A BOLD, BAD THIEF.

"It isn't because I am tired of our flat that I want to live in the suburbs, but the doctor says we both need change," concluded Mrs. Perry Thorne, who was making her first plea for country life.

"I agree with the doctor that we need change of one sort, at least," answered her husband.

"Don't be flippant, dear. I am in dead earnest; and oh, Perry, I know of such a dear cottage, one of a row."

"I dislike rows," said Perry. "However, if you are determined to be suburbanite, and with the suburbanites stand, I may as well agree to go. I will at once take lessons on the flying trapeze, so that I may sometimes be able to catch a train. I shall study to acquire that dazed suburban stare that people who eat their breakfast and dinner by lamplight assume, assisted by catching their quota of sleep in depots after they have missed their train."

"Oh, we won't be there long enough for that," said his wife; "and, Perry, the air is just heavenly—so sustaining."

"That's good, as we shall probably be twelve miles or more from a grocery store. Have you caught your house yet, Maude?"

"Oh, yes, Mrs. Smead has one in the same row, and she told me about ours. It is the southwest corner house, while hers is the southeast. Isn't it strange, Perry, that I have never been introduced to Mr. Smead? I wouldn't believe there was any such person if I had not seen him."

"Nothing strange about it," growled Perry, in what his wife called his "bulldog" voice. "I suppose you want to know him because he has the reputation of being a lady killer."

"Perry!"

"I am told by fellows we both know that he prides himself on his beauty."

"I hate beauty men," said Maud, soothingly, "they are all vain, conceited creatures. I never would marry a handsome man."

Perry mumbled something and went away, first giving his wife permission to do as she pleased about taking the suburban house.

* * * * * *

A week later both families were settled in the row which fronted a street and a railroad track, and was equi-distant from two depots.

Mr. Smead did not take as kindly to the change as Perry Thorne did, but he told his wife, thoughtlessly, that one good feature of suburban life was having the Thornes for neighbors.

"Where have you ever met Mrs. Thorne?" asked his wife, suspiciously.

"Don't know her from Adam, my dear, but isn't she your friend, and have I not heard her praises sung ever since we were married?"

"H'm! We have a calling acquaintance, and now that we are to be neighbors I suppose you will meet. But you are so susceptible, and she is so giddy, I just know you will set people talking."

"Great Cæsar, Laura, you give your best friend a great send-off! I susceptible and she giddy? We must be made for each other!"

Mrs. Smead looked volumes at her handsome husband, but where is the man who does not enjoy being a bone of contention among his women folk, and if Smead had a special and particular virtue it was that of being good-natured.

Mrs. Smead, like the woman of history, had two treasures—her sewing machine and her husband—and she drew the line at lending either, and if people wanted to call her selfish they might. Fortified by this law, she rented the southwest cottage.

* * * * *

Saturday night! The invisible bridge spans the distance between the world of labor and the world of rest. The tranquil air gave back no murmur of the multitudinous voices that had filled it with cries of sorrow, anger or gladness during the working days of the past week. It was the ante-chamber of the Sabbath, a time so sacred to our ancestors that all work and all pleasure was suspended that the soul itself might rest.

A great throng of people was hurrying homeward, and all bore the happy burdens of Saturday night—new shoes for the feet of the little burden-bearers, a new bonnet for mother, the Sunday dinner—and among them Perry Thorne and Amos Smead, who had struck up a neighborly acquaintance and were now hastening to the same train, going out to their suburban homes for their first Sabbath of rest. They were both laden to the ears with brown paper packages and had just time to make the train, after purchasing their commutation tickets.

They went loping through the gates in approved suburban style, and caught on just as the train moved out, and then Perry shouted in a voice that sounded above the roar of escaping steam:

"We've left our Sunday dinners on the window stand of the ticket office. You go on, Smead, and I'll take the next train out."

He swung himself clear of the train, turned a somersault, and waved "all right" to Smead, who mopped the cinders and perspiration from his face and remarked to the man standing next to him, in a friendly way:

"Nice way to spend the summer, living in the suburbs."

"Yes, if you don't care what you say," growled the man.

Then Smead took a bit of pasteboard from his pocket and began to study it.

"Southeast corner, Terrace Row, Oakland."

Smead asked his gruff neighbor if he got off at that station.

"No, I don't," said the man. "You couldn't hire me to live in that swamp. I go out ten miles further, where you don't have to sift the atmosphere to keep the mosquitoes from choking you."

That sounded discouraging, but Smead was not anxious to ride ten miles further on an accommodation train, that slowed up for every cow on the track, and he wrapped himself in a speculative reverie until the brakeman called "Oakland," as if only the deaf lived at that station.

Mrs. Smead was waiting for her husband, whom she expected on the 6.30 train, but the train had come and gone, and instead of the handsome, well-groomed Mr. Smead, a frantic woman, her neighbor, Mrs. Thorne, rushed into her cottage.

"I've caught him!" she gasped. "He's locked up in the library! Oh! oh! oh!"

"Caught whom?" asked the mystified woman. Then seeing that her distracted visitor was nearly fainting, she collected restoratives and brought back Mrs. Thorne's scattered wits.

Maud explained as soon as she could speak that a desperate-looking man—a burglar, she was certain, and a convict as well, by the cut of his hair—had feloniously entered her house a moment before she came, and walking boldly into her library had been locked safely therein by herself.

"The windows are nailed down; I have been waiting for Perry to open them, so he cannot escape that way," she concluded.

"I expected Amos on the last train. I don't see what is keeping him," said Mrs. Smead, "but he has not come yet."

"Neither has Perry, but perhaps they will come together. Isn't it dreadful? I daren't go back with that man in the house. I know by his looks he is a murderer. Our girl hasn't come, and I am all alone. Oh, if Mr. Smead were only here!"

"I guess I'll do just as well," said Mrs. Smead, coldly. "I will take our revolver, and you can bring the stove-lifter, and we will interview him through the door."

"But what good will that do? He may s-h-o-o-t first!"

"Come on," said Mrs. Smead contemptuously.

She was only a young matron herself, but she was not going to be ignominiously routed by a one-man army, and she led the way to her neighbor's cottage. No other people lived in the row, so they had all the fun to themselves.

But at that identical moment the 7.40 train, sometimes called the husband's train, so many of them went out to spend the week's interval with their families, stopped at the nearest depot, and Perry Thorne, with his double load of packages, hove in sight. Both women were overjoyed to see him.

"What's the row?" he asked, dropping his bundles on the veranda.

"A man!" said both women at once.

"Where is Smead?"

"That is what I would like to know," said Mrs. Smead; "I expected him on this train."

"I haven't seen him. Who is the man?"

"A burglar, and he's locked up in the library. Don't you think I was brave?" asked Maud, who, now that her husband had come, felt that she might pose as a heroine.

"Burglars already? Ha! this is a diversion. Give me the key, Maud. I'll take your revolver, Mrs. Smead. Now, ladies, stand aside," and Perry made a valiant rush for the library door, which he unlocked and threw open, at the same time presenting arms according to the best manual practice.

"Don't shoot!" cried a familiar voice that trembled, not with fear, but merriment, as Mr. Smead stepped smilingly forward and bowed low to Maud.

"I am Mrs. Thorne's captive," he said.

"What does this mean?" cried Perry, his face flaming.

"Yes, what does it mean?" demanded Mrs. Smead, in the measured syllables of the divorce court.

"It means," explained Mr. Smead, "that my wife has not yet learned to box the compass. She gave me 'southwest,' and your wife locked me up in a room that has no ventilation, and under a criminal ban. But I forgive her," he added, with gallant protest, whereat Maud's cheeks grew red with embarrassment, and Mrs. Smead said:

"Come home! After this I will meet you at the train and see that you don't get into the wrong house."

"Do forgive me, Mr. Smead," said Maud, penitently, while Perry glared darkly like a jealous stage lover, "but you did look so—so—"

"She said you looked like a convict," remarked his wife.

"At least it has made us acquainted," observed Mr. Smead, true to his colors, and with this parting shot he followed his wife to the "southeast" cottage.—Detroit Free Press.

A Hawk's Strike at a Horse's Ears.

Hartford Mail Carrier Miller's colt, the most docile and placid animal in town, suddenly skipped away from his post at the railroad station yesterday, scaled a fence, hung the mail wagon on the rails, and scampered across lots in a panic. A big hawk had scared the beast. The hawk had been silently and slowly describing a wide circle high overhead, in the way peculiar to his kind.

The sleepy horse, far below, nodded, now and then wagging his ears at a caucus of flies on his neck. Of a sudden the hawk shot straight downward with the swiftness of a rifle shot, struck the animal squarely between the ears, and fixed its talons in those conspicuous and hapless ears. That settled things for the colt. He was used to happenings and terrors, but the hawk had fallen on him from the clouds, like a Nutmeg thunderbolt, barbed, feathered and explosive.

THREE WAR STORIES.

A Surprised Private. One Bridge Cosby Couldn't Burn. Ready to Drink.

Jeff Sterrett was a Confederate soldier who served as a private, and who is one of the two or three privates who survived the war. He was somewhat sentimental, and naturally fell in love with any good looking girl he might see. He fell in love with a young woman of Murfreesboro and slipped off to see her at every opportunity. One day his feelings so overwhelmed him that he suddenly found himself proposing marriage to her.

"No," she replied, her eyes filling, "I can never marry you."

Sterrett was surprised.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Oh, my heart is gone. It's in the grave. It was buried when they buried Capt. —— five months ago."

That was too much for Sterrett. He at once became angry.

"Very well, miss. If you can love a dead captain better than a live private you can scratch for it."

Gen. Cosby had a mania for burning down bridges. Whenever he heard there was a bridge in his neighborhood he promptly had it laid low. His continual destruction of bridges several times got himself and his men in tight places, where a bridge would have come in mighty handy, and resulted in an uneasy feeling among his men.

He moved into Virginia in the neighborhood of the Natural Bridge, and one day gave his men permission to inspect the great natural wonder. Two cavalrymen, one of a poetic turn and the other of a worldly, practical turn, happened to go there together.

"Isn't this the most stupendous, magnificent, grand view you ever saw?" exclaimed the poetic man, grandiloquently. "Gaze upon that landscape. See how beautiful are the works of nature."

He continued in this strain several minutes and finally asked the other his opinion.

"I don't know much about its bein' stupendous, nor any o' that sort o' thing, but I'm d——d glad we've found one bridge that Cosby can't burn up."

In the regiment with Gen. Duke was a soldier named Jack Skillman, who was a great hand at telling yarns. His yarns were about great acts which he said he did, but which he never performed, ignoring completely several astonishing deeds of bravery he really did and which really were more remarkable than any alleged act he told about. The scene of one of his yarns was a strip along the bank of the Tennessee River lying between Chattanooga and Knoxville. At the point mentioned the river flowed in a deep canon and appeared from above to be a thread winding about, hundreds of feet below. It was a dizzy height.

"I was a-going 'long here one day all by myself," said he, "an' when I came to this p'int I see a blamed Yankee all by hissel' a comin' toward me. I says to mysel', says I, 'It ain't no use o' your fighting here, where no one ain't lookin' and where we'd like as not fall down the cliff.'

"I told the Yankee we needn't fight.

"'Yes, we will,' says he

"I said no.

"'Our fightin' wouldn't decide the war,' says I, 'an' we mought as well be friends.'

"An' I told him to come along an' have a drink.

"The blamed Yankee kept on a-tellin' me we was a-goin' to fight, an' 'fore I knowed it he jumped onto me. Well, sah, how we did fight! We knocked each other down an' wallowed an' scratched and tore round, an' I see more stars than you can think of. Oh, we did fight.

"Pretty soon I saw we were a-goin' over to the edge of the precipice. In another minute I see we was lost. Over we went a-whirlin' an' a-whizzin', a-fightin' an' a-scratchin'. We bumped into the rocks as we went down and knocked lots of them loose. I thought we was never goin' to reach bottom. After what seemed two hours we struck. Kerplank! Whew! We was knocked apart by the lick, an' I thought the Yankee would be dead. I raised up an' looked. Just as I raised the Yankee raised, too.

"'Reb,' says he, 'I believe I'll take that drink now.'"—Courier-Journal.

A Great Linguist Baffled.

The late Professor Stephen J. Young, of Bowdoin, was an accomplished linguist. One day he was on a train bound from Bangor to Brunswick, when a conductor who knew him entered his car to ask him to come out to the second class coach to find out where a certain stupid foreigner was going.

The conductor had attacked him in all the foreign lingo he could muster, and could get no other response than a stupid stare.

Prof. Young went back to the rear of the train. The passenger sat there looking very much disturbed and bewildered. The Professor went at him in Canadian French, then in German, then in the languages of Scandinavia, Egypt, Italy, Spain, and every other country on the face of the green earth. Still the passenger sat mum as an owl while the look of bewilderment deepened on his face. The Professor was nonplussed and was about turing in defeat to his own car when the man looked wearily out of the window and remarked sadly to himself:

"Be gosh, I wish I was ter hum."

He was an Aroostook Yankee and he could speak nothing but English.—Daily Eastern Argus.

An Offhand Definition.

"Can you tell me, Professor," asked Grigsby, "what an 'extempore pianist' is? I see that the performances of such a pianist are advertised."

"Certainly," said the Professor. "Ex, out of it; tempo, time; an extempore pianist is one that plays out of time!"—Boston Transcript.

A CHANCE MEETING.

BY THE DUCHESS.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

I.

"Isn't it dreadful, George?" says Mrs. Blake, coming into her husband's dressing room without so much as a knock.

"What's dreadful?" asks Mr. Blake, in a tone that no human being but his wife could have understood. This is accounted for by the fact that he is shaving, and that the left side of his mouth is now drawn up so far that it almost reaches his eyelid. Naturally this leaves a bit articulation a good deal to be desired.

"Lilian still steadily refuses to stay here and meet him."

"Meet Geoffrey Lansdale?"

"Yes, of course; though she knows how much depends upon it."

"There was never a girl who wasn't a fool!" says Mr. Blake, going on contentedly with his shaving.

"Oh! I don't know that!" After all she had once been a girl herself. "But certainly I do think Lilian is behaving very badly about this."

"Let her alone," says Mr. Blake, who is a slave to this one "fool of a girl" at all events—his only daughter Lilian. "If she doesn't want to marry her cousin, so be it. She will have something of her own. Enough? Why should she annoy herself on account of her grandfather's money?"

"Oh, scarcely enough," says Mrs. Blake. "You know Georgie will come in for the property, and Jack must be thought of. It is impossible for the best of boys to get on on his mere pay; and the cavalry is expensive. And Lilian * * * She is not the sort of girl * * * She has not been brought up to learn the harder features of economy, and I cannot help thinking it is such a pity."

"You are growing mercenary in your old age, Mary," says her husband.

"For the matter of that I am not so very old," says Mrs. Blake, with the faintest tinge of offense in her tone. And not without reason; as now, indeed, though in her forty-fourth year, she still looks young and handsome.

Mr. Blake smiles at her. "Only a year or two older than Lil, I honestly believe," says he, "to look at you. But see here, Mary, if our girl doesn't wish to marry young Lansdale, why that's the end of it."

"Not wish to marry a man she has never seen! How can she know what she wishes? Why can't she stay here and see him, and then say 'no,' if she doesn't like him? It is very kind and considerate of him to come here at all, in my opinion. At all events it argues him heart-whole."

"How so?" Mr. Blake has now got to a very difficult bit of his cheek and is looking ferocious.

"Why the will, George! You were alluding to it only just now. Poor, dear papa so arranged it, that if Lilian refuses Geoffrey, all goes to him, but if Geoffrey refuses to marry Lilian all the money goes to a Foundling Hospital."

"STILL FOUNDLINGS SHOULD BE PROVIDED FOR."

"A Foundling Hospital! Good gracious!" Mr. Blake turns to her, a face lost in soap. "And I always believed your father was a most moral man."

"Oh! don't be stupid. Poor papa had ideas! How I wish he hadn't!"

"Still foundlings should be provided for," says Mr. Blake, magisterially.

"I daresay, and so should Lilian."

"My dear! Lilian isn't a foundling."

"She's a girl with very little more than a penny, which amounts to the same thing to me," says Mrs. Blake, who is ambitious for her children.

"If Lilian won't stay here to receive young Lansdale where does she mean to go?"

"Oh! I'm sure I don't know," says Mrs. Blake, dejectedly.

At this moment a loud tattoo on the outer door—the door of the bedroom—can be heard. Mrs. Blake goes quickly to it, and a long confab between her and the somebody responsible for the tattoo ensues.

After a while, however, the outside door is closed again, and Mrs. Blake rushes back to her husband, her charming face alight with mirth and satisfaction.

"Well, it is the funniest thing," begins she. "Bessie has just had a telegram!" Bessie Musgrave is her sister—eight years her junior, and a widow of six years' standing.

"She has just heard from Geoffrey Lansdale's mother that he is to be at Glengariff to-morrow. Bessie says that arranges itself! She will be at Glengariff to-morrow, too—with Lilian!"

"Bessie is a sort of person who deserves the Victoria Cross," says Mr. Blake, dryly.

"It is the strangest coincidence, isn't it?" goes on Mrs. Blake, gayly; "almost providential, I call it! It appears Geoffrey is going to spend a week there on his way to us."

"And Lilian?"

"Well, as she is determined to go away from home to avoid him, she may just as well put in a week there, as in any other place. It is lovely, you know, George. Will do the dear girl good. A perfect paradise!"

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Musgrave and Lilian, having stepped out of the train that has brought them to Bantry, stand irresolute for a moment, until guided by a gentle hint from the porter who is looking after their luggage, they walk off briskly into the town that lies below them, where they are presently induced to mount a high vehicle, arranged with seats in rows, all facing the four horses, that are to carry them to Glengariff; and presently, indeed, all the seats being full, and another quaint coach of the same description growing impatient behind them, off they go!

Up here, as they reach a high hill, the splendid glories of Bantry Bay become clear to them. There it lies like a beautiful lake, surrounded by its high and stately mountains—the waters so still, so calm to-day, that scarcely they seem alive, and the Aurora, anchored in the middle of it, reminds one of nothing so much as Coleridge's "painted ship upon a painted ocean."

"See thim two islands, Miss," says the driver, turning to Lilian, whom he has favored from the beginning with his instructive conversation (beauty is dear to the heart of the Irishman), "wid the sthrip o' sand joinin' thim? There's a story about thim. 'Tis married now they are, they says, but whin the high tide comes it divides thim. 'Tis the 'Daily Divorce' they calls thim. Fegs! they must be Protestants, anyway."

He is a garrulous but kindly Jehu, filled with curious anecdotes and legends which for the last eleven years he has been instilling into the ears of his clients; nor does he indeed to-day draw breath until, having climbed the highest hills, he now brings his horses carefully down and down again, through an exquisite descent of wooded road, to the very door of Eccles Hotel.

"A LITTLE TARTAR, IF I MAKE NO MISTAKE!"

"Oh, how lovely!" says Lilian, softly, as if afraid to speak too loud. She and Mrs. Musgrave have clambered down the little step-ladder brought out to help them from their elevated position on the open coach, and are now looking round them. Here is the door of the hotel, an old-fashioned, homely entrance, more suggestive of inn than hotel, and, indeed, with the parts of the house on either side of it evidently very old, and would no doubt contrast strangely with the long row of new buildings that have been tacked on to them in later years, but for the fact that flowers and clinging, trailing greeneries have covered the house both old and new with an almost riotous growth.

It is now late in September, but roses and passion-flowers in full bloom are still crawling up the walls wherever they get a chance, reaching the upper windows—nay, the very roof itself. On the left, a magnolia is covering the space between two of the drawing-room windows, its white and fragrant cups (that so strangely resemble the water lily) gleaming through the tender greenness of its leaves, whilst geraniums show their pale pink and scarlet brightness from even higher up. Such luxuriant geraniums, growing up and up, and ever up, until they stare out at you from under the very eaves. To the right, some Dijon roses are hanging their pale and fragrant heads.

"The roses at home are all gone," says Lilian, as if to herself.

"But look at the bay, dearest," says Aunt Bessie. As if reluctantly, Lilian turns from her contemplation of the exquisite flowers; but when she turns it is only to give way to fresh admiration. Only the narrow road runs between the flower-crowned hotel and the water, with its wild wealth of beauty; its purple mountains, that cast their shadows deep into its depths; its islands, clad with gleaming verdure, and the soft, delicate spell of mist and silence that hangs over all. Who—who can describe that spell—the glamour of it, the desire, the longing to sink into it and dwell within its eternal calm forever?

* * * * * * *

"Aunt Bessie, we must get a boat to-morrow, and go out as far—as far as we can!" says Lilian, some hours later.

Dinner is over—an excellent dinner in the long and handsome saloon, and she and Mrs. Musgrave, having gone upstairs to put on some wraps with a view to sitting out on the esplanade and watch the growing moonlight deck the waters, are now going back to their rooms, along the narrow corridor.

"Well, dearest, I dare say a boatman can be found," says Aunt Bessie, to whom jigging up and down on unsteady foundations has no charm. "As for me, you know I am a bad sailor; still——"

She stops short; a young man coming towards them has caught her eye.

"Why, Mrs. Musgrave, it is you!" says the newcomer, stopping short and holding out his hand with pleased surprise. "What luck!"

"My dear Geoff, so glad to see you," says Aunt Bessie, genially, if a little timidly. She is conscious of a faint feeling of guilt. "Lilian and I only arrived this afternoon. Oh, I forgot; you do not know each other! This is Geoffrey Lansdale, dearest Lilian." She omits to look at her niece as she makes this somewhat incomplete introduction, but Geoffrey Lansdale does not. He casts a quick, penetrating glance at the girl, who acknowledges his bow with the faintest possible one in return, after which she immediately moves away, carrying her aunt by an imperious gesture with her. Lansdale glances after her, an amused twinkle in his handsome grey eyes. "So that is she!" says he. "A little Tartar, if I make no mistake! The foundlings are in for a good thing if it rests with me."

II.

Downstairs, Lilian has drawn her aunt out—across the road—and on to the esplanade, without speaking a word. Here, however, in the shade and the privacy, the torrent of her angry fear breaks out.

"Aunt Bessie," bursting on Mrs. Musgrave like a small volcano, "did you know of this?"

"I think so," says Mrs. Musgrave, slowly, and as if taking an inward glance at her memory. "I really think so."

"You did! You planned it all? You can stand there before me and acknowledge it?"

"Well, it's difficult, but I'm doing my very best, my dear; I'm stronger than I thought," says Aunt Bessie, who is doing her best to subdue an inclination towards inextinguishable laughter.

"All your disgraceful maneuvering will be of no use, then," says Lilian, her eyes flashing. "I shall go home to-morrow. Nothing shall keep me here! I shall go home in the morning."

"The very fact of his being here would——"

"Somebody has come up to them. A tall young man, with a charming face that has a suspicion of humor in it.

"Isn't it perfect?" says he, lightly. "I made sure I should find you here. It is the one place in the world, where to stay indoors night or day is an impossibility, so long as one can stay awake." He turns pointedly to Lilian, who is gazing out on the moonlit water as though unaware of his presence, yet all the time she is wondering if he had heard her last words. Surely not, his manner is free from embarrassment, not an arriere pensee in it. "Your first visit, Miss Blake?"

"Yes, her first!" says Aunt Bessie, hurriedly, who feels a storm brewing.

"First impressions are always best," says Lansdale, whose lips twitch humorously. "You will stay for some time?"

"For a week," says Aunt Bessie, promptly, for which speech the girl could willingly have killed her. To go to-morrow after that, would be impossible. It would look like running away from him. Up, whatever it may cost her, she will remain; she will be even friendly with him, she will let him see that his being here is a matter of the most perfect indifference to her, and just at the very end, she will say something, just a mere word or two and quite polite. That will let him know how distinctly displeasing he is to her, if not indeed absolutely hateful.

It is in accordance with this resolution that next morning she meets his proposal to go out boating with him in an amiable, if distinctly careless, fashion. The fact that she adores boating, that Aunt Bessie couldn't go with her, and that a boatman is generally a bore, has perhaps something to do with her going, but she herself puts it down to the "resolution." And for three days she goes out boating with him, always with the same self-contained, cold, indifferent air, speaking to him as little as possible, and giving him to understand silently that, though she acknowledges the cousinship between them, he himself is of no account at all. And Lansdale, who had begun by being amused, has grown curious, and perhaps a little resentful.

"NOTHING SHALL KEEP ME HERE."

To-day, Thursday, and the fourth of their acquaintance, has opened with a warm, faint, driving mist, that lies like a soft cloud on the brows of Hungry Hill and the Sugar-loaf, wrapping them in a garment of purple haze. It is not sufficiently wet, however, to keep any one at home, and in the morning Lilian had acceded to Lansdale's request that they should take another look at Cromwell's Bridge, and had from that wandered on into the lovely woods almost within reach of Lord Bantry's shooting lodge. They had of course seen it all before, and it was like a farewell visit, as, of course, to-morrow will be their last day—Aunt Bessie having decided on returning home on Saturday. Always somewhat taciturn when with him, Lilian had been singularly so this morning, and it is with a sort of dogged pertinacity that Lansdale asks her at the hotel door on their return if she is too tired to go out for a row. A good deal to his astonishment, she acquiesces at once, and Geoffrey, having secured a very satisfactory luncheon made up in a dainty basket, they start. But here as on land Lilian's reserve continues.

SUPERIOR SERVICE.

The superiority of The Daily Press over any other paper published in Plainfield in furnishing news of any great event in or out of this city, was evidenced again this morning in the posting of bulletins concerning the yacht races. Fifteen minutes after the boats had crossed the starting line on the course the position and time of the start was posted in front of The Press office, and from that time the bulletins were posted until twelve o'clock, when it was announced that the Valkyrie had abandoned the contest and that the Judges were after the Defender to bring her back, and then again later that they were unable to catch her.

Plainfielders knew from experience where they could first get the news, and in consequence a vast number wended their way to North avenue where the gazed on the bulletins, passed comments on the situation, got into arguments with bystanders, and went away convinced of the fact that The Daily Press is the only paper in Plainfield that is willing to spend money to provide intelligence that is as much sought after as the yacht race.

The Daily Press does not make a bluff at gathering news by issuing a second edition and stealing the "exclusives" of contemporaries. It is the first and most reliable paper in Plainfield.

FUNERAL OF MRS. RUNYON.

Beautiful Tributes of Flowers—Interment Made in This City.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Walter G. Runyon were held yesterday afternoon at the house in Elizabeth at one o'clock. They were in charge of the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Bennett. The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of a background of palms, a pillow from the family with the word "Mizpah" thereon, a cross from two sons, bearing the word "Mother," a wreath from the sisters. The W. C. T. U. sent a choice piece of cut flowers, as did also a number of friends. At the house a quartette rendered two favorite hymns of the decedent: "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "God Be With You." A special car brought the relatives and friends to this city, where the interment was made. At the grave the casket was opened to allow friends who were unable to go to Elizabeth an opportunity to view the remains.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Drop in to see Neuman Brothers' exhibit of peaches tomorrow.

—Men are at work on the sewage farm preparing it for the contractor who will soon get the work of putting in the filtration system.

—Louis C. Teller, who was arrested and placed in the borough lockup for five days, is still there, nothwithstanding that The News said he was released as there was no charge.

—There is a man in town who likes to be noted and in consequence sent the following on a postal card to one of Plainfield's active church workers: "A good drawing card for your next meeting—'The woman that jumped from the East River Bridge.'"

—Mrs. J. E. Mosher, wife of Justice Mosher, received a severe shock Tuesday evening from the heavy clap of thunder which frightened everyone. Since then she has had trouble with her head, having constant pain. It is not thought there will be any serious results.

A Fine Company.

The Bubb Comedy Company, Challenge Band and Orchestra which are at Music Hall all this week, is undoubtedly the best company that has ever appeared here at popular prices, and all desiring a fine performance should not fail to attend. Last evening the gave "O'Flynn in Mexico" before a large audience, and the production of this piece far surpassed the efforts of many of the higher-priced companies. Tonight the Bubb Company will produce the great comedy drama, "Two Kids," in which the famous Elmore Sisters will assume the leading character speaking parts. There will also be a number of new specialties introduced by the Elmores, Kelcy and LaRose. The popular daily dime matinees continue to draw large houses. There should be a large house tonight.

They Are Selling Fast Now.

The great sale of peaches at Neuman Brothers still continues, with the quality unexcelled and prices to suit everybody. Another fresh supply for tomorrow. Examine the stock, it will pay you to do so.

THE DAILY PRESS

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR

FOOTBALL LEAGUE FORMED.

FOUR TEAMS FROM THIS SECTION OF JERSEY WILL KICK THE PIGSKIN.

Officers Elected and Schedule of Games Arranged—Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Will Put Out a Strong Eleven to Contest.

The football prospect for Plainfield this year is very bright and there promises to be the best eleven in the field this fall that Plainfield has ever seen. Last evening the Central New Jersey Football League was organized in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at Westfield by representatives from Westfield, Plainfield, Dunellen and Cranford. Those present at the meeting were E. G. Wherry, Robert Wherry and Mr. Vought, of Westfield; D. A. McPhie, Raymond A. McGee, Charles B. Morse and Arthur B. Crane, of Plainfield; Edward Hardingham and Mr. Carpenter, of Dunellen; and A. Tousch, Jr., of Cranford.

E. G. Wherry, of Westfield, was chosen temporary chairman and Robert Wherry, of Westfield, was appointed secretary.

The league was then organized and a constitution, prepared by E. G. Whiting on the same lines as that of the Intercollegiate Football Association, considered.

It was decided that this year the league should consist of four teams: The Westfield Football Association, the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Football Association, the Dunellen Football Association and the Cranford Football Association. An annual assessment of $2 was decided upon, the money thus raised to go for the purchase of a trophy for the league. After considerable discussion it was agreed that the trophy won this year should be the property of the club winning it.

The officers selected were a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. A committee composed of three delegates from each club, shall be known as the advisory committee. When one of the delegates was unable to be present it was agreed that he should be allowed to send his proxy.

The rest of the constitution provided for the players and rules in connection with the game. The rules of the Inter-Collegiate Football Association were adopted.

The election of officers then followed and resulted as follows: President, E. G. Wherry, of Westfield; Vice-president, A. Tousch, Jr., of Cranford; Secretary, Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield; Treasurer, George W. Richardson, of Dunellen.

It was decided that each club should play two games with every other club, one at home and one abroad. Then after some discussion the dates on which the games were to be played were selected as follows:—Saturday, October 19th; Saturday, October 26th; Saturday, November 2d; Tuesday, November 5th; Saturday, November 9th, and Saturday, November 16th.

Saturday, November 23d, was retained as a day on which to play off any postponed games or tie.

Work on the schedule was then begun and the first two weeks play arranged as follows: October 17th—Plainfield Y. M. C. A. at Westfield, Cranford at Dunellen. October 26th—Dunellen at Plainfield, Westfield at Cranford.

A committee, consisting of the three Westfield delegates, was appointed to complete it, as the Plainfield and Dunellen delegates had to leave to catch heir train.

The complete schedule will be published later.

Shut Off the Water.

What possible idea the driver of the sprinkling cart can have in standing in one spot waiting for a blockade of teams to move out of the way and let the flow of water continue from the sprinkler, is something the average person cannot understand. The small-sized duck pond left in the road in these instances is as disagreeable as too much dust.

Ready For Plainfield '96.

Tickets for the Christian Endeavor excursion to Atlantic City are now on sale at Randolph's pharmacy. The earlier the ttckets are secured the better assignment of rooms can be secured.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

INQUEST WILL BE MONDAY.

The Coroner Will Investigate the Murder of the Italian at Westfield.

County Physician O'Rielly held an autopsy over the body of the murdered Italian at Westfield yesterday afternoon, and set Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock as the time for the inquest.

The following jury was empaneled: L. E. Hart, John Burham, W. W. Gilby, Fred Coombs, Hugh Kurzhals and Irving Ross.

There are four Italians locked up in the Union County jail at Elizabeth as being connected with the murder. Their names are Nicholas Orchetti, Guiseppe Venharelli, Michael Sholian and Joseph LaGuary. Coroner Horning said today that the men under arrest told contradictory stories, and for this reason it was difficult to learn who did the stabbing. The Coroner suspected that the murdered man was one of the laborers who refused to quit work when he was ordered to do so by Orchetti, and got into a quarrel with Orchetti and some of his boarders. The stabbing was done in a general fight.

BOSTON ILLUSTRATED.

Scenes of the Recent ndeavor Convention Shown by Stereopticon.

"Boston and the Convention" was the title of a stereopticon entertainment given at the Park Avenue Baptist church by Mr. Sherman, of Whippany, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor society of that church last evening. Most of the views were of Boston itself, and Mr. Sherman spoke very entertainingly of them. A large audience, composed mainly of Christian Endeavorers, was present and listened to an interesting address. A junior society came from Springfield in a stage to attend the meeting. The great heat kept many away that would have otherwise come.

Horses Run But Do No Damage.

A team of horses belonging to John Goff, the fish dealer, stood on Emily street, near Somerset street, this morning and were in charge of a young man. Goff told the man in the wagon to drive up the street, and just as he started the horses became frightened at something and turned into Somerset street at a terrible speed. They ran as far as Jackson avenue when Frank Rickert, who was standing near, ran out and caught them just in time to prevent any damage.

An Old Timer Retires.

John E. Kelly, who for so many years has conducted his "Old Parliament House," at 113 Broad street in Elizabeth, has retired. He was one of the well known figures in that city and his saloon has been the resort of many of the best known politicians in the State. In that little back room many an incipient boom has been inaugurated. Mr. Kelly himself is one of the best informed men on current politics and other local politics in the State.

Run Into By a Careless Driver.

Accidents to cyclists are very few in proportion to the great number of riders, but one Plainfield wheelwoman, Miss Edith Titsworth, of Madison avenue, has just recovered from the effects of one. Last Monday, while riding on West Fifth street, she was run into by a horse and carriage and upset. The front forks of her wheel were broken and her knee was injured so that she was confined to the house for several days. She has now recovered and is out on her wheel again.

Expert at Whist.

An exciting duplicate whist match was played at the home of Thomas U. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, last evening, and Fred H. Freeman and Arthur Freeman defeated George Snediker and Thomas U. Smith by a score of 15 to 0. The Freeman Brothers put up an almost faultless game.

The German Picnic.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church, together with their friends, enjoyed a picnic yesterday in Hyde's grove. There were about eighty present who passed the day playing games, etc. During the afternoon ice-cream and cake were served. They returned home about dark.

A Grand Display.

Neumuan Brothers' special in fruit will be continued tomorrow by the finest display of choice peaches ever held in Plainfield. 200 baskets of them, the lowest prices for fancy fruit.

TALKED ABOUT HIS GIRL.

A BATTLE ROYAL RESULTS OVER ALLEGED SLURRING REMARKS.

Frank Hurlig Gets a Thrashing from J. Hamilton, and Gets Locked Up Besides—Settled in Court This Morning.

Almost every week North Plainfield furnishes excitement of some kind that keeps the marshals busy.

Last night about 10 o'clock occurred a lively fight on Greenbrook road, near Somerset street, that was witnessed by a few persons.

Recently a man named Frank Hurlig, of the borough, circulated reports about one man by the name of J. Hamilton who resides in this city. He also passed remarks about Mr. Hamilton's lady friend. Mr. Hamilton, however, wrote a letter to Hurlig stating that he would like to meet him, and that he would also bring his lady with him.

Last night was the date set and accordingly the two went to the place of meeting, but Hurlig was not there.

They heard, however, that he was at the merry-go-round near Greenbrook road. They went to the place and found him.

The remarks that Hurlig was supposed to have passed were brought up, but he denied saying anything of the kind. This angered Hamilton and a fight ensued. Hurlig was given a good thrashing that he did not enjoy. The scene was very exciting when Marshal Doud appeared, but the cry of "Here comes the cop" did not stop them, for Hamilton succeeded in giving his antagonist, and a friend with him, the worst of the fight.

Doud arrested Hurlig and put him in the lockup. This morning he went after Hamilton, and while he was absent Justice Crosley gave Hurlig a hearing and released him. Hamilton appeared before the Justice and after his story had been related he was also released.

THEIR CAKE IS ALL DOUGH.

Union County's Republican Slate Smashed to Smithereens.

The Jersey City News has the following political gossip from Trenton:

Senator Voorhees came in for considerable gentle chaffing by his colleagues, because the Supreme Court has decided that the Elective Judiciary bill is unconstitutional. The young Senator took it all good naturedly, but it was quite apparent that he was nettled at the reversal, particularly at this stage of the game. He made no expression, except to say that he was very much surprised that it went that way. What effect this opinion will have upon his candidacy remains to be seen. There are many who think it will n-t seriously effect him. It, however, does make some slight changes in the political matters of Union county. Ex-Speaker Cross was to receive the Republican nomination for Judge, and this knocks him out, and places him in line as a senior Assemblyman to be a candidate for Senator. Of course Senator Voorhees has another chance at it, and, should the Gubernatorial nomination not go to Union county, it is more than probable that he will take another three years so as to keep himself in line for the Gubernatorial nomination later on, or for Congress. Mr. Cross, unless he tires of politics, will have to wait three years. Assemblyman Codding, who was planning to be Senator in case Voorhees became Governor, will also have to bide his time, so that some of the cake of the Union county politicians is all dough.

Chased in Shirt Tails.

Two young men had a foot race in the East Second street alley last night. A novel feature of it was that all they had on was shirts. Policeman Frederickson discovered them and gave chase. They disappeared in the darkness and the officer was obliged to give up the chase.

In Justice Newcorn's Court.

The case of A. M. Griffin against Daniel S. Cole, on contract, was tried yesterday afternoon and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff for $108.94 and costs. Lawyer C. L. Murphy represented the plaintiff.

—The Jersey Central will run a special excursion train to the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Odd Fellows at Atlantic City Sept. 16th to 22d. The round trip fare from Plainfield will be $3.45.

A. M. Bailey, a well-known citizen of Eugene, Oregon, says his wife has for years been troubled with chronic diarrhoea and used many remedies with little relief until she tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which has cured her sound and well. Give it a trial and you will be surprised at the prompt relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HOTEL NETHERWOOD SOLD.

TO BE CONDUCTED AS A SANITARIUM FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Bought By a Syndicate of New York Capitalists, Headed By Dr. Crossman—Cost $300,000 But Was Sold for Less.

After having had a career filled with failures the Hotel Netherwood property yesterday afternoon passed into new hands and will be conducted no longer for the purposes for which it was originally intended—that of a high-class summer resort hotel.

Yesterday afternoon a deal was consummated whereby a syndicate of prominent New York capitalists, headed by Dr. Crossman, become the owners of the property. These gentlemen have for some time been looking about for a place to establish a sanitarium where consumptive patients could be treated, and in the Netherwood found just what suited them.

Its close proximity to the metropolis, with unlimited railroad facilities, its location in a section that is celebrated as being the most beautiful and healthy in Jersey, together with the commodious structure, and luxuriously furnished rooms, made it especially desirable for the purposes for which they will use it.

The matter has been under the consideration of the new purchasers for the course of a month, and while the price paid for the property is not what it originally cost, the sale was a satisfory one, because as a hotel it had always been a source of loss to the owners.

The property cost $300,000 to build and furnish. The building will be taken possession of by the syndicate in two or three weeks and probably thoroughly overhauled. Late in the fall or early in the winter it will be opened for the reception of patients with a corps of experienced physicians in lung ailments.

The sale was made by Charles Hyde, as trustee for the bondholdolders, including the Latimer estate, Warren Ackerman, E R. Pope and a large number of other Plainfielders.

NO MORE RACING.

The Valkyrie Will Return to England as Soon as Possible.

New York, Sept. 13—Dunraven has had enough. Valkyrie will race no more in American waters. She will be taken back to England just as soon as she can be prepared for an ocean voyage. The challenger was towed to the Erie Basin this morning, followed by the City of Bridgeport, with Mr. Glennie aboard.

The Valkyrie's crew began immediately to prepare her for her trip home. By 10 o'clock they had her topmast down and were preparing to fix the jury rig under which she crossed.

Lord Dunraven had not gone down from New York. Mr. Glennie was seen and asked: "Is there any possibility of the Valkyrie sailing in any more races here?" "No," he replied. "We are going back to England just as soon as we get the jury rig up, we will race no more in American waters."

The America's cup stays in America, but what had promised to be the most interesting and exciting series of races ever sailed, for it has turned out to have been the most unsatisfactory.

Early Morning Robbery.

During the early part of yesterday morning someone effected an entrance into A. Titsworth & Co's place of business on North avenue and stole $14 from the safe. The firm has no idea of who committed the theft. Nothing else is reported as missing. A few stray papers were found lying on the floor.

We'll All Rejoice.

The America's Cup will stay on this side of the water after all and the people are rejoicing. They are also rejoicing because Tier has a new stock of clove drops. And don't forget to attend that special sale of candies which he is to have tomorrow. All kinds and all prices.

—The Union County Board of Freeholders met at Elizabeth yesterday and transacted only routine business.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C.A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

One Knocked His Sister Down And The Other Stole a Wheel.

Two men came up before Justice Newcorn this morning and were held for the Grand Jury.

The first was Henry Pendleton, the warrant for whom was issued on July 11, for assault and battery, but until today he had managed to dodge the constables. The complaint was made by his sister Mrs. Jennie Henderson, and his wife. According to the story of the women, he met the two on Central avenue one day and assaulted his sister, knocking her down and pummeling her generally, saying that she had been interfering with his wife. His wife took the side of the sister and a good old quarrel ensued. Pendleton is a resident of West Third streeet and was caught today after he had finished a little affair at the city court.

S. Frucht, the West Front street bicycle dealer, was complainant against another man, Frank McCommey, colored, charging him with the larceny of a wheel. Last Monday McCommey came to Frucht's store and wanted to hire a wheel for an hour. Frucht let him have it, supposing everything was all right, but it wasn't, and the colored man did not show up McCommey has been living at the home of David Jones, of Cottage place but was not heard from until Chief Grant this morning received word from the Newark police that they had captured McCommey in that city, where he had disposed of the wheel. Chief Grant wil go to Newark tomorrow and bring the culprit to this city.

The case of Welch against Johnson, on contract, which was to have came up before Justice Newcorn this morning, was settled in court.

RETURN OF THE OLD DOCTOR.

He Is Back to His Hut in the Neighborhood of Rahway.

The "Old Doctor," or old man of the woods, as many call him, has returned to his hut in the vicinity of Rahway after an absence of several weeks. The "Old Doctor" has been there sixteen years, and no one can say that they know his name. During all that time he has lived in a rude hut in the woods between the two branches of the railroad, subsisting for the most part on herbs and wild berries. His appearance is striking, with his long white beard and curious dress.

Some years ago a man was stung by a snake and cured by herbs that the old hermit applied to the wound. Since he has always been knows as the "Old Doctor." There is an old story to the effect that he was in the hospital corps between the lines in the Franco-Prussian war, that he was struck in the head by a bit of shell, and that his recovery left his mind unbalanced.

THREE COMMITTEED.

"De Bowery" Man, A Drunk And Another Tough Character Go Down.

The county jail at Elizabeth is richer by three more inmates as a result of this morning's proceedings in the city rourt.

John McGowan of "de Bowery" was the first to appear before Judge Coddington. Mrs. Julia Snyder complained that he had been using threatening language to her and that he had struck her on the nose until the blood flowed. About three months ago he used to live with her and then he left. Yesterday he came back and wanted to stay but Mrs. Snyder objected and McGowan became abusive. He pleaded guilty and was given sixty days straight in Elizabeth.

A regular drunken case, James Price, was the next culprit and he went down to the county jail for ten day's as he did not have the necessary $3 fine.

Henry Pendleton, the next on the programme, was an old offender, and has had the constables after him for some time. He got drunk yesterday and came around to abuse his sister, threatening to kill her. Judge Coddington gave him his choice between paying a fine of $10 or thirty days with Sheriff Kyte, but as he did not have the wherewithal to pay, down he went.

DEATH OF LOUIS B. MULFORD.

THE FATAL MOMENT CAME SUDDENLY TO HIS FAMILY.

Born and Brought Up in This City Where He Had a Host of Friends—Worked His Way Up in Business—Ill for Some Time

Sorrow came into the household of Louis B. Mulford yesterday afternoon at about 3:30 o'clock when the husband and father shut his eyes to this world.

Mr. Mulford's late residence was in the Manning flats on West Front street and it was there that he died.

Mr. Mulford was one of the prominent business men of Plainfield, actively engaged in the meat business, greatly respected by all who knew him, and perfectly upright in all his dealings.

He was born in Plainfield on January 23d, 1855, and has resided here ever since. In 1882 he entered the employ of Lutkins & Hummer and proved such a faithful worker that, when in 1890 that partnership was dissolved, he entered into partnership with Mr. Lutkins. In 1892 there was another change and the new firm, then formed, called Hummer & Mulford, has continued ever since.

About a year ago Mr. and Mrs. Mulford lost their nine-year-old child, Hiram B. Mulford, with diphtheria, and since that time Mr. Mulford has never been perfectly well. Doctors have said that his trouble was consumption, but the cause of his death was heart trouble.

His death has been expected for some time, but a few days ago he began to rally and, only one hour before his death, walked from the parlor to the dining room. His death, therefore, came very suddenly.

He leaves a sorrowing wife and four young children, May, Andrew Lutkins, Matilda, and Louis B. He also leaves one brother, Mahlon T. Mulford, of New Market, and five sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Chapin, Mrs. J. B. Hulburt, Mrs. John T. Case, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, and Mrs. L. A. Hummer.

Mr. Mulford was a prominent member in Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., and also belonged to Columbian Lodge, No. 58, Ancient Order of United Workingmen.

A Window Cracked.

A mysterious accident occurred yesterday afternoon at Gavett & Co's store on East Front street which is puzzling. While Mr. Gavett was waiting on a customer a sharp loud report was heard like that of a pistol. Both were very much startled and upon examination found that one of the large plate glasses in the front of the store was cracked, evidently caused by the throwing of a large stone. There was no one in sight and Mr. Gavett was unable to find the guilty person.

A Slight Runaway.

Yesterday Oliver P. Vosseller, who is associated with Watson Tunison in the feed business, and the colored man, Wm. Lane, while driving along Park avenue near Campbell's clubhouse met with a slight accident. The team took fright at some water in the roadway and jumped in the ditch. Several spokes in one of the wheels were broken. There was no other damage.

One Degree Conferred.

Friendship Rebekah Degree Lodge, No. 4, I. O.O.F., met last evening and conferred the degree on one candidate. The balance of the evening was devoted to routine business. Some of the members decided to attend the state convention at Atlantic City which opens next week. At the same time and place the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the United States will hold their annual convention.

A Storng Wind.

The strong wind played havoc with the hats of the commuters at the North avenue station this morning, and there was a general scampering to recover them. One soft hat, in particular, started in front of the United States express company's office and wheeled along on its rim for half a block, with its owner chasing along in the rear.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE YACHT RACE FIASCO

Dunraven Has Injured the International Sport.

His Real Reason for Withdrawing from the Race So Suddenly Not Yet Perfectly Clear—No Doubt of Defender's Superiority—Another Cup Offered.

New York, Sept. 13.—Lord Dunraven's action in withdrawing Valkyrie immediately after the start yesterday, thus ending the races for '95 in a fiasco, has placed a decided dampener on international yacht racing in both this country and England, if it has not ended the sport for a number of years to come. That Valkyrie is no match for Defender in all kinds of weather has been fully demonstrated, but why Dunraven pulled out at the last minute is not clear. Of course, he has taken his own reputation for a sportsman in hand and he cannot blame or thank anyone for the outcome. The most charitable version that can be accepted is to believe that he was disgusted with the crowding of the excursion fleet in the first two races. Yesterday, however, the excursion boats were not close to the racers.

Cup Awarded Defender.

After Lord Dunraven withdrew the Valkyrie the Defender sailed over the course alone. The America's Cup committee notified C. Oliver Iselin that three races and the cup were awarded the gallant Defender, and the crowds afloat and ashore cheered the ship that sustained Uncle Sam's supremacy on the seas, and the skipper and crew that sailed her. For at least another year the international trophy is ours, and in all probability it will be many years before a British yacht again challenges for the cup.

Wanted the Course Changed.

In withdrawing his boat Lord Dunraven did not charge any special unfairness to his boat, but bases his action upon the interference with both yachts caused by the large excursion fleet. The objections raised by the owner of Valkyrie were made before the boats reached the line, and were based upon the conduct of the attendant fleet on Saturday and Tuesday. Lord Dunraven sent the America's Cup committee a strongly worded letter complaining about the action of steamboats and tugs and stating that he was not willing to continue racing Valkyrie unless a clear course was provided. He added that in his opinion the course should be distant from any large city. Up to the time for the start for yesterday's race Lord Dunraven had received no reply to his communication. After his withdrawal from the race, he said it was his intention to start if he received a reply, but none coming to hand he merely went down and crossed the line to give the other boat a chance to make the race.

Reached His Decision Suddenly.

That he had no intention of racing yesterday was evident for he put up no topsail at all. His decision not to race must have been arrived at late Wednesday night, for he had Valkyrie dry-docked, her bottom rubbed down, and when she floated a quantity of pig lead estimated at four tons was taken from her hold. While these preparations were going on Lord Dunraven was in the city sending and receiving messages from members of the America's Cup committee and the regatta committee.

Talks of Insult.

Lord Dunraven said this morning: "I am quite satisfied that I cannot off New York sail a race for the America's Cup under satisfactory conditions. The situation is this: I do not believe that I have a superior boat. I do not believe that I should be subjected to an insult from the regatta committee of any yacht club or from the representative of any challenging syndicate. It was not my way; I was forced to it. There is no difference of opinion aboard our boat. It is a simple matter of refusal to sail under existing conditions and rules.

Does Not Blame Watson.

"I know that I cannot get a show. I saw Haff put up his helm—or thought that I saw it. I have no criticism to make upon Watson. He turned out a good boat. She crossed the Atlantic ocean, and if she could not win it is not the fault of Watson. Watson is not responsible, and of course you know it from my actions. The Valkyrie is my yacht."

Cheers for Defender.

The Defender arrived off Bay Ridge at 9 o'clock. Three large American flags flew from her topmast and spreader shrouds. A short piece of broom was attached to her jib boom. On her deck were a happy party. All the way up the bay the yacht had been serenaded and her people cheered. Even the yellow dog, Sandy, seemed happy. He rushed about the decks and barked joyously at the people who nearly capsized excursion boats by crowding to the rail when Defender passed.

Views of Americans.

Mr. Iselin said this morning: "After the decision on Tuesday's race I offered to Lord Dunraven to resail the race. I received his declination yesterday morning. I regret that we could not have had a race instead of winding up as we did." Herbert C. Leeds said: "Lord Dunraven's conduct is an insult to the American nation." Capt. Hank Haff said it looked as if some one was afraid to race. He was willing to put in $500 of his savings to help make up a pool of $5,000 that Defender could beat the Valkyrie in a beat of fifteen or twenty miles to windward and return.

A GENEROUS OFFER.

Dunraven Has Given Taylor's Proposition No Thought as Yet.

New York, Sept. 13.—Lord Dunraven was asked at the Racquet club last evening what he would do in regard to the offer of General Taylor of Boston. He said: "The offer is a generous and sportsmanlike one, but whether a race can be arranged is more than I can say now. It is entirely incorrect that I have stated that Defender is the best boat. The two yachts have not been fairly tried, and I certainly do not concede that the Defender is better than the Valkyrie."

Iselin Is Angry.

Mr. Iselin, when asked about the Taylor offer said he had received no proposition from Boston, but that if he should he would not accept. He said Defender would not race with Valkyrie again. Mr. Iselin's tone indicated that he was not pleased with the Britisher's tactics.

FOR A RACE OFF MARBLEHEAD

A Boston Editor Offers a $5,000 Cup for Valkyrie and Defender.

Boston, Sept. 13.—The Boston Globe says to-day: General Charles A. Taylor, editor of the Globe, has made an offer to C. Oliver Iselin and Lord Dunraven which will not only please every true yachtsman but all the lovers of fair play in sports in the world. He has offered a $5,000 cup as a trophy to be contested for on the Marblehead course by the Defender and Valkyrie III., and thus determine which is the better of the two boats."

THIS IS TERRIBLE.

Dire Things Threatened as a Result of the Yacht Race Fiasco.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 13.—The Evening Star in an editorial on the yach races says: "The action of the Defender people in continuing the race yesterday after the Valkyrie, true to Dunraven's plain intimation, had withdrawn at the start, makes it very certain that the spirit of honorable sport is wholly absent from Mr. Iselin and his companions in the ownership of the boat. Yesterday's fiasco proves what has been said, that the Americans were determined to retain the cup at any cost. They will probably be left in the undisputed possession of the trophy. No Briton will ever ask for another race, and Americans in all branches of sport and athletics will find it difficult to induce Englishmen to trust them sufficiently to play either afield or afloat. Worse than that, if Iselin & Co., claim yesterday's race and the American public do not sharply repudiate the whole business the friendship between the two countries will be severely strained, and the cause of an Anglo-American alliance for the preservation of peace will be set back a hundred years."

STORM DAMAGE.

Further Reports of the Losses in Northern New York.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 13.—The accounts of the damage from Wednesday evening's brief but disastrous hurricane continue to come in from various parts of Jefferson county, showing that even more damage was done than was at first believed. Every hour adds to the already long list of barns blown down or unroofed, or parts of buildings collapsed or crushed by falling trees. A number of cattle were killed by lightning. The scene at cape Vincent was a sad one and has affected the villagers so that they are almost discouraged. The town has been visited by two destructive fires during the past three yerrs in which its principal summer hotels were burned, besides several business blocks. The hotels have not been rebuilt, but the town had a good line of stores.

Every Store Front Smashed in.

These were badly damaged by the cyclone, every store front on the main street being smashed in. The residence portion of the town also suffered severely, and although much of the damage can be repaired the debris and wreckage present a discouraging sight. No deaths have been added to the list up to this morning, and Mrs. Fitzgerald, who was not expected to live through the day, seems somewhat better. The apple crop, which was abundant along the lake shore, is ruined, the trees having been stripped by the storm. At Madison barracks, Sackett's Harbor, a portion of the roof of the mess hall was torn off. Direct communication with Canada, via Kingston and Wolf islands, has been interrupted.

PREPARING FOR A STRIKE.

Ohio Mine Owners Running Their Mines with All Possible Force.

Columbus, O., Sept. 13.—Ohio coal mine operators expect a demand for increased wages from their miners on October 1, and are now running their mines with all possible force. This has made an unusual demand for cars and rolling stock of this kind that has stood idle on side tracks for many months is being pressed into service. It is understood that the miners will ask for a restoration of the old scale of 70 cents per ton for Hocking valley. This will probably be conceded.

THEY MUST REMAIN IN PRISON.

Pardons Will Not Be Granted Stain and Cromwell.

Augusta, Me., Sept. 13.—The governor and council at their session yesterday unanimously voted not to grant pardons to David L. Stain and Oliver Cromwell, who are serving life sentences for the murder of Cashier Barron of the Dexter Savings bank.

OSCEOLA MINE DISASTER.

Bodies of Twenty-five of the Victims Recovered.

Houghton, Mich., Sept. 13.—A party of men went down shaft No. 4 of the Osceola mine yesterday and found the bodies of twenty-three dead miners at the fourteenth level, and two on the third level. Five of the miners are still missing.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD

Wealthy J. B. Manning's Unpleasant Position.

An Old Member of the New York Stock Exchange Accused of Removing with Chemicals Endorsements on Mortgage Bonds—Made Only $175 by the Operation.

New York, Sept. 13.—Formal charges of fraud were preferred to the governing committee of the stock exhange yesterday against John B. Manning, and if they are sustained they will result in his expulsion from the exchange. Mr. Manning is a dealer in investment securities on Wall street and has been a member of the exchange since 1869. He is a millionaire. He is accused of removing with chemicals the endorsements on the backs of five Missouri Pacific railway first mortgage bonds of the face value of $1,000 each and selling them for "clean" bonds, or in other words, original bonds, without any endorsements at all.

Made Only $175.

Clean bonds being from 3 to 4 per cent. more than endorsed bonds, for the reasons that questions may arise as to the regularity of endorsements. A difference of 3 1-2 per cent. on $5,000 bonds would be $175. The allegation is that Mr. Manning acquired the bonds at an auction sale, removed the endorsements and resold them on the stock exchange. The bonds are said to have been traced back to the first holder. It is claimed that a clear case has been made out. No criminal proceedings for altering have as yet been instituted against Mr. Manning.

Great Sensation in Wall Street.

Mr. Manning said to a reporter this morning: "The bonds are payable to bearer and are in innocent hands. I think I can disprove the charge that endorsements on the bonds were removed." The allegation against Mr. Manning has made a great sensation in Wall street. He is the heaviest dealer in bank stocks in New York. He was sued by his wife for a separation and a division of property on the ground of cruelty. He is about 65 years old.

BIG MORTGAGE RECORDED.

A Security for $17,500,000 Received by Boston's Registry.

Boston, Sept. 13.—The largest mortgage which the officials of the registry of deeds of Suffolk county remember to have ever recorded was entered on the books of the office yesterday. The amount of the mortgage was $17,500,000 and the parties to it were the New England Railroad company and the Manhattan Trust company of New York city. The mortgage was entered as security for bonds to the amount stated above, which the New England Railroad company was authorized by the last legislature to issue.

POT OF MONEY UNEARTHED.

Workmen at Chester Find $150 Worth of Spanish Coin.

Chester, Pa., Sept. 13.—Thomas Moore, jr., and two other workmen, while excavating for pipe connections at Market square, unearthed a small preserving jar containing gold and silver Spanish coin estimated to be worth $150. Some of the coin bore the date of 1800 and other pieces of later date. An old market house erected in the last century stood on the site where the money was found and it was torn down in 1857. It is thought the money was buried by one of the market men.

HOLMES AGAIN INDICTED.

Action of the Philadelphia Grand Jury in the Case of B. F. Pietzel.

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—H. H. Holmes, the murderer and insurance swindler, has been indicted by the grand jury for the murder of B. F. Pietzel, whose mysterious death in this city a year ago and the subsequent collection of $100,000 insurance on his life by Holmes led to the unveiling of the latter's criminal record. Indictments for murder have also been brought against Holmes in Toronto and Indianapolis and proceedings are pending in Chicago.

ROUGH TRIP OF THE ST. LOUIS.

Capt. Randle Hurt by Being Thrown from His Bunk

Southampton, Sept. 13.—The American line steamer St. Louis, from New York, had a very rough passage. Captain Randle sustained a severe injury to his head by being thrown from his bunk during a heavy sea.

HEROIC WOMEN.

Their Struggle Against a Common and Merciless Enemy.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Woman's heroism is not evinced by fearlessness or enterprise in time of danger, but her courage and fortitude are unquestionable in time of suffering.

Think of the woman who smiles and tries to make those around her cheerful, while she is racked with the excruciating tortures of womb trouble.

Think of one who, day by day, begs her physician to help her, while the torture of tortures could not add to her misery.

Does she yield? No! She endures her agonies, and meets her friends with cheerfulness.

This is woman's heroism, and few men realize how prevalent they are. Physicians rarely render relief in such cases.

After twenty years of success, with ever-increasing popularity, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is, to-day, woman's only sure and safe refuge from inflammation, ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb, ovarian trouble, leucorrhœa, painful and suppressed menstruations, kidney trouble, nervous prostration, and all manner of distressing and life-sapping female diseases.

"O my sisters, believe what is told you of this wonderful medicine! Before I took it I had falling of the womb and leucorrhœa. My womb came down so badly I could not walk across the floor; the pain was excruciating; now all is so changed, and I am so happy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved me from a life of misery. Don't, don't suffer, I say, when a cure is so easily obtained." — MRS. WILLIAM HOWE, 163 Antoin Street, Detroit, Mich.

HUNDREDS ARE DEAD

Killed by Earthquakes in Honduras.

The Tremors Violent and Continued at Intervals from Sunday to Wednesday Last — Flames Shot from the Earth and Lava Running Down Mountains Engulf Cattle.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Sept. 13.—A courier from Yetapan announces the most terrible earthquake ever known in that section. The loss of life and property is enormous. Three hundred people are said to have perished. On Sunday the shocks commenced, lasting all day and night at intervals, causing much damage and the greatest fear among the inhabitants of the city and neighborhood.

Flames Shot from the Earth.

By Monday the city was filled by an addition of thirty-five hundred people from the mountains and outlying districts. During Monday night sheets of flame appeared at different points to the northwest rising to immense heights.

Noise Like Cannonading.

Tuesday morning the shocks ceased, quiet was restored and people left town for their homes. At 9 o'clock that night, however, heavy rumbling noises were heard, shortly after followed by a reappearance of the flames in the mountains which shot up several hundred feet. Frightened people again flocked to town and at midnight the church tower fell, carrying with it the roof of three houses. Nine people were killed and eighteen wounded. Rumbling which sounded like the heaviest cannonading commenced and lasted over an hour and a half, the people rushing madly through the streets praying and crying.

Many Killed by Falling Rocks.

Just before daylight another prolonged shock, which is variously estimated to have lasted from two and a quarter to three minutes, rocked the whole town as if it were a cradle. Many fleeing people were killed by rocks which fell in a perfect shower like a hailstorm. Smoke from the mountains to the northwest rose to an enormous height, followed shortly after by the bursting of flames from the mountain sides and the throwing out of lava and rocks. Hundreds of herds of cattle were killed by being engulfed in lava which ran down the mountain side.

Over 300 Bodies Recovered.

At Yetapan 71 houses were destroyed. One hundred and fifty-three dead bodies have been recovered there and many more are missing. At Covajuanca 37 houses were destroyed. Ninety-five bodies were recovered. At Cayuscat 29 houses were destroyed and 111 bodies were recovered. It is impossible yet to give a full account of the disaster. Many small settlements are believed to have been destroyed.

LAND TITLES ILLEGAL.

Many Persons at May's Landing Will Lose Their Homes.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 13.—The United States supreme court has sustained the lease until 1899 of John Hunter of Philadelphia to 1,500 acres of land on which May's Landing, the county seat, stands. United States Marshal Pfeiffer of Camden served writs of ejectment yesterday on persons who had bought land and built homes on the tract without knowledge of Hunter. Last night every house on the tract was full of mourners. The owners see no way out but to make terms with Hunter, and few are in position to do this. The land company from which they bought is insolvent.

ATLANTIC STEAMSHIP RATES.

An Agreement Concerning Passengers and Freight Concluded.

London, Sept. 13.—The negotiations between transatlantic steamship companies for an advance in freight and passenger rates to America, which have been pending for several days, have now been concluded. All the lines engaged in American trafic are included in the agreement, which is to take effect on Oct. 1.

BRITISH CONSUL ATTACKED.

Pelted with Stones by Chinese at Wenchow.

London, Sept. 13.—The Daily Chronicle to-day prints a dispatch from Shanghai to a news agency of this city saying that a mob recently attacked the British consul at Wenchow, in the province of Che-Kiang, pelting him with stones and other missiles.

FILIBUSTERS INDICTED.

A True Bill Also Returned Against Their Bondsman at Wilmington.

Wilmington, Del., Sept. 13.—The United States grand jury has returned a true bill against the accused Cuban filibusters, including Ralph De Soto, the cigar dealer and bondsman for a number of the accused men.

Death in an Elevator Shaft.

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.—James B. Cass, aged 35 years, a prominent business man of this city, fell fifty feet in the shaft of the elevator in the Manhattan Life Insurance company's building yesterday afternoon. He was instantly killed, his body being crushed into a shapeless pulp.

Valentine and McKeever Matched.

New York, Sept. 13.—The Empire Athletic club has signed Arthur Valentine, champion lightweight of England, to meet Charlie McKeever, the crack lightweight of Philadelphia. The men will box twenty rounds on Oct. 2.

Earthquake in Tennessee.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 13.—A heavy earthquake lasting ten seconds prevailed in lower east Tennessee, along the North Carolina state line, yesterday morning.

Roby Race Track To Reopen.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—The Roby race track, which has been closed since enjoined in June by the state authorities, will reopen for racing next Tuesday.

Republican Clubs' Convention.

York, Pa., Sept. 13.—York is in holiday attire to-day in honor of the league of republican clubs of Pennsylvania which is holding its convention here.

THAYER'S RIDICULOUS SPEECH.

The Ex-Governor's Remarks Shut Off by G. A. R. Men.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13.—Ex-Gov. John M. Thayer of Nebraska was almost hooted from the platform at the Grand Army camp fire at Phoenix hill, which was participated in by a crowd of 10,000. After talking of war times and the flag, he suddenly shot off on a new tack and commended Grover Cleveland for calling out the United States soldiers to put down the laboring man in Chicago a year ago. He called Gov. Altgeld an anarchist and denounced Eugene V. Debs for everything under the sun. Then he switched about and said: "Col. Evans, you are the next republican congressman from this district. I hoped to meet more of them here to-night. I call on you to amend the naturalization laws when you go to congress so as to shut out the Dagoes of Italy and immigrants of other European countries."

Cries of "Shut Up;" "Sit Down."

Thousands in the audience immediately shouted: "Shut up." "Sit down." Col. Evans advanced to the front of the platform and asked the audience to give Gov. Thayer a hearing. Silence reigned for a moment and he began again. He said he had made speeches over one thousand times but never before had he been interrupted. "I don't know why it was," he said. A voice from the audience responded: "You don't know any better." Gen. Thayer attempted to continue his talk on the same lines, but by this time the entire audience was in an uproar and there were cries of "take him away;" "we won't hear him." He managed to say: "I thank all the respectable people in the audience for the polite attention they have accorded me. For the disrespectful people, I have nothing but contempt," and then left the platform.

OLDEST TWINS IN AMERICA.

Louis Beach Dies of an Accident and His Brother Cannot Recover.

New York, Sept. 13.—Louis Beach, one of the oldest twins in the United States, died at his home on 34th street yesterday as a result of injuries received by being knocked down by a baker's wagon three weeks ago. His twin brother, Lucius, is dying in the New York Post Graduate hospital from the same cause. For years the two men have been familiar figures on lower Broadway. They were born on September 24, 1807, and until the accident which resulted in the death of Lucius had never been separated for a whole day. The resemblance between the twins was remarkable. Even their most intimate friends could not tell them apart. One of the strangest coincidences in their lives was in the accident which caused the death of one and a fatal shock to the other.

PROBABLY AN ELOPEMENT.

Two Girls, Two Drygoods Clerks and a Livery Rig Missing.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Emma and Grace Stevenson, 16 and 17 years of age, left their home, 50 Griffith street, Sunday morning to attend church, as they said, and have not yet returned. Charles Gustke, a clerk in Sibley's store with a salary of four dollars a week, also disappeared from his home, and as he keeps company with one of the girls it is thought he has eloped with the girls. Gustke hired a livery rig with two horses and two seats on Sunday morning. On Monday morning the liveryman received a message that he was in Spencerport and would return the horses that day, but they have not yet been seen. It is said that the couples may have been married at Spencerport and gone to the Toronto exposition.

SEARLES' LONG RIDE.

He Expects To Reach New York on His Wheel This Evening.

Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Bicyclist Searles of Chicago, who is attempting to lower the mail carriers' recent Chicago-New York record, reached this city at 3 o'clock last evening and left at 6.30. He was 18 1-2 hours ahead of the record and 23 hours behind his own schedule. He expects to reach New York this evening.

A M'CARTHYITE ELECTED.

Result in Limerick, Where Dynamiter Daly Was Disqualified.

Limerick, Sept. 13.—The election for member of parliament for the city of Limerick, in place of John Daly, whose election was declared illegal because he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment as a dynamiter, was held yesterday. F. A. O'Keefe, McCarthyite, received 1,836 votes, and J. Nolan, Parnellite, 1,752.

A NEW COMMANDER

Gen. Walker Will Head the G. A. R. This Year.

St. Paul Selected as the Place for the Next Encampment—Several Touching Scenes at Reunions—Members of Women's Relief Corps Served with Injunctions.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13.—Business and pleasure were combined by the Grand Army folks yesterday. While the delegates to the national encampment settled down to legislate for the good of the order and to elect officers for another year, the rank and file indulged in the reunions that of late years have become one of the most interesting features of the encampment week. Out at camp Caldwell and in the tents over at Jeffersonville, as well as in the school houses and other post headquarters, the survivors of state regiments and companies now scattered throughout the country met together to say "God bless you once more," and to rehearse never-to-be-forgotten incidents upon the battle field. There were many affecting scenes as comrades, who had not met since the war, recognized each other.

Friends Now; Not Foes.

There were many ex-confederates, too, that hunted up the reunion quarters of regiments with which they had engaged in battle and made themselves at home with their former foes. Thus, in scores of places throughout the city the blue and gray spent the day and evening in a fraternization that came from the heart and soul. The delegates to the encampment found it difficult to get down to business after the emotion created by the welcoming exercises.

Cried, Cheered and Hugged.

The scene that followed the closing word of the fervid oration of Henry Watterson was thrilling. The speaker was overcome with emotion and left the front of the stage. Men rose in their seats and not only cheered but yelled. They cried and cheered by turns, hugged each other and themselves and threw hats, fans and handkerchiefs into the air. But they were not prepared for the touching incident that followed thirty seconds later.

A Most Touching Incident.

Mrs. John A. Logan was seated a short distance back of the commander-in-chief's stand, and as Mr. Watterson walked away from the footlights with the tears coursing down his cheeks Gen. Lawler took his hand and presented him to Mrs. Logan. Neither could speak for a moment, and then the white-haired, motherly looking woman took his hand in both of hers, and when she found her voice said tremblingly: "I am glad I have been permitted to live to hear your speech." That was all she could say. Then she sat down and wept.

Trouble Among the Women.

A scene of a very different nature was being enacted at the opening session of the national convention of the Woman's Relief corps. For several years the branch of the organization at Canton, O., has sent as a delegate Mrs. A. F. Clark, and just as often has she been excluded on technical grounds, the opposition being led by Mrs. Sherwood of the same city and ex-president of the corps. The feud has become a celebrated one in Ohio. This year Mrs. Clark came determined to enforce her claim. Early in the morning accompanied by counsel she appeared before Judge Edwards and secured the issue of fifteen temporary injunctions restraining as many national officers of the corps from refusing her recognition as a delegate.

Sheriff at the Scene.

The papers were given to Sheriff Dinan for service and having secured admission to the secret session in Liberty hall by warning the sentinel of the majesty of the law, he proceeded to the platform and served the first injunction upon the national president Mrs. H. R. N. Wallace of Chicago. Then he was in a quandry. The other fourteen women he did not know from Adam.

She Won Her Seat.

Mrs. Wallace upon being asked to point them out, refused bluntly. Delegates mounted chairs and begged their sisters not to betray associates. But Mrs. Clark had friends on the floor and amid excitement the officials were designated until all the injunctions were served. Then Mrs. Clark took her seat and the sheriff withdrew.

Grand Stand Falls.

Another accident last night served to mar the festivities attendant upon the encampment. A grand stand in the rear of the Gualt house on the banks of the river crowded with people viewing the pyrotechnics on the Ohio river front, fell without warning and, while no one was killed, a number were more or less injured.

The New Commander-in-Chief.

The important work of the encampment yesterday was the election of Gen. I. N. Walker of Indianapolis as commander-in-chief and the selection of St. Paul as the place for holding the encampment next year.

Schooner Allen Doomed.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Sept. 13.—Wreck Master Cook, with the steam tug Mercury, has returned from the wrecked schooner Ada S. Allen at Sow and Pig's ledge. He reports that the vessel will go to pieces.

Permission To Borrow $5,000.

The revenues of New York city will be $100,000 less than at first computed.

It was not such a victory as might have been desired, but it was a victory just the same, and that is better than defeat.

A Florida editor has been arrested on the charge of libel, preferred by a baseball umpire whose decisions were the subject of criticism.

I think the world would go mad, just frenzied with strain and pressure, but for the blessed institution of Sunday.—Herford.

It is a sad criterion on the boasted enterprise of the News when they are compelled to use The Daily Press posted bulletins of the yacht race to make a story of that big event for the readers of that paper.

The Daily Press has had occasion to complain of some contemporaries filching from its columns without credit, and now this week The Westfield Leader prints a portion of a piece of poetry recently published in The Press about the sewers as though it was the original effort of The Leader editor. It is not good journalism.

It is said that a New York man started in two weeks ago to play the races with a five dollar bill, and is now worth $10,000. But just think of the other thousand poor cusses who are kicking themselves that they ever went near the seductive game. That makes a different picture.

The licensed liquor dealers of Plainfield have the right notion about the way their business should be conducted. They have organized to have those indicted who are selling without a license. If similar action should be taken in this county the hotel keepers would get along much better and the business would not rest under such a black cloud as it does at present. It has always seemed to us that the men who were paying license fees were standing in their own light when they endeavored to shield illegal sellers. Yet they have done this for a long time. Such action shows either that all are guilty of law-breaking or that they expect to need the sympathy of these guilty ones at sometime. But it would seem as though it would be to their advantage to bring to the attention of the Prosecutor of every unlicensed sale in order to protect themselves. Otherwise they must sell illegally themselves to compete with their neighbors. Such are the conditions in other lines of business If the liquor dealers would combine for the purpose of thwarting all unlicensed selling it would be more effective than any other efforts to maintain the lair and would certainly prove advantageous to all who are paying license fees.—Somerville Unionist Gazette.

LEFT TO ELIZABETH VOTERS.

Kean and Anti-Kean Men Will Fight It Out at the Primaries.

A struggle is looked for at the Republican primaries in Elizabeth tonight, says the World, when the Kean and Anti-Kean factions will have a test of their strength. The antis are marshalled by Congressman Fowler, Mayor Rankin and other prominent Republicans who do not like John Kean's candidacy, and their cry is anything to beat Kean. Ex-Congressman Kean is doing a lot of hustling and promises to give a good account of himself Friday night.

It has leaked out that there was a hot time at the meeting of the Republican City Central Committee Saturday night over the way the delegates should be selected. One faction wanted them chosen in the old way—that is, by making nominations when the primary meeting was called to order and then by a yea and nay vote or show of hands pick out the choice for delegates of those assembled there.

This plan was objected to by the Kean men, as giving too good a chance to work a snap game, and by packing the meeting at the outset and rushing the business through to prevent voters who reached the place later from getting a chance to express their preference. It was decided to keep the polls open for one hour. This, the Kean men claim, is a victory for them.

Another thing that was sat down upon was an attempt to let the committee suggest the delegates. The Kean men would not have this either, and the choice of delegates will be left entirely to the voters at the primaries.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Junior Y. M. C. A. Bicycle Club will meet tomorrow morning at 9:30 to transact important business.

Mrs. J. R. Joy and Mrs. Walter McGee are two of the women of Washington Park who have just joined the army of cyclists.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

SOCIETY NIGHT.

The Bubb Comedy Company Will Present Mother And Son Tonight.

There was a fair sized audience at Music Hall last evening to witness the play of the "Two Kids," as produced by the Bubb Comedy Company. There has been a number of popular priced companies here, but there has been none to be compared with Manager Bubb's company. The Two Kids last evening kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter from beginning to end, the El More sisters coming in for a large share of the applause. Tonight Mr. Bubb has set aside as society night, when they will produce Fannie Davenport's great dramatic success, "Mother and Son", one of the greatest society dramas on the American stage. The stage settings will be especially luxurious, and during the play a number of handsome costumes will be worn. Saturday afternoon there will be a dime matinee for the ladies and children on which occasion there will be a double bill the "Two Kids" and a comedy burlesque.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

THE FINDING OF MISS CLARK.

A New York Paper Comments on the Abilities of Detective Beck.

The Cuba Libre, a weekly periodical published in New York, recently printed the following sketch of Louis J. Beck in connection with his finding Miss Lucretia Clark, in company with Robert Campbell, The World reporter:

The Agitator takes uncommon pleasure in calling the attention of his readers to the successful endeavor of Detective Louis J. Beck to discover the whereabouts of the missing educationalist, Miss Clark, who so suddenly and unaccountably disappeared from view some days ago. The police of every big city in the country had been put upon the case, but Louis Beck, quickly planning his search, was finally able to locate the unfortunate but gifted woman in Fitchburg, Mass.

I knew Louis J. Beck when he first found employment on a New York newspaper. This is not the first time he has distinguished himself when assigned with Mr. Vincent Cooke and Mr. Isaac White, two of the brainiest men on the press of this city, to work up important cases. The work of these three men, in fact, has gained for them widespread reputations.

Beck proceeded to trace Miss Clark in a conservative, understandable way. Placed upon the case, he followed her steps from different stores, where she had left orders for the equipment of the school she intended to open in the fall, to the ferries. He talked with the Fall River line steamboat officials and discovered that a woman of Miss Clark's appearance had been a passenger on one of their boats. He called to his aid Mr. Campbell, of The New York World, and went directly to Boston.

Looking over the Boston newspapers, Beck followed up advertisements for employment. His next move was to visit every employment bureau in Boston, and by this means he traced the missing woman to the Massachusetts town. He communicated with her relatives and she was finally induced to place herself under their care. Mental abberation is given as the cause of Miss Clark's disappearance, and this reasoning out of the case is undoubtedly the true solution of the misfortune which has overwhelmed a refined and lovable woman.

To show of what genuine material Louis J. Beck is made of, I need only mention this fact:—When he opened up his handsome quarters in the Vanderbilt building, at No. 132 Nassau street, he was visited by representatives of the Spanish government and asked to serve them in the capacity of a spy throughout the country, and particularly in the southwest. The offer was alluring in a monetary sense, but this was the young detective's answer:—"I was born in a free country; my people have enjoyed the privileges of its institutions, and I'll never betray the cause of any people who are opposing a monarchical form of government." The Agitator wishes Louis Beck success in his new career.

"Old Lavender."

On Thursday evening, September 19th, Edward Harrigan and his own company will give "Old Lavender" in Music Hall. The Newark Advertiser says of Mr. Harrigan and his play:

"'Old Lavender,' with all its pathos and humorous touches of low life in a great city, found, as might be expected, splendid exponents in Edward Harrigan, its author, and his competent company, at Miner's Theatre last night. Of all of Mr. Harrigan's plays, perhaps 'Old Lavender' is the most human. And this characteristic, it may be said, is sustained throughout the whole three acts. 'Old Lavender's' fate, and his portrayal, remind the beholder strongly of Bob VanWinkle. The work of the actor author and his songs found a ready response in the audience, which was unusually demonstrative. 'Poverty's Tears Ebb and Flow' was particularly well received. The scenes of life on the river side at night and in the barroom of the sailor's hotel are capital sketches. The play of features on 'Old Lavender's' face when his brother dismisses him from his employ and calls him a thief, is clever, indeed."

CYCLING COMMENT.

Chas. Dolliver, of Manning avenue, rode his wheel to Somerville yesterday and attended the fair.

Benjamin L. Johnson, of Somerville, won the two-mile open bicycle race at the Somerset county fair at Somerville yesterday. His time was 5:25, and he won after a very close race.

Ralph Campbell, of Netherwood avenue, who left Wednesday on his wheel for Trenton, has arrived safely and sends word that he is having a splendid time. He will remain there for a week.

A crank says: "Care should be exercised in making repairs on single tube tires to have the plug patch thoroughly cleaned, as well as the puncture hole. Benzine is best for the purpose if it is handy, but if not the blade of the penknife used as a scraper will answer the purpose. A fresh, clean surface is an essential point in cementing the surfaces of the plug patch and fabric. Have the patch surface of your plug of a good large area with blunt edges, cement and adjust it properly and inflate, and it will not trouble you further."

ON AN OSTRICH FARM

A VISIT TO A TROOP OF THE BIG BIRDS IN CALIFORNIA.

Oranges the Thing They Like Best, Though They Eat Everything. The Laying Hens and the Sitting Cocks. Plucking The Feathers.

There are two ostrich farms in California. One is at Norwalk and the other at Coronado Beach, the resort just across the bay from San Diego.

Interest of tourists is divided between the little old adobe church in the Mexican village of Old San Diego, where Ramona, Helen Hunt's Indian heroine, is said to have been married and the ostrich farm kept by W. H. Bentley, within a few minutes walk of the hotel at the beach. The farm has sixty-five birds. Whether spreading their wings and tilting along in their peculiar Delsartean gait, or greedily snatching at whatever morsels come in their way, they are droll and interesting.

Everbody has heard the expression, "a stomach like an ostrich's," but nobody can quite realize the significance of the comparison until he attends a luncheon given to the creatures and watches them dispatch their food. They eat all sorts of vegetables, but above all things they like oranges.

The avidity with which they seize and gulp down whole oranges is at once startling and amusing. When their keeper appears with a fine orange in his hand there is a scramble and fluttering of great fluffy wings. The fortunate fellow who gets the fruit bolts it at once and stands blinking his satisfaction while the orange slowly travels by easy stages down his long throat. Cabbage leaves, beet tops, natural grasses, alfalfa, bits of broken shell, and gravel are all esteemed great luxuries by these ungainly birds.

A three-months-old chick stands four feet high. The female does not mature until four years old, nor the male until five. The color of the young birds is brown in general effect, and the hen retains that hue. As the cock nears maturity he turns a deep, glossy black and gets a row of pure white plumes among those of jet.

Down the front of each leg is a stripe of vivid red, and a ring of the same color surrounds the big, vicious eyes, giving the creature a peculiarly rakish and dissipated appearance. The cock is at times very ugly to manage, and the hens, too, must be carefully handled. They particulary dislike strangers, and visitors are always cautioned to keep a long way from the paddock.

As fast as the birds mate the pairs are confined in the paddock. Just after the rainy season sets in the hens begin to lay. The nest is a most primitive arrangement—merely an excavation, about three feet across, scratched in the sandy soil.

Every other day an egg is deposited in this nest until the hen is satisfied with the number. Then the cock turns to and does the principal part of the sitting. Every afternoon at 4 o'clock he relieves the hen and does not quit the nest until 8 o'clock the next morning, thereby giving the female only the short daylight watch.

The usual custom, however, is to remove the eggs to an incubator as fast as they are laid. In this case the hen will often lay thirty eggs before resting. Then, after an interval of six weeks, she resumes her work. The ostrich farmer can count upon three periods of productiveness in a year, and an aggregate of seventy-five to ninety eggs from each hen. In California the eggs hatch in forty days—two days sooner than in Africa. The unmated birds are allowed to herd, and are known as the "feather" troop.

The plucking comes once in ten months, and is a difficult undertaking. The first plucking takes place when the chick is six months old. The feathers are of inferior quality, and are used to make dusters. These first feathers are called spadones. When the chick is one year old its feathers can be used for trimmings.

At two years a good plume can be obtained, and after that the bird is a regular producer of fine plumes. As a rule each wing furnishes 104 plumes, while about 125 are obtained from the tail, making more than 300 feathers to each bird. The tail feathers are termed "boos" in ostrich slang.

The members of the regular feather troop are docile enough when undisturbed, but if provoked in the least they grow very ugly. It is necessary to blindfold the birds before the plucking. They are brought into the paddock, and while engaged in feeding on the corn or cabbage leaves which have been thrown to them, two men who have had experience in the work approach, seize a bird by the neck and quickly thrust a long hood over its head. The ostrich is then forced into an inclosure about three feet square and a gate is closed behind it. The plumes are snipped off, and the stubb of each quill is allowed to remain until the juices have been diverted into other growing feathers.

The average weight of a full grown male ostrich is 175 pounds. While to the uninitiated the difference in birds is slight, it is as apparent to the breeder as is the difference in sheep or cattle. An ostrich expert will choose a compact, large boned bird, and the California bred ostriches are fine specimens of this style.

The life of an ostrich is usually thirty years. The birds are sold at various prices. A chick commonly brings about $30, a three year old bird, $300; a fine breeding pair, $1,000.

Jean de Reszke's illness did not last long. He has just traveled, with his brother Edouard, from his polish estate to the Mont Dore on a wheel.

London's Philharmonic Society, the last stronghold of the old high pitch in music, has finally adopted the low pitch, the diaphason normal.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 5, 1895.

AN ORDINANCE

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and also concerning the compensation to be paid by said Plainfield Street Railway Company to the City of Plainfield.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield:

1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue through Watchung avenue to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at Netherwood. Also from Watchung ave., through 4th street to Grant ave.

2. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue through Front street to the city line at Dunellen.

And in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city Sept. 5, 1895, entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turn-outs and poles for proposed extension of Plainfield Street Railway dated, Sept 5, 1895," to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance; and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys under and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to; the same being such restrictions and regulations as the common council hereby deem requisite for the public interests, as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may be hereafter enacted by said common council. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the City Clerk by said company, and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Sec. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of the street, and shall construct the tracks, switches, turnouts and poles in the manner and at the points and places indicated for the same on said map.

Provided that the committee on streets have power to determine the length and location on the turnout on Watchung ave. near North ave. and also have power to locate the track of said railroad on the East side of Watchung avenue from present terminus to and beyond the railroad bridge if said committee deem such location best for all interested.

Sec. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets, the paving or other surface materials of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double tracks, or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks" shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of a street, the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's tracks and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervision of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinabove specified may be done or made by or under the direction of said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repair, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Sec. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when removing said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its officers, servants, agents or employes shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the same as aforesaid; in which latter case the said company shall pay its pro rata of the expense of the removal of said snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for every city block on which any such violation shall take place but said penalty shall not aggregate more than one hundred dollars in any one day; said penalties to be paid to the city by the said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employees so offending for each and every offence.

Sec. 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations, provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city, entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars", approved April 27, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as a part of this ordinance.

Sec. 6. That the guage of the tracks of said company to be hereafter laid shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the other tracks of said company already laid may be made of the same guage. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the common council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity, and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs, and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than ten miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks.

For violation of any of the provisions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue not exceeding one hundred dollars on any one conviction.

Sec 7. That said company shall on or before the first day of December, 1895, equip each street railway car by it operated or run within the city of Plainfield, with fenders of the most improved pattern, to be selected by a commission of 3 appointed by the Mayor, and so attached to the car as best to protect from injury persons or vehicles using the streets or riding on the said cars; that after said last mentioned date no street railway car, the motive power of which is electricity, shall be operated or run upon any of the streets of said city, unless such car is equipped with fenders as above required, and in case any such car is operated or run contrary thereto the said company and every person or persons who shall either as president, manager, conductor or motorman or otherwise be engaged in so operating or running any such car shall be deemed to have violated this section and on conviction shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each day during which such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one conviction.

Sec. 8. The said company shall build or construct its extensions in the order specified in Sec. 1 and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route one of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within nine months after the passage of this ordinance, and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route two of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within twelve months after the passage of this ordinance; or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid daily and every day for the space of three consecutive months, all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance, shall thereupon cease and determine, and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such right, power and privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases the common council expressly reserve the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the federal courts in New Jersey, shall not be included within the 9 and 12 months within which the said extensions are to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Sec 9. The said company shall for each and every mile of street occupied by its tracks laid already or that shall hereby be laid by said Company, whether under the provisions of the ordinance hereinabove referred to, approved April 27, 1891, or the amendment thereof approved May 4, 1892, or under the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks", approved Oct. 4, 1892, or under this ordinance, or under any other ordinance, and also for every mile of street occupied by tracks that may be owned or operated or that may be hereafter owned or operated by said company within the limits of the city of Plainfield, pay or cause to be paid to the collector of taxes of said city for the use of the said city, the following sums, to wit: For the year beginning Jan. 1, 1896, fifty dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1897, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1898, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1899, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1900, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1901, one hundred and twenty-five dollars a mile, for each and every mile of track; said payments to be made each and every year on or before the last day of each year.

For the years succeeding that beginning 1901 the said company shall pay at the same rate as for the year 1901, provided that when the gross receipts in any one year from the entire system within the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield shall equal or exceed eighty thousand Dollars, then for that year and annually thereafter, the said company shall pay annually to said city collector for the use of said city five per cent. of the gross earnings of said company, and said gross earnings shall be construed to include all earnings of said company and full proportion on all earnings on through traffic to be calculated according to the proportion between the entire length of the journey and the number of miles travelled within the limits of the city of Plainfield or the borough of North Plainfield or both as the case may be. That to enable the city to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of said company the books of the company shall be open to inspection by the finance committee of the common council or such other person or persons as the common council shall for that purpose designate.

The payment provided for in this section shall be in lieu of all license fees for cars, whether provided for in prior ordinances or not, and is intended to be in the nature of a franchise tax.

Sec. 10. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks, and that no luggage other than hand luggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company or and other cars passing over said tracks. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prevent the company from carrying U. S. mail. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company, and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any of said street corners, and said company shall cause the cars to come to a full stop and sound the gong or bell immediately before turning any curve on road now constructed or to be constructed. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Sec. 11. That in case the said company shall lease its tracks or any portion of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company will cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer, a stipulation and agreement and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or attempted to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto, and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer thereof to be made, so that no person or corporations shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions as herein provided.

Sec. 12. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby, shall as a condition precedent file with the city clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company required to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance of said company, its successors or assigns, of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action suit or proceeding.

Sec. 13. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the common council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on part of said company to be kept, observed or performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by said company, its successors or assigns.

Sec. 14. The company shall file with the city clerk, within thirty days next after the passage of this ordinance their acceptance, under their corporate seal and signed by their president, of the terms and provisions, restrictions, and regulations hereof, and every one of them, and, in default thereof, it shall be understood and held that they decline to accept the same, and thereupon all rights, powers and privileges, to them granted thereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

A LOSS OF $80,000,000!!!

Labor-saving inventions or discoveries have often been violently opposed on the ground that they take workingmen's bread out of their mouths. Although experience has shown the fallacy of that theory the feeling, or fear, was natural.

But it is not so much the lack of work as the inability to work that causes poverty and suffering. In England and Wales every workingman averages ten days of sickness every year, with a total loss of wages for all of about $80,000,000 per year. In this country the loss is much greater. In all countries the prevailing disease is indigestion and dyspepsia and its consequences—such as rheumatism, and other ailments resulting from impure blood; a result of dyspepsia.

No thoroug, rapid and trustworthy cure for this universal and obstinate malady existed until the Mt. Lebanon (N. Y.) Community of Shakers placed upon the market their now famous remedy called the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It is prepared from roots and herbs cultivated solely by them.

Nothing more certain, safe and palatable can be imagined. It expels the impurities from the body by means of the bowels, kidneys and skin, and imparts vigor and tone to the stomach—upon whose proper action all our strength, activity and endurance depends. For many years the Shakers have given earnest attention to this subject, and their final success is thankfully admitted by the multitudes who have been cured by the Cordial after all other means have failed. Their high reputation for skill as herbalists, for honesty and religious sincerity guarantees whatever they recommend.

No invention can ever take your work from you if you are able to work. Health and strength are the vital considerations.

In order to find whether the Shaker Digestive Cordial is adapted to your case try a small bottle. Its effect is immediate. For sale by nearly all druggists.

A CHANCE MEETING.

BY THE DUCHESS.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

"Why the deuce does she come if she can't stand me?" says Lansdale to himself, with pardonable irritation, and, falling into her mood, he, too, refrains from speech, until the sound of the oars and the musical dashing of the water against the sides of the many islands by which they go, is all that breaks their silence.

They land at Garnish Island, and go up to see the Martello tower, an old man with the keys following them. And perhaps it adds to Lansdale's sense of injustice that Lilian talks gayly to this old ancient, laughing her soft, musical laugh, and going into ecstasies with him, over the magnificent view below. She had hitherto seemed unsympathetic to Lansdale, who has fallen in love with Glengariff, but now he knows how full and deep is her appreciation of it. And, indeed, the living picture that lies before them could hardly be surpassed—the soft, clear bay, with its blue waters rippling round its many islets, the lovely woods growing to the water's edge; the grand old mountains, severe, mysterious, clad with their purple heather, and the glimpse of Glengariff Castle amidst the foliage. Everything seems so old, so still, that it seems a relief when, from a little rock crowded with sleepy gulls that have seemed for the last five minutes part of it, the grey birds suddenly rise as if with one consent, and float away like fairy visions across the dark bosom of the water.

"Shall we row once more to Proudly River?" says Lansdale, when they are again in the boat.

"Yes. It is very pretty there," says Lilian, with enthusiasm.

"Better have some luncheon on our way."

"I think I should like something to eat," says Lilian, absently. Geoffrey could have shaken her.

"Look here," says he, presently laying down his oars. They have finished luncheon and Lilian is amusing herself

"LET'S HAVE IT OUT."

throwing the scraps to the big white swan, who always follows them in their excursions, with a view no doubt to luncheon on his own part. "Let's have it out."

"Have what out?" She has reddened, however.

"Well, all this absurd nonsense. You thought I came here in an underhand sort of way to see you—to 'boldly' judge of you?"

"Mr. Lansdale!"

"You did think that." There is a touch of sterness in his voice that angers her.

"Well, it looked very like it," says she, defiantly.

"Come to that, why should I not have thought that you had come here to see, to judge of me?"

Miss Blake frowns.

"That is a rude speech," says she, coldly.

"Do you wish to have a monopoly of the rudeness then? However, I merely made that remark to give you the chance of seeing how things might look from the other point of view."

"You will take it back, however," with a touch of hauteur.

"Certainly I consider it quite as unlikely that you should act in that way as that"—deliberately—"I should. Besides, to set your mind quite at rest, I may as well tell you that I came here principally to meet, not you," with a slight smile that is a little ironical, "but a friend of mine, who promised to be here this week."

"He is not very punctual," says Lilian, indifferently.

"She seldom is," with a shrug. "However, I have had a line to say she will be here to-day."

"Oh!" All her self-possession does not avail her to hide the distinct start of surprise that follows on his words.

"I daresay you have heard of her," goes on Lansdale. "Letty Linton—she is a distant cousin of mine, and I suppose of yours, too."

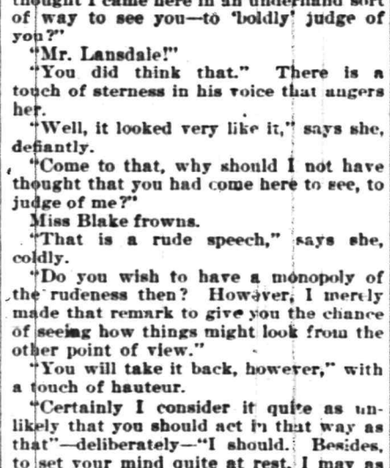
"I don't think so," coldly. "Miss Linton? Yes. I believe Aunt Bessie has met her in England. A tall girl? and"—slight hesitation—"good-looking?"

"More than that."

"Pretty?"

"Lovely!" says Lansdale, with enthusiasm.

Silence. Miss Blake has gone back to the feeding of the attendant swan, and Geoffrey seems filled with agreeable thoughts.



FASTENS IT NEAR HER FAIR THROAT.

III.

"What hour do you expect Miss Linton to arrive?" asks Lilian, presently.

"I daresay she has come by now; it is also possible she may not have come at all. I have told you she is not famed for punctuality."

"Then I think you had better get back as soon as you can to meet her. She may by chance be punctual this time."

"Better have a last look at the river first," carelessly.

"I think not, and besides I am sure the mist is thickening; it will be a wet night."

"Well, it looks like it," says Lansdale, with a glance above; after which he rows her back in silence to the landing slip.

Lilian runs lightly up to her room and throws herself into a chair. After all what a fool she has been, or rather Aunt Bessie has. Of course he has been engaged all this time to that other girl. And yet—he had not been in such over-great hurry to get back to meet her. Still, he had called her lovely. Lovely! she recalls a photograph of Miss Linton belonging to Aunt Bessie, and surely a face that is all grey eyes, set very widely apart, and a nose that distinctly turns up could hardly be called that. Lovers must be blind indeed, and Mr. Lansdale the blindest of all. Suddenly an angry desire to show him what might honestly be called—at all events—pretty, seizes upon her. She pulls down her hair, and does it up again in her most coquettish style. Takes out her latest silk blouse—a charming thing, all pale-blue, with a little chiffon of the same color, and tries it on. Yes, it will do! She adds a skirt to it, fastens her neck-band with the little diamond star papa had given her on her last birthday, and finally, seeing a pale-pink rose pushing its way through the window as though to get a peep at her (and no wonder, too!) she plucks it, and fastens it near her fair and slender throat.

Just at this moment Aunt Bessie opens the door.

"What! dressed already?" says she. The surprise is involuntary, but she quickly suppresses it. She has caught the situation. "Wise child! How I wish I were you. Now you can really rest before dinner. And how sweet you look, dearest."

Mrs. Musgrave is a student of nature. She is quite aware that to tell any girl in the world she is looking charming is a greater help to her appearance than even a new frock from Worth.

"We came in early. Mr. Lansdale is expecting a friend this evening."

"Letty Linton? Yes, she has come. She and Geoffrey are old friends."

"And dear ones apparently."

"Are they?" asks Aunt Bessie the wise.

In spite of the early dressing, Lilian and her aunt arrive a little late in the dining-room. Their own special table is waiting for them, as well as the man who attends on them, and who regards them with a reproachful eye—but Lilian scarcely notices his mild reproof. Her glance has wandered instinctively to the small table a little beyond hers, where four people are sitting. Mrs. Musgrave is nodding to them. There is an elderly lady, very fat, very good-humored-looking; a girl—yes, certainly her nose has a heavenward tilt; a young man with brown eyes and a rather weak mouth, who is Captain Westroph, and Geoffrey Lansdale.

A parti carree! And all seem very merry. The waiter is pouring out champagne, and Lansdale, leaning a little over the table, is evidently telling some absurd story—telling it to the party generally, of course, but certainly more particularly to Miss Linton. The lamp, daintily shaded with pink, casts a soft glow on the four faces. Presently a little low chorus of laughter arises. The story has come to a delightful finish!

How happy he—they all seem!

When dinner is over, the fat lady rises and comes toward Mrs. Musgrave's table.

"Dear Mrs. Musgrave," she says, in tones that suit her size, "you must introduce me to your niece." She holds out her hand to Lilian, who tries to grasp it. "We are connections, I think. And this is my girl—Letty."

"How d'ye do?" says that young lady, in a loud, clear tone, and with the friendliest smile at Lilian. "Geoff's told me all about you. Great chums you and he—eh?"

"Really, Miss Linton, I——"

When next afternoon Geoffrey Lansdale coming up to Lilian asks her to go for a row with him, it is with difficulty she suppresses her astonishment. There is a touch of scorn in her eyes as she answers him, although her voice is studiously ordinary:

"Are you not going with Miss Linton?" asks she.

"She wouldn't come. She hates boating. Makes her ill, she says."

Lilian hesitates for a moment. To refuse now, after all these days, will seem like pique. Yes, whatever it costs her, she must keep up the present state of things to the end. There is only to-day—to-morrow she will be far away from him. A quick, sharp sigh comes in the most unaccountable way, on the head of this thought.

"SHE DOES NOT RAISE HER EYES."

"I should like to go very much," says she, quietly; "I love the sea."

"Your only love?" with a careless smile, yet his eyes search her face for the answer.

"Oh, yes," says she, smiling too, but absently.

"We shall have our last look at Proudly River after all," says he, as they push off. And after a little while, having rounded the bit of wooded land, they enter the narrow strip of water that leads to the mouth of the river. Down this the boat glides smoothly, passing by gaunt black rocks that guard it on either side, and that are overhung with ivy and topped by giant fir trees. And now here at last is the river, dashing, foaming over its stones, gleaming like snow in the fitful sunshine that breaks through, ... sending green tints upwards ... the light every now and then, but rushing always, as all rivers do, to their eternal home in the ocean.

"Tell me," says Lansdale, abruptly, "why did you change your mind about going home, that day—after I arrived?"

He had heard them.

"I often change my mind," says she, coldly.

"Naturally. But why on that particular occasion?" She makes no answer to this, and seeing she will not, he goes on, almost with the avowed determination of provoking her.

"Why did you want to go?" says he. "Was it perhaps to prepare a welcome for me? You knew, of course, that I meant to pay a visit to your mother."

"I," she stops, grows crimson, and her eyes flash. "If you will insist on knowing," she says, "I left home to avoid meeting you."

A pause.

"What a great deal of trouble to take about nothing," says he at last. "I can only express my regret at having driven you to such extremes to get rid of me. It is very good of you to have made matters so clear—as otherwise I might still have gone on to see—your mother."

"I hope you will do that still," says Lilian, who is now very pale. Her voice is trembling. "I am sorry I said anything about it. It—it all sounds so inhospitable. You will come and stay with us?"

"I think not, thank you." He has taken up his oars again. "The river is beautiful here, is it not? Shall we stay a little longer, or——"

"No. Let us go home," says she, in a low tone. She does not raise her eyes. They are full of tears.

(To be concluded.)

LOOK IN THE CLOSET

SEE if you can't find some old clothes that you have put aside because of the worn-out look they have, or some clothes that are badly spotted.

We want you to bring any old clothes of that sort to us—or better yet—we'll send for them.

We propose to clean those clothes—or to dye them for you—either way to make them wearable. This is an economical suggestion.

We take out grease spots so they stay out, or we dye clothes with a color that wears. We charge as little as possible for the work.

Just a dollar or two—and you'll have a lot of new clothes.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—VanEmburgh & Son offer a new lot of jelly glasses for 25 cts per dozen.

—Rev. L. E. Livermore, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, will preach in the Seventh-day Baptist church tomorrow morning, in the absence of Rev. Dr. Lewis.

—The Victor Wheelmen met and held a regular monthly meeting last evening at the home of Israel Jones, of Washington avenue. Nothing but routine business was transacted.

—The Holy Cross Brotherhood of St. Andrew's met last evening in the parish rooms and transacted routine business. The entertainment committee reported that an entertainment will be given on October 4th.

—The State Republican Executive Committee met in Newark last night and transacted important business. H. N. Spencer, of North Plainfield, represented Somerset county. The next meeting will be held in Trenton September 19th.

A Case of Memory.

It was on Harrison avenue, and the woman of the house sat on the side veranda sewing.

"Madam," began the man, who had entered the yard after taking a long survey of the premises from the gate, "do you remember my calling here about three years ago?"

"Yes, sir," she promptly replied.

"Ah! I am very glad. Yes, I called here about three years ago. You were sitting just about where you are now."

"Yes, sir."

"Do you remember of my telling you that men had robbed and swindled and deceived me?"

"I do?"

"That misfortune had overtaken me and that my years had been one long struggle with adversity?"

"I do."

"That my wife lost her life in the great Chicago fire, and my four darling children were drowned in the Johnstown flood?"

"I do."

"Ah! I thank you for remembering these things! Perhaps you also remember that I said that I was hungry and sadly in need of clothing?"

"I do?"

"Ah! Yes! How it touches my heart that you remember! And now, madam you of course remember what you did for me?"

"I do," replied the woman. "I whistled for the dog. He came around the corner of the house. You had ten feet the start of him, but he got one of your coat tails as you passed through the gate. The dog is still here and in good spirits. Shall I whistle him up, or do you want to get out gracefully?"

"Gracefully, madam — gracefully!" replied the man as he began moving away. "Yes'm—thanks—three years—you remember—so do I—so would the dog—good-by!"—Detroit Free Press.

STRANGE AMERICAN CUSTOMS.

A Matter of Considerable Surprise to Foreign Tourists.

"I have been in America but two days," said the talkative foreigner, "but already I have become impressed with some of the strange customs of the country."

"Indeed! What particular customs do you refer to?"

"Well, for one thing, I had not been ashore for more than one hour when a spruce official looking man came up to me. He showed a silver badge of some sort and said he was a collector of the internal revenue. He asked if I had paid my side whisker license yet. I told him that I didn't know side whiskers were taxed in America. He said they were, and that the tax was $4 a year. He added that I might consider myself lucky that he did not add 25 per cent. for cost of collection, because it was my duty to report at City Hall and pay the tax, without putting the nation to the expense of sending a collector after the money."

"You paid him, did you?"

"Oh, yes, and I was quite glad that I did not wear a full beard. He said the assessments on full beards was $10 per chin. Why do you have such odd taxes in America? Is it so very expensive to run a republican government?"

"It costs quite a good deal. But was that your only experience?"

"No, it wasn't. About two hours later another man approached me, asked me if I had yet procured the Government permit entitling me to wear trousers of such a wide stripe as those I had on. It was the same pair I'm wearing now. I asked what the blamed Government would do if I refused to pay for such a permit. He replied that the fee for the permit was so excessively small that no one tried to evade payment. It was only $2 he said. The penalty was the confiscation of the trousers, and it would be his painful duty to take me to the nearest police station and take possession of my garments in the name of the United States Government if I manifested any further hesitancy about producing the $2. As I did not want a scene, I paid him the money and he left."

"You would have done well to have allowed him to take you to the police station."

"Why?"

"You could have told your story, and he would have been locked up on a charge of swindling."

"Do you mean to say that he was not an official of the Government?"

"That's what I mean."

"But he said he was."

"I'm very much afraid that he didn't speak the truth."

"But how about the other?'

"He was a fraud, too."

"But he showed me his badge."

"That cuts no ice."

"I beg pardon! It doesn't do what?"

"I said it cut no ice. I meant that it was of no significance. Thieves can get badges when they deem it necessary to use them in their business."

"But who are the real officers who issue permits to wear striped trousers, and who receive the tax on side whiskers?"

"There are no such officers."

"And no such taxes?"

"No."

"Then they both lied?"

"Yes."

"Well, I never would have thought it. Do you suppose that others will try to do me up in this way?"

"It would not surprise me in the least."

"Allow me to thank you for putting me on my guard, sir. I pay no more taxes except at the City Hall. Good-day, sir."—Harper's Bazar.

COMMON COUNCIL IN SESSION ONLY A FEW MINUTES LAST NIGHT.

Sewage Bed Ordidance Reconsidered and Passed the Second Time to Rectify the News' Mistake of Not Publishing It.

One of the shortest sessions of the City Council on record was the special one held last night. It was nearly 8:30 before a quorum was present. Councilmen Fisk, Erickson. Dumont, Ginna, Bird and President See answered to the roll call by Clerk MacMurray. The latter then read the call of the meeting which was to reconsider the resolution adopted September 5th in regard to advertising for bids to construct the sewage beds, on account of the failure of the News to publish it within the time prescribed by law.

Mr. Erickson offered a resolution that the proposals for constructing the sewage beds, etc., be readvertised and the date of receiving the same be amended from September 23d to September 30th.

It was adopted, all voting for the resolution. Mr. Dumont asked the City Clerk if he had notified the newspapers in regard to the publishing of the ordinance, and he replied that he had not. Mr. Dumont then stated that he thought they should be notified at all times as they could hardly be expected to know about those matters. If they were notified and then failed to comply they should receive no compensation. Mr. Erickson offered a resolution that the committee on printing be instructed to have plans and specifications for sewer proposals printed as amended. It was so ordered and the meeting adjourned.

Appropriated Red Men's Money.

John Gehring, who is charged with misappropriating the funds of Rahway Tribe, Order of Red Men, has been admitted to bail in $200, George Andelfinger and Gehring's mother becoming his security. Gehring was chairman of the committee of arrangements for the Red Men's picnic on July 4th, and had the handling of the receipts and the payment of all the bills. The balance he was to turn over to the treasurer. The society has been trying since the picnic to get Gehring to make a settlement with it, but he has not done so. It is alleged that several bills which he was supposed to have paid were left unpaid.

Wonderful Production.

For the prices of admission asked the Bubb Comedy company are certainly giving wonderful performances at Music Hall this week. Tonight will be the last performance to be given in this city by this clever company of artists on which occasion they will present the strong comedy drama, "A Noble Outcast," one of the best plays in the company's repertoire. As this will also be the last appearance here of the famous El More sisters they have prepared an excellent programme of specialties for this evening.

Filled With the Bad.

Some man filled with devilish ness drove through Grandview avenue, from Somerset street to Westervelt avenue, and broke all but one of the incandescent electric globes with the butt of his whip. Several persons saw him, but were unable to see who he was or even catch him.

An Odd Explosion.

While Henry Frentz, of Scotch Plains, was riding his wheel from Fanwood to his home Thursday night, his cycle lamp exploded and went into a thousand pieces. Mr. Frentz escaped injury.

Entertained at Scotch Plains.

The Misses Frentz, of Scotch Plains, entertained a few friends from Plainfield last evening. Dancing was the principal feature of the evening. Those in the party were Miss Eva Wilkins, Arthur Mosher and Arthur Heath.

Ready for the Winter Campaign.

The North Plainfield Cadets will meet in the schoolhouse for drill on Monday evening. R. A. Frey, a lieutenant in the New York militia, will act as drill master.

John G. Mauger Editor of the Sunbeam, Seligman, Mo., who named Grover Cleveland for the Presidency in November 1882, while he was Mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., is enthusiastic in his praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager."

LAST SAD RITES.

Funeral Services Over the Remains of the Late Rowland M. Stover.

The funeral services of the late Rowland M. Stover were held from his late residence on East Ninth street yesterday afternoon. The officiating clergyman was Rev. E. M. Rodman who made the Episcopal service seem very impressive. The parlors were filled with friends and relatives.

The music was furnished by a trio composed of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, L. Groff Boyer and E. E. Runyon, which rendered "Abide With Me" and "Rock of Ages" in a very impressive manner.

The floral tributes were very beautiful. The casket was covered with white asters and a large bunch of pink sweet pease. There was also a wreath of pink and white roses, a crown of white roses and several other handsome pieces.

The remains were taken on the 10:04 train for Greenwood cemetery this morning for interment.

A HORSE IN THE SEWER AGAIN.

George Squires Had a Tangled Up Affair Last Night.

George Squires, of North Plainfield, met with an accident last night in front of Mrs. Flynn's house on Liberty street while out driving with a horse and buggy. An excavation had been made at that point for the house connection to the sewer, and Mr. Squires without noticing any danger drove the horse close to the opening. The latter slipped and fell on his side. Squires immediately jumped from the wagon and with the assistance of Edward Martin and a few others succeeded in getting the animal on his feet, but just when they thought the horse was safe he made a turn and fell into the hole again, landing on all four feet.

Two or three shovels were procured and before the horse could be rescued it was found necessary to throw dirt into the opening. After this was done the horse walked out with ease. Excepting a few scratches on the animal there was no damage.

PRIAMRY TEACHERS.

An Organization Perfected to Teach Better Methods.

A number of ladies interested in primary classes in the various Sunday-schools met at the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday and formed a Primary Teachers' Union, with Miss Nettie Beeching president. The purpose of the union is to draw together all Sunday-school teachers who have primary classes or classes of young scholars in a meeting once a week for the study of the lesson and of primary methods. The first meeting of the union will beld at the Y. M. C. A. buiiding on Monday afternoon next at four o'clock. Miss Beeching will teach the lesson for September 22d. All teachers, such as are mentioned above, will be welcome at the meetings of the union.

Juniors at Work Once More.

The Junior Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church began their meetings again yesterday afternoon, after the summer vacation, with a prayer meeting and sociable. The prayer meeting was led by the superintendent, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowrie, and was a very helpful one. The children then marched into the next room where cake and lemonade were served and all enjoyed a social time. This part of the afternoon's programme was arranged by the superintendent and her assistant, Miss Emma V. Fish.

The Bicycle Thief Captured.

The bicycle is back in its accustomed quarters in Frueht's store and Frank McCommey, its colored kidnapper, is in jail. He was arrested at Newark yesterday by Chief Grant and the Newark authorities, and this morning Sergeant Kiely brought him to Plainfield where he was arraigned before Justice Newcorn. He pleaded guilty and was held for the grand jury.

Bible Class to Reorganize.

The old Berean Bible Class, of Warren chapel, will meet Sunday afternoon under the charge of the pastor, Rev. Mr. McKelvey, and its hoped that every person who ever attended the class will be there and bring their friends.

Auction at Hotel Netherwood.

An auction was held by T. J. Carey at the Hotel Netherwood yesterday and the silverware, piazza chairs and stable fixtures sold. A good price was secured for all.

—Alois Herold, one of the oldest and most prominent German citizens in Rahway, and once a resident of Plainfield, died Tuesday at his home in Rahway.

THE COGS ALL FIT IN NOW.

CRESCENT'S BOARD OF GOVERNORS GET DOWN TO WORK.

Officers Elected and Committees Appointed—Social Matters to Be Looked After—Talk of a Fall Meet on Crescent Oval.

Plainfield is going to have a live bicycle club if the present efforts of the Crescent Wheelmen receive the success they deserve. The new board of governors met last evening for organization and election of officers. The following very efficient list was chosen:

President, Clarence E. Teel; vice-president, Vincent W. Nash; secretary, Fred A. Pope; treasurer, Louis G. Timpson.

William VanSickle was appointed chairman of the house committee with the following assistants: Wheaton S. Lowrie, Louis G. Timpson, Richard Williams, Nathan Titsworth and Richard Stevens.

V. W. Nash, the presiding officer, next appointed an entertainment committee consisting of Fred A. Pope, Herbert Schutt and John Petrie. Two others are to be appointed later.

It was announced that the board of governors would provide refreshments at their own expense for the club meeting which takes place next Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. The board will meet the same evening at half-past seven.

Four new members were elected, and several more will join next Wednesday. Captain Charles C. Lister announced the following as his staff: First Lieutenant, Nathan Titsworth; second lieutenant, Harry VanEmburg; Bugler, W. J. Stephenson. The color bearer will be appointed later.

Although no action was taken at the meeting, there is some talk among the members of having a local meet or field day on the oval this fall. Several of the local dealers have agreed to offer prizes should such a meet be arranged. The scheme seems to find general favor and will probably be introduced at the next meeting.

SIXTH STREET SOCIABILITY.

Miss Richardson Entertains a Few Friends At Her Home.

It may have been cool out doors last night, but the warm hospitality of Miss Cora Richardson, of East Sixth street, left no coolness at the little social gathering held at her house last evening in honor of her friend, Miss Kittie Wann, of Jersey City. A most enjoyable evening was spent in dancing, games and conversation and a daintily served collation ended the evening's pleasure. Those present were the Misses May Coyn, of Jersey City, Charlotte Messersmith, Alice Jenkins, Mamie Steiner, May Giles, Jennie Giles, Lizzie W. Stafford and Cora Dayton, of New Market, Herbert Fletcher, of Dunellen, William Slate, of Dunellen, Fred Haynes, of New Market, James A. Stafford, Judson R. Giles, Bert Steiner, John Steiner and Will Woodland.

GREAT DAY ON THE WATER.

Plainfielders Have Fun if They Don't See the Race.

Undaunted by the failure of the Valkyrie to enter the lists with Defender Thursday, the Plainfielders who went to sea on the ocean tug Evarts had a day of pleasure unmarred except by semi-occasional spasms of illness of a rather fatiguing nature. The run of fifteen miles to leeward from the Sandy Hook Lightship was very trying to most on board, as the sun beat down relentlessly and the tug ran away from every vestage of breeze that was stirring.

The roll of the sea laid low about half the party at one time, including the quartermaster—but it never touched the major. The commissary department was admirably conducted, although the quartermaster at one time felt so very tired of this weary world that he was dispensing two sandwiches and thirty cents in change for a quarter.

By this example of generosity it will be understood that no one was "shaved." Among the prominent guests present was the Central Railroad's "star," Ben Johnson.

UNION WILL BE SPLIT UP.

KEAN AND VOORHEES BOTH WIN DELEGATES LAST NIGHT.

Republican Primaries Held in Several Towns Last Night—Great Hustling for Both Candidates—Plainfield Choose Later

Senator Voorhees swept Elizabeth last night at the Republican primaries for delegates to the State Convention. From the latest returns he has carried the Third, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh and Twelfth wards. Kean carried the First and Sixth wards. This will give Kean two delegates from Elizabeth to Voorhees' thirteen. The Second and Fourth wards were for Maurice A. Rodgers, who thus gets three delegates.

Kean came out ahead in Rahway, securing three delegates to Voorhees' two.

President Barr, of the City Council, as a Voorhees delegate, was beaten in the First ward. Congressman Fowler and William H. Corbin triumphed in the Eleventh, while Mayor Rankin beat Capt. Ogden in the Ninth ward.

Kean captures Westfield's two delegates and one in Union Township.

It now looks as if Union County will be pretty evenly divided between Kean and Voorhees.

The Republican leaders were all in the saddle at Elizabeth yesterday urging the voters to go to the primaries for the State Convention.

The chief battle was in the banner Republican ward—the Eleventh—where Congressman Fowler and William H. Corbin, counsel for the Senate Investigating Committee, were pitted as Voorhees delegates against ex-Aldermen William P. Thomas and James A. Little, the John Kean delegates. An unprecedented vote was polled at this primary, as both factions were working like beavers.

The Republican primaries were held at Rahway also last night. There was a large attendance at each voting place. The supporters of Kean and Voorhees were hustlers and nothing was left undone to get the people out in each ward. In the First ward, William H. Miller, for Voorhees, defeated George Heath, for Kean, by two majority in a cast of seventy four votes. In the Second ward Freeholder John Farrell, Kean, carried the ward by one vote over Water Commissioner Daniel G. Winston, Voorhees. The Third ward, the ward of Editor Rollinson, ex-Senator Braval, Voorhees, carried over ex-Assemblyman F. L. Sheldon, Kean man, by a majority of eight.

In the Fourth ward Mayor J. J. Daly, Kean, defeated George P. Edgar, Voorhees. In the Fifth ward Seymour Gibbons, Kean, defeated Harry W. Gibbons, Voorhees, by eight votes out of a total of fifty-six.

Daniel G. Winston, Voorhees delegate, will contest the seat of Freeholder Farrell, on the ground of voting non-residents and Democrats.

From Clark township comes the news that Benjamin King, a Voorhees delegate, was elected.

Sheriff Kyte a Delegate.

The Republican primary of Fanwood Township was held last evening in Excelsior Hall. John Robinson was made chairman and E. L. Hand secretary. Sheriff George Kyte was elected as delegate to the State convention to be held at Trenton. A. D. Beekon was elected alternate.

Junior Bicyclists Meet.

The Junior Y. M. C. A. Bicycle Club met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms this morning at 9:40. D. A. MacPhie presided. Eleven out of the forty members of the club were present and adopted the senior constitution and bylaws. Another meeting will be held next Saturday morning at 9:30 to decide on a run for the day. It is expected that they will go to Roselle to see the baseball team play ball.

Three Harness Thieves Sentenced.

In the Union County Court yesterday morning Judge McCormick sentenced John Brady, Thomas Powers and Thomas Hogan, the thieves who stole a set of harness belonging to W. W. Chester, to six months each in the county jail.

Irving W. Larimore, physical director of Y. M. C.A., Des Moines, Iowa, says he can conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm to athletes, gymnasts, bicyclists, football players and the profession in general for bruises, sprains and dislocations; also for soreness and stiffness of the muscles. When applied before the parts become swollen it will effect a cure in one half the time usually required. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ANOTHER ATTEMPTED HOLDUP.

Hackman John Lynch Plied the Whip and Escaped the Highwaymen.

Had it been in the seventeenth century and two men had tried to waylay a carriage at night, nothing would have been thought of it, but when that happens only a short distance outside of the city of Plainfield then excitement may be expected. Last evening, hackman John Lynch, took two passengers from the North Avenue station to the Stelle residence on Park avenue. The night was clear and cold and the horse that Lynch was driving was frisky, so Lynch's surrey went down Park avenue at a fast gait. He had just passed the woods and pulled his coat tighter about him when he noticed two men directly in front of him—one crouching in the road and the other in the gutter. The individual in the road made a jump and tried to seize the horse by the head. Down came the whip on the animal's back and she jumped forward, leaving the would-be highwaymen far in the rear. Lynch heard them yelling and plied his whip until he had placed a safe distance between himself and the men.

When seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning, Lynch said he had no idea who the men were or what they looked like as it was very dark. He thought, though, that it was some one that knew him and was waiting for his return from Stelle's. But for the fact that his horse was going at a lively pace the highwaymen would have probably been successful.

A Mission Worker In The Slums.

A very interesting meeting will take place in the Congregational church tomorrow evening under the chrrge of the Christian Endeavor Society. William Hauptman, of the Chinatown Mid-night mission, will make the address. Mr. Hauptman is a very energetic worker in the New York missions. He was at one time an infidel, a follower of Ingersoll, but was converted. He was in charge of the Living Waters mission on Christie street, and is now preparing to work his way through Oberlin College and study for the ministery. He was offered a scholarship but refused it.

The Hose Got the Best of Them.

The hose in front of V. L. Frazee's grocery on West Front street, from which the sewer trench was filled with water, got the better of the Italians who were in charge of it, yesterday afternoon, and began squirming about the street, giving an involuntary bath to the spectators. The Italian at the hydrant tried to turn it off but turned it on further instead. At last, somebody who understood its workings, stopped the water.

Liquor Men Choose Delegates.

The Liquor Dealers' Association met yesterday afternoon at the Casino on East Second street. Eleven out of the fifteen members were present. The principal object of the meeting was the choosing of delegates to attend the State convention to be held in Paterson, Tuesday, September 16th. Those selected were: John Rafferty, Henry Haurand, Thomas Parker, Henry Wedemeyer and Jacob Blimm.

To Reopen Soon.

H. C. Hadley, who was agent for the Hallet & Davis pianos in Plainfield some time ago, has returned from Brooklyn and will reopen his office about October 1st. The location has not yet been decided upon.

Last of the Season.

The band concert is to take place on Monday evening at the corner of Franklin place and LaGrande avenue. It will be the last of the season, so don't fail to attend. The programme will be printed in Monday's Daily Press.

Odd Fellows Funeral.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I.O.O.F., will conduct an Odd Fellows funeral tomorrow over the remains of the late Lewis B. Mulford. All Odd Fellows are welcome to join Queen City in the ceremonies.

STOPPED BY HIGHWAYMEN.

FRANK MANCHESTER HAD AN EXCITING ADVENTURE LAST NIGHT.

Was Riding From Westfield on His Bicycle, When an Attempt Was Made to Stop Him Near Fanwood—Escaped Bruised.

It is about time that the Italian population of the towns and cities are taught a lesson that they will not forget. Frequently women are assaulted, men are accosted and killed, and too often they insult in a most dastardly manner respectable people.

A case of this kind occurred last night about eight o'clock when Frank Manchester, of Lafayette place, was returning from Westfield on his wheel. He got along all right until he reached the cut at Fanwood, where the road is very dark on account of the woods on each side.

Very suddenly two Italians appeared in the road and called to Manchester, telling him to stop. The latter could just make out that there was two men there, but their voices gave them away.

Manchester was making good time and when one of the highwaymen appeared in the road, throwing up his hands to stop the rider, the Italian was struck full force by the wheel, laying him flat. The collision threw Manchester head first over his machine and he landed in the road with the result of receiving several bruises and strains about the body and legs.

His quick forethought probably saved his life, for he grabbed his wheel mounted and rode for dear life. The collision had extinguished his light but that did not stop him until he had gone far enough to know he was out of danger. It is not known what became of the men.

When Manchester reached town he stopped at Reynolds's pharmacy and purchased some liniment, and went on his way home.

ONE MORE SUNDAY SHAVE.

And Then All the City Barbers Will be Roosevelted.

Tomorrow is the last Sunday that the man with a hirsute adornment can go to the tonsorial artists and have the hairy growth on his face removed, for on Sunday, September 22d, the barbers will all be Roosevelted by the amended ordinance recently passed by the Common Council.

It is the intention of all coming within the scope of the law to observe its provisions. It is understood that the borough barbers will also close, though not compelled to do so, as they feel that six days of fourteen to eighteen hours each, is sufficient labor to perform, and knowing there will be no competition on the city side they are anxious to take advantage of the Sunday rest.

Wanted To Run Away Again.

A buggy containing two little children was run away with by a fiery little mustang on Somerset street yesterday afternoon. The horse started near the bridge and ran up to Front street where he was caught by a young man. The man, to whom the rig belonged came up and drove the runaway horse about the streets sometime causing quite a little excitement in his efforts to quell the spirits of the fractious animal.

A Close Call.

A two-seated pheaton drawn by a grey horse, drew up in front of the post-office yesterday afternoon shortly after five o'clock and an elderly woman started to alight. In some way she caught her skirt and was thrown to the sidewalk, tearing her dress. Wyatt Barnes, of Norwood avenue, who was standing near, assisted her to her feet.

A Great Game.

Manager Gorman, of the Crescent baseball team, has secured a hired battery for the game at Raritan this afternoon. Clare, of the Elizabeth Athletic Club, will pitch for the Raritans.

To Have An Eleven.

The boys in the North Plainfield public school are arranging for a football eleven this fall.

While in Chicago, Mr. Charles L. Kahler, a prominent shoe merchant of Des Moines, Iowa, had quite a serious time of it. He took such a severe cold that he could hardly talk or navigate, but the prompt use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cured him of his cold so quickly that others at the hotel who had bad colds followed his example and half a dozen persons ordered it from the nearest drug store. They were profuse in their thanks to Mr. Kahler for telling them how to cure a bad cold so quickly. For sale at Reynolds's pharmrcy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

FOR $5 000 A SIDE

Mr. Iselin Is Willing for Another Race.

Boat Against Boat, But He Says He Will Not Race Dunraven — No Chance for a Race, However, as Valkyrie Is Being Stripped for the Voyage Home.

New York, Sept. 14.—It is reported that C. Oliver Iselin expressed his willingness last night to race the Defender against Valkyrie in American waters for $5,000 a side. He said to several prominent yachtsmen: "I will not race Lord Dunraven, but I will race boat against boat. Any yacht course on the Atlantic coast will suit me. The distance and number of races are immaterial. I will race for $5,000 a side as many times as owners of the Valkyrie wish to race. The courses and the distance of the races I leave to them to select."

No Possibility of a Race.

However willing or anxious Mr. Iselin may be for another brush with the English boat there is no possibility of any more races between Valkyrie III. and Defender or any other yacht in this country, as H. Maitland Kersey, Lord Dunraven's representative here, said to-day that Lord Dunraven had positively decided not to race again. The regatta committee of the New York Yacht club, which had charge of the sailing of the cup races, will make its report to the America's Cup committee in a day or two, and the latter committee will then send its report to the club. That will be the final action in the races, and the episode will be ended.

Stripping the English Boat.

The work of stripping the Valkyrie for her voyage home is being rapidly pushed in the Erie basin and it is probable that the defeated boat will be bouncing on the waves of the Atlantic with here nose pointed towards England within the next ten days. Soon after the challenger entered the basin her topmast was housed and lowered to the deck, and in an hour practically all her running rigging had been stripped off. On board her tender, the City of Bridgeport, the sailors were packing up their belongings for removal. Valkyrie's decks soon looked like a sail loft, for they were covered with ropes, spars, sails and rigging. An active seaman was aloft skipping about the spreaders, reminding one of a monkey. Soon her topmast was taken down and the men were preparing to fix the jury rig under which she crossed.

A Disappointed Lot.

The men in Valkyrie's crew seem greatly disappointed at the fizzle. None of them would talk, however. Mr. Ratsey, who declined to talk last evening, was more communicative this morning. "I am very sorry," he said, "at the unfortunate outcome. The excursion steamers are the cause of it all. The management did not take the proper means to have a clear course. The races should be some place where the excursion boats cannot or will not go, and the dates on which the races will be sailed should be kept secret. I came over for sport. I had some, but I go back with a great deal of regret."

GEN. TAYLOR'S CUP.

If Defender Refuses, It Will Be Offered to Vigilant and Valkyrie.

Boston, Sept. 14.—The United Press has asked General Taylor whether the offer of a $5,000 cup for race off Marblehead would be open for a contest between Vigilant and Valkyrie unless the Defender refused to contest. General Taylor at once sent back the answer: "In case Defender declines to race I shall make the offer of the Massachusetts bay cup for a race between Vigilant and Valkyrie."

ON A TRIP AROUND THE WORLD

The Columbian Liberty Bell Started from Chicago Yesterday.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—The Columbian liberty bell started yesterday on its trip around the world. It left on a special train and will first go to Atlanta, where it will remain until the close of the exhibition. After that it will be taken through the southern states and Mexico. From there it will go to Europe and thence around the world.

DROUGHT IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Streams Dried Up and Thousands of Young Trout Killed.

Keene, N. H., Sept. 14.—The late drought has killed thousands of young trout, many of the small breeding brooks having dried up entirely this season that were never dry before. Similar conditions have resulted in other parts of the state.

A Prince Among Them.

Palermo, Sept. 14.—The twelve socialists, members of the dissolved electoral society, who were arrested and imprisoned Wednesday night, include a young Sicilian prince, several advocates and a doctor. The arrest of such prominent men has caused a great sensation throughout Sicily.

New Job for Prof. Getchell.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 14.—Prof. W. A. Getchell of Yale has been appointed to a full professorship in botany at the California university at Berkeley, Cal. He will assume his duties next month.

Winder Reaches Newport.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 14.—Tom W. Winder, the bicyclist who is making a tour of the border and coast lines of the United States from New Orleans, arrived here yesterday afternoon.

King Christian's Condition Worse.

London Sept. 14.—The Daily News has a dispatch from Copenhagen stating that the condition of King Christian, who has been ill for some time, has become worse.

Fast Mile on a Bicycle.

Birmingham, Sept. 14.—F. Chinn, the bicyclist, yesterday rode a mile in one minute and fifty-eight and four-fifth seconds.

Indicted for Murder.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Elmer Padgett has been indicted by the grand jury for murder in the first degree in shooting Frank Larabee.

PENSION FOR KAIULANI.

The Hawaiian Government Will Provide for the Princess.

Honolulu, Sept. 6, via San Francisco, Sept. 14.—The Hawaiian government, which has been considering the question of granting a pension of $4,000 annualy to Princess Kaiulani, has postponed further consideration of the matter until next session. There is a very strong feeling among the adherents of the republic favorable to such action and it is not improbable that a pension will be granted by the next legislature. It is not improbable that this might have been done by the present legislature but for the intense feeling engendered by the recent uprising of the royalist faction resulting in the death of Carter and a loss to the treasury of nearly ten thousand dollars. Indeed, there is no little sympathy felt for Lilioukalani herself even among the adherents of the present government, and it is not at all unlikely that at some future time when the memory of the last emeute shall become somewhat dulled there may be a movement to provide her also with some means of support.

REV. DR. WAKEFIELD DEAD.

Probably the Oldest Mason and Preacher in the World.

Pittsburg, Sept. 14.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel Wakefield, the veteran Methodist minister, died yesterday at West Newton. Dr. Wakefield was said to be the oldest Mason and the oldest pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, and possibly the oldest of any denomination in the world. He had been a member of the Masonic fraternity for seventy-five years. His career as a Methodist minister is part of the history of western Pennsylvania. He preached occasionally in latter years and had fairly good health until recently, when he was broken somewhat by the death of his wife. His grandmother, Mary Wade, was a preacher, having been ordained in the ministry by John Calvert. He was ordained in 1817, and published several books on theology and music when he was comparatively young which made him widely known. His principal theological work, "Wakefield's Theology," has become a classic.

IRON WORKERS' WAGES.

An Advance of 2 Per Cent. in the Union Mills.

Pittsburg, Sept. 14.—The wages of more than 50,000 workers in the union mills of the country for September and October have been fixed by representatives of the Merchants' Bar Iron association and the Amalgamated Iron and Steel workers. The settlement gives all employes in the finishing department an advance of 2 per cent. The rate for puddling is put at $4.25, the present rate under the adjustment. At the next bimonthly settlement wages of all the puddlers and finishers will go up at least 2 per cent. more. The raise is only 2 per cent. because many low-priced contracts were filed during July and August.

HARRINGTON INJURED.

Boston Baseball Team's 'Bus in Collision with a Cable Car.

Baltimore, Sept. 14.—The bus in which the Boston ball players were returning to their hotel from Union park after yesterday's games was run into by a cable car at the corner of Eutaw street and Madison avenue. Several of the players were thrown to the ground. Second Baseman Harrington received bruises about the head and legs which will probably keep him out of the game during the remainder of the season. The other members of the team were considerably shaken up but not seriously injured.

MRS. HANNAH GERRY DEAD.

Mother of Commodore Gerry Passes Away in New York.

New York, Sept. 14.—Mrs. Hannah G. Gerry, mother of Commodore Gerry, died last evening at her home at Nineteenth street and Broadway, where she had lived since 1845. Mrs. Gerry, who was the daughter of Peter D. Goelet, was born in 1806. When 25 years old she was married to Thomas B. Gerry, son of Elbridge Gerry, who was vice-president of the United states. Mrs. Gerry was the aunt of Robert and Ogden Goelet.

FIGHTING IN AFRICA.

Battle Between Portuguese and Natives Near Delagoa Bay.

Lorenzo Marques, Delagoa Bay, Sept. 14.—A force of Portuguese encountered a large body of natives under Chief Zichacha, on Sunday, at Magul. Severe fighting ensued in which three hundred natives were killed. The Portuguese loss was six killed and twenty wounded.

THE BOND SYNDICATE

Its Position Set Forth by J. Peirpont Morgan.

Will Continue To Do All in Its Power To Maintain the Gold Reserve Although It Discharged All Its Obligations to the Government Last June.

New York, Sept. 14.—J. Pierpont Morgan said last evening: "The obligations of the bond syndicate to the government were discharged when the final payment for the bonds was made on June 30 last. Nevertheless it is the intention of the syndicate to continue to do all in its power to maintain the gold reserve. The date October 1, up to which time the syndicate has an option on any new issue of bonds, will not mark the limit of efforts to keep the reserve any more than the date of the final payment for the bonds did. The syndicate is anxious to see the finances of the government kept in good order and will exert itself to that end. A mistake was made in reporting the gold contributed to the government by the banks yesterday. The amount put in the sub-treasury was $900,000 and not $2,400,000. A contribution of $1,500,000 credited to the Park bank was in reality made on Wednesday and was included in the lump sum of $3,000,000 which was announced at the time as having been received from the syndicate."

Treasury Balance.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The treasury general balance yesterday was $181,962,000, of which $99,568,000 is in gold. The deficit so far this fiscal year is $14,000,000 and with the revenues runing at the present figures this deficit by Jan. 1 next will approximate twenty or thirty millions of dollars. The amount realized by the three bond issues, made within the past two years, exceeds by only $6,000,000 the total treasury balance to-day, so without those issues there would now be an empty treasury. With a full treasury, of course, it follows that gold can always be had, but with a treasury depleted by expenditures exceeding the revenues and with the tide of commercial exchange against us, gold is difficult to retain in the treasury.

Gold Reserve Below the Limit.

The advices received at the treasury department from New York stated that $4,200,000 in gold had been withdrawn yesterday for export to-day and $900,000 in gold had been deposited, making the loss for the day, $3,000,000. This reduces the gold reserve to $96,268,474.

ECUADOR'S NEW STAMPS.

Issued by President Alfaro in Commemoration of Liberal Victory.

Colon, Colombia, Sept. 14.—A dispatch received here says that President Alfaro of Ecuador has ordered an issue of new postage stamps to commemorate the victory of the liberal party. The president has also given the governor of Panama assurances of his friendship for Colombia. At Limon business was entirely suspended upon the occasion of the national fete. Trains were run from various parts of the surrounding country at half rates.

COUGHING KILLED MISS ARVINE

She Had Cut Her Throat and the Strain Opened It.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 14.—Miss Leonora Arvine committed suicide Thursday night by cutting her throat with a razor. While her mother turned her back for a moment Miss Arvine seized the blade from a table and inflicted a wound five inches long across her throat. Dr. Walker dressed the wound, but a fit of coughing reopened it and Miss Arvine died soon after.

SEARCHING CHINATOWN.

A Raid Begun by the Federal Authorities in San Francisco.

San Francisco, Sept. 14.—A systematic search of Chinatown by federal authorities began to-day. Every Chinese laborer who cannot produce a satisfactory certificate, accompanied by a photograph, will be arrested and held to answer under the Geary act. The United States attorney general authorized Marshal Baldwin to begin the raid.

FIRES AGAIN RAGING

Business at Egg Harbor Entirely Suspended.

The People Out En Masse Fighting the Flames—Big Losses to Owners of Cranberry Bogs—Many People Forced To Leave Their Homes for Safety.

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 14.—Business at Egg Harbor City is entirely suspended owing to the close proximity that the forest fires have gained to the town. The citizens have turned out en masse to fight the flames and protect their property. Mayor Farr, the Caldwell estate, and congressman John J. Gardner of the second New Jersey district, are heavy losers. The light of the flames could be plainly seen here last night and thousands of people watched the glares in the sky. Other fires are burning in the swamp districts in and around Elwood and in the western section of the county. Thousands of dollars have been lost by the owners of cranberry bogs, many of which will prove a total loss.

Many Forced from Their Homes.

J. H. Renault, an extensive manufacturer of champagne of Egg Harbor, has a force of men oft fighting the flames to protect his property. Hundreds of acres of young timber land have been devastated and many residents have been compelled to remove from their homes. Residents of English Creek, in the southern section, are out in full force using every effort to protect their property. This is however a sparsely settled section and the damage from the fires consists mainly in the destruction of young timber.

BIG CANADIAN PILGRIMAGE.

More Than 10,000 Strangers Now at Cap de la Madeleine.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—The largest pilgrimage that ever entered Three Rivers is now at Cap de la Madeleine, on the northeast side of the mouth of the St. Maurice river, in this province. It is estimated that there now more than 10,000 pilgrims there, conveyed by Canadian Pacific railway trains, river steamboats, and by vehicles from the surrounding districts. Many more are expected. The pilgrimage was organized by the Rev. Father Frederick of the Franciscan order, and includes all the tertiary order in this province. Bishop La Fleche, Father Frederick and many of the clergy of the Three Rivers district are in attendance. One of the special Canadian Pacific trains conveying pilgrims ran off the track on the loop line, but no one was injured. Two of the steamers ran aground, but were subsequently hauled off.

CANAL DRY; CROPS SUFFERING.

Unprecedented Drought in the Vicinity of Port Jervis.

Port Jervis, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Owing to long continued drought in this section and the unprecedented scarcity of water in the reservoirs of the Delaware & Hudson Canal company navigation has been suspended since August 30. The bottoms of the reservoirs are like parched deserts and it will require long and heavy rains to fill them sufficiently to start boating again. The farmers of this section have been great sufferers from the drought. The hay crop is almost a complete failure and other late crops have suffered. The Delaware river has never been so low within the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

FOR HIS EFFORTS FOR THE CUP

Canadians Desirous of Dining Lord Dunraven.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 14.—As an expression of their admiration for what they consider Lord Dunraven's plucky trial for the America's cup and his attitude under trying circumstances, the Royal Canadian Yacht club of this city have decided to tender him a compliment banquet. Rear-Commodore Jervis, now in New York, has been telegraphed to arrange for any date next week which would suit Lord Dunraven to be present.

THE WORLD TROTTING RECORD

Dandy Jim Covers the Last Heat in 2 11 3-4 on a Half Mile Track.

Huntington, Ind., Sept. 14.—A world's record was smashed at the county fair races here yesterday. Dandy Jim, in the free-for-all trot, went the last heat in 2:11 3-4, which is the world's trotting race record on a half mile track.

Blackman Dies of His Wounds.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 14.—C. H. Blackman, the Chicago board of trade member, who was shot by Charles Bascom, a youth of St. Louis on Pebby Beach cliffs, Block island, August 24, after a long and plucky struggle for life, succumbed to his injuries at 5.30 yesterday afternoon.

$4,000 Call for a Preacher.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 14.—The congregation of the Second Presbyterian church has extended a call to Rev. Thomas Reed Bridges, who is now the assistant pastor of the Tompkins Avenue church of Brooklyn, and has offered him $4,000 per year to accept the pastorate.

Action To Annul the Marriage.

Watertown, N. Y., Sept. 14.—John R. Wilson's attorney announces that he has begun an action in Cayuga county to have his marriage to Elizabeth Nagle set aside on the ground that it was procured by force, collusion, fraud and duress.

Isaac E. Chandler Dead.

Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 14.—Isaac E. Chandler, who was instrumental in the founding of the large town of Morrellville and who was one of the promoters of the Cambria Iron works in its early days, died last night, aged 72 years.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The president has appointed Sidney R. Riggin to be collector of customs for the eastern district of Maryland.

INTERNATIONAL CRICKET.

First Game Between the Foreigners and U. of P. Team.

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—The lovers of cricket were treated to a fine exhibition of batting yesterday at Wissahickon heights on the grounds of the Philadelphia Cricket club, the occasion being the first match in the international series arranged by the Associated Cricket club of Philadelphia. The opposing teams were the pick of Oxford and Cambridge on one hand and the past and present of the University of Pennsylvania—more past than present, however, as only one member of the eleven is now a student at the university. The play began at 11:15 o'clock, and when stumps were drawn for the day at 5:30 p. m., the English collegians had been disposed of for 284 runs, while Capt. Brockie's men had lost four with but 38 runs to their credit. Of the visitors' play only praise can be said. They gave a splendid exhibition of batting, using judgment and care and frequently displaying a freedom scarcely seen among Quaker city cricketers. Their sole purpose was run-getting and they seemed to have mastered the art. There is not a phenomenal batter on the team, but the average is good and that is what counts in the columns of runs. They gathered together 284 runs in masterly style and have disposed of four of the university batsmen with an average of 9 1-2 runs each. It would appear unfair to criticise the representatives of "Old Penn" on their play of yesterday. They will doubtless settle down to-day and pile up the runs, unless luck should desert them.

CLOSE OF THE ENCAMPMENT.

A Brilliant Ball Ends the Veterans' Festivities at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 14.—At 10 o'clock last night when the bugle was sounded for the grand march of one of the most brilliant balls ever given in the south, the Grand Army encampment of '95 passed into history. Eight thousand of the leading citizens of Louisville and visitors from abroad participated in the function and the array of beautiful faces and gorgeous toilets combined to make an entrancing scene. Col. Lawler, Mrs. John A. Logan and ex-Gov. Simon Buckner and Mrs. Wallace of Chicago gave a reception to the encampment officials and delegates while the festivities were in progress. The exodus of visitors was on in earnest all day, but tens of thousands whose faces turned towards Chattanooga and Chickamauga will remain over until to-morrow. In every respect the encampment has been an overwhelming success. Gen. Walker issued general order No. 1 last night announcing that he had assumed command and that headquarters were established at Indianapolis.

DEATH OF WILLIAM STITT.

He Was an Eccentric Inmate of Ludlow Street Jail New York.

New York, Sept. 14.—Word was received by Sheriff Tamsen last evening of the death of William Stitt, who had become known as the "Old Man of Ludlow," at Bellevue hospital yesterday morning. Stitt was removed from Ludlow Street jail to Bellevue on an order of the court of common pleas, the jail physician having certified that unless he received proper medical attendance he would die. He had been in jail since September, 1890, having been committed for contempt in refusing to give up $20,004 which he held as administrator of the estate of Joseph Watson. During his five years' imprisonment he persistently refused to take any steps towards his release, and all along paid $15 a week for board to the warden of the jail.

ADA GANTHONY WED.

Married to John Clark, Son of a Wealthy Toronto Man.

New York, Sept. 14.—John Clark, who is said to be the son of one of the richest men in Toronto, Canada, and Ada Ganthony, an actress, who gave her residence as Surrey, England, were married at the city hall marriage bureau by Alderman Schilling yesterday. Miss Ganthony has been with a company in the west for some months. She is 30 years old and a pretty brunette. The groom, who gave his residence as the Hoffman house, is 31.

WARNED TO LEAVE TOWN.

A Kansas Prohibitionist Threatened with Tar and Feathers.

Wichita, Kan., Sept. 14.—H. W. Lewis, ex-president of the Kansas National bank, a prominent and respected citizen who has been one of the foremost leaders in the local fight for prohibition, has received a letter threatening him with tar and feathers if he did not leave town within twenty-four hours.

MORA CLAIM SETTLED

Spain's Draft To Be Handed Over To-day.

Secretary Olney Will Receive the Order for the Money from Minister De Lome—Mora's Share $800,000 Net—He Arrived in Washington Last Night and Will Reside There.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Secretary Olney, Senor Dupuy De Lome, the Spanish minister, and Antonio Maxima Mora will be in Washington to-day to witness the closing act in the famous Mora claim, the payment to the United States of the indemnity demanded from Spain for the confiscation of Mora's sugar plantation in Cuba. All the details for the payment have been made and the formal payment of the indemnity will be completed to-day or Monday. A draft for $1,549,000, which is the equivalent of $1,500,000 in Spanish dollars made payable to Secretary Olney through the Spanish minister, will be given Mr. Olney by Senor Dupuy De Lome. The draft is drawn on the financial agent of Spain in London. It is claimed that the difference existing in the value of Spanish gold and American money will be compensated for in great part by the enhanced rate of exchange now prevailing. Mora will receive about $800,000 net, the remainder of the total sum having been set apart years ago for the payment of all expenses incurred in the prosecution of the claim, attorneys' fees included. Mora will not be present at to-day's proceedings. He reached Washington last night and intends to make this city his future home.

CAPT. SUMNER SUSPENDED.

Retired for Six Months for Carelessly Docking the Columbia.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The navy department has made public its action in the case of Capt. George W. Sumner, lately in command of the United States cruiser Columbia, who was tried recently by court martial at the Brooklyn navy yard on the charges growing out of the injuries sustained by his vessel in docking at Southampton in July last. The first charge was culpable inefficiency in the performance of duty. The court found him guilty in a less degree than charged, in that he did not fully perform his duty in having the proper preparations made for the docking and seeing that supporting blocks were in proper condition for receiving and sustaining her weight. The court ignored that portion of the charge alleging that as a consequence of that failure the boat was subjected to severe strains, causing damage to her hull, and necessitating repairs costing about $1,000.

Guilty of Two Charges.

The captain was found guilty of the second charge, of suffering a vessel of the navy to be hazarded in violation of navy regulations. He was found guilty of the third charge, neglect of duty, and the specification under that charge was proved, namely, that he paid the charge of docking without protest. The sentence of the court is as follows: "To be suspended from duty only for a period of six months on waiting orders pay, and to be reprimanded by the honorable secretary of the navy." The action of the department has been stated to Capt. Sumner, with a copy of the proceedings, findings and sentence of the court. He is informed that the publication of this general order is regarded as sufficient compliance with that portion of the sentence calling for a reprimand by the secretary of the navy.

VICTORY FOR VOORHEES.

Result in Union County, N. J., May Affect the Governorship Fight.

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 14.—Republican primaries held in Elizabeth and Rahway last night resulted in something of a victory for senator Foster M. Voorhees. Senator Voorhees and John Kean are both residents of Union county and both are aspirants for the nomination for governor. The control of their home delegation was looked on as something decisive in the fight for the nomination. Voorhees carried at least nine of the twelve wards in Elizabeth. At Rahway, the second important city of the county, Voorhees secured two delegates and Kean three.

NO MONEY FOR EXPENSES.

The Marine Band Will Not Go to Chickamauga.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The Marine band will not participate in the dedication of the Chickamauga battlefield as intended, there being no appropriation available to transport the band and care for its members while away. Secretary Herbert decided to allow the band to go but those in charge of the dedication found that their limited allowance would not permit them to transport and keep the band.

Will Plainfield barber shops have any side doors on Sunday after tomorrow?

In an interview in The World this morning Richard Croker says positively that he is not going to take a hand in politics.

If the liquor dealers would organize to drive out of the business men who are not fit to have licenses they would have little to fear from Legislatures, or, for that matter, from "fanatics," either. One disreputable saloonkeeper does more harm to the men who conduct respectable places than do a hundred Prohibitionists. — Trenton Times.

Plainfield Republicans as politicians are an odd lot. Here it is within three days of the time for holding their primaries to choose delegates to the State convention, which will select a Gubernatorial candidate, and yet, with two home candidates in the field for the honor, not one has come out openly to work for or espouse the cause of either Kean or Voorhees.

Out in Kansas, where prohibition is the law of the commonwealth, the legal authorities are continually confronted by new phases of the puzzling liquor question. At Abilene, recently, a learned judge decided that a prisoner could not be held for selling liquor, because, in fact, what he really had sold was a mixed drink, concerning which no one could testify absolutely that it was intoxicating. Under this judicial interpretation, the imbibers of cocktails, fizzes and smashes in Kansas would have to manifest unmistakable signs of inebrity before their bibulous pastime could be lawfully interrupted.—Newark News.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Cailouette, Druggist, Beaversville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

MUNYON THEIR LEADER.

Prominent People Pledged to Support Humane Methods.

Splendid Work Accomplished by the Eminent Professor.

Mrs. John Serven, 310 West Fourth street, New York city, says: "Professor Munyon's Remedies have really saved me a small fortune in doctor's fees. We have had a great deal of sickness in our family, and I used to call a physician for my little ones several times a week. Now I am glad to say that we have not employed a doctor for two years. Whenever anyone is ill a few doses of Munyon's Remedies act like magic and save us long spells of sickness. We have used Munyon's Cures with wonderful success in colds, coughs, fevers, sore throat, diarrhœa, liver complaint and dyspepsia, and, in fact, in all kinds of sickness. For myself, I have been cured of asthma by Munyon's Asthma Remedies."

Munyon's Stomach and Dyspepsia Cure cures all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles such as constipation, rising of food, distress after eating, bloating of the stomach, palpitation of the heart, shortness of breath and all affections of the heart cause by indigestion. It soothes, heals, and invigorates stomachs that have been weakened by over-eating, or where the lining of the stomach has been impaired by physic and other injurious medicines. Price 25 cents.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company, of Philadelphia, put up specifics for nearly every disease, which are sold by all druggists, mostly for 25 cents a bottle.

Regained His Speech.

William Kline, the boy on East Second street, who lost the power of speech recently, regained it yesterday and is improving. Drs. Jenkins and Keeney held a consultation in the afternoon and think the chances of the boy's recovery are good.

Cure for Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache, Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation, Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try at once. Large bottles only fifty cents at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

Corporation Notice.

Proposals for the Construction of Sewage Disposal Beds.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield, N. J., at a meeting thereof held September 13, 1895, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, September 30, 1895, at 8 o'clock p. m., at the Council Chamber, 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, at which time and place said Common Council will receive sealed proposals for doing the work and furnishing the materials for the construction of sewage disposal beds and appurtenances, being part of the system of sewerage, with appurtenances, necessary to complete the same contemplated in the ordinance, entitled "An ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage," approved July 25, 1894, as provided for in the plans and specifications adopted by the Common Council Sept. 13, 1895, and filed in the office of the City Clerk, 109 Park avenue Plainfield, N. J.

Upon receipt of bids or proposals the Council will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for two thousand dollars, payable to the treasurer of the city of Plainfield.

The engineer's approximate estimate of the quantities of material required, and the work to be done, is as follows:

Clearing and grubbing where required.
60,000 cubic yards excavation.
1 screening tank.
14 gate chambers.
13 eighteen (18) inch gates in gate chamber.
38 twelve (12) inch gates in gate chamber.
34 paved outlets at end of pipes from gate chambers.
7,030 lineal feet of straight, brick paved distributing channels.
3,075 lineal feet of 18-inch sewer in embankment.
500 lineal feet of 12-inch terra-cotta pipe outlets from gate chambers.
18,885 lineal feet of 3 and 4-inch underdrains.
15 twelve (12) foot lengths of 4-inch cast iron pipe, underdrain outlets, laid.
15 manholes on underdrains in sewage beds.
3,125 lineal feet of 24-inch vitrified terra-cotta underdrain.
4 manholes on 24-inch vitrified terra-cotta underdrain.

Duplicate plans, specifications, contract, bond, etc., may be examined, and forms of proposals, may be obtained at the office of the consulting engineer, 109 Park avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

The right to reject any or all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

All proposals must be endorsed "Proposals for the Construction of Sewage Disposal Beds."

Tarsus and Its People.

An interested crowd of Christian Endeavorers and their friends gathered in the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening to listen to an address on Tarsus by S. M. Melconyon. He spoke of the condition of the country physically and politically, and of the manners and customs of the people. He then dwelt on the different religious beliefs that prevail in his native land, and of the work that the missionaries have been doing there. He finished with a general appeal for help. The meeting was led by Miss Myra Runyon, a member of the missionary committee.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The South Brooklyn Wheelmen have a club run to this city tomorrow.

The great run of the Crescent Wheelmen to Clinton takes place tomorrow and if the weather is favorable a large crowd will be present.

Walter Probasco, of East Front street, is expected home this evening after a bicycle trip to Chadford, Pa., and return with a school friend.

Two Plainfield girls who were riding their wheels yesterday afternoon came together with a crash in front of the postoffice. Neither was hurt but they walked off side by side leading their wheels.

An out-of-town wheelman came to grief in the mud yesterday afternoon in front of Scheuer's grocery. He measured his length in the nice soft mud, but got on again and rode off immediately without any apparent injury.

Would Not Cut His Hair.

John Decker, played the part of Dick the Rat, Tony Hart's old role in "Old Lavender." Harry W. Wright, who was cast for the part, and whose name appeared on the programme, saw the performance from a seat in the orchestra. This change was made only yesterday afternoon, and the way it happened was this:

Mr. Wright is a good-looking young man with curly hair, which he wears rather long, a style affected by a good many gentlemen of the stage. He joined Harrigan's company only this season, and in "The Woollen Stocking" he played a juvenile part which required no makeup. When it was decided to put on "Old Lavender" he was cast for Dick the Rat. Rehearsals began, and one day last week Mr. Harrigan informed Mr. Wright he would have to have his hair cut. Mr. Wright said nothing at the time, but to some of his fellow members of the company he declared he would not spoil his appearance for any part. He said nothing to the management though, and they did not know he intended to throw up the part until yesterday afternoon, when a dress rehearsal was held and Mr. Wright did not appear. Then the whole thing was explained and Mr. Decker was given the part.

Manager Mart Hanley, when questioned last night, admitted that the above were practically the facts in the case. "I am very sorry for Mr. Wright," he said, "but then young men are awfully foolish sometimes—now aren't they?"—New York Herald.

MIDNIGHT ALARM AT THE PLAINS

A Lamp Exploded and Made Excitement at Plainfield's Suburb.

Scotch Plains was rudely awakened from its quiet sleep last night by an alarm of fire. Very soon the streets were alive with the residents of the village all inquiring of one another, "Where is the fire," as there was no reflection shown on the sky. The firemen were directed to the residence of Daniel Allen on Westfield avenue, where they found a fire burning briskly in one of the closets. The fire was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp which had been carried to the closet by Mrs. Allen's son Frank. Frank had been writing until nearly one o'clock, when feeling hungry he went to the closet for something to eat, set the lamp down for a moment, when it exploded, scattering burning oil over the shelves and floor.

The family were awakened and worked hard to subdue the flames, but if it had not been for the arrival of firemen and neighbors the house and the one adjoining would have probably been burned to the ground, as the family were nearly exhausted. Mrs. Allen was severely burned about the hands, but is very thankful that it is no worse. After the fire had been extinguished it was found that the blaze had been confined to the closet where it had started.

All the tins, refrigerator, kettles and other articles in the closet were ruined, but the damage was fully covered by insurance.

HE PARDONED THE METHODIST.

President Grant Was Merciful to a Clerical Moonshiner Who Backslid.

The following story of General Grant is said never to have found its way into print, and is vouched for by William Blaikie, who is attorney for the heirs of the widow of Daniel B. Fayerweather, whose millions were left to colleges and charitable institutions.

Mr. Blaikie was in charge of the pardon bureau under E. R. Hoar, General Grant's Attorney-General. It was Mr. Blaikie's duty to make a report upon a case which was prepared from the District Attorney's side of the case and that of the prisoner and the prisoner's friends. This report would be presented to the Attorney General for his consideration, and whatever he would indorse upon the report would be confirmed by President Grant. In the case of a Methodist minister serving a sentence for illegal distilling, Mr. Blaikie reported:

"This Methodist minister, ignorant of the consequences of his act, forsook the ministry and brewed whisky in a quiet little mountain still. He got three months and has served half his time. He thinks he has been punished enough and that he should be pardoned."

It was well known that President Grant was a stanch Methodist. Attorney-General Hoar indorsed upon the report:

"I recommend a pardon. I also respectfully recommend that the President read the within report."

When the report came back to Mr. Blaikie President Grant had written across the face of the paper "pardon granted."

SMILES CLEARED THE WAY.

How the Philosophical Car Driver Smoothed His Way Through the Jam.

He stood upon the platform of his car, serene and smiling, when every car driver and truckman on West street was swearing and cursing. The jam was tremendous and the street was packed from curb to curb. Yet, whenever he spoke it was with some good natured jest, and the truck drivers turned out of his way and let car No. 78 go by. He hailed them all with merry badinage, and the surliest of them grinned from ear to ear and gave him back all that he sent.

"It's easy," he said to me confidentially. "When once you get a man to smile he'll do anything you want him to. Did you see that surly chap driving the heavy wagon? I kept chaffing him until I got him to laughing, and when a man once lets a smile chase over his face he's a goner. I tell you, my friend, that even down here in West street good nature will go further in getting your own way than all the yelling and cursing."

And the philosophical car driver whipped up his horses and told the charioteer of the ice wagon in front that no man could stop things up as he did unless he were from Cork. The ice wagon turned aside, and the iceman grinned and said that he was from Limerick.—New York Herald.

This New Woman is Not a Politician.

My only excuse for telling a political story between campaigns is that I heard this particular anecdote just the other day. Last fall a new woman set out to proselytize. She was a very young new woman and well satisfied with her own political disability, but strongly determined to make converts for the party to which she fancied she belonged. She was particularly interested in a certain candidate running on the Democratic ticket. Her first call was on her own godfather, a Democratic warhorse, a man who has worked and held office for the Democratic party for many years.

"Godfather," began the new woman, "I want to get some votes for a friend of mine. He is a perfectly lovely man and I want you to promise to vote for him."

"Maudie," replied the old man, who naturally thought that the girl was asking him to make an exception in favor of a Republican, from his lifelong habit of voting the straight Democratic ticket, "you know I would do almost anything for you, but I can't go back on my party."

Maudie pleaded and pleaded, until finally her godfather relented so far as to ask who the favored candidate might be.

"Why, Judge Blank, of course!" answered Maudie, in some surprise, though his name had not been mentioned up to that time.

The old man's face was a study for a while. Then he chuckled softly to himself and said:

"Girlie, have I to be asked at my time of life to support a nominee of my own party? Don't you know that Judge Blank is a Democrat and I am a Democrat?"

But Maudie had burst into tears.

"I think you are a mean, horrid old man not to have told me that when I began to talk! How was I to know to what nasty old party you belonged! I think politics are just awful!"

And the promising political career of one new woman ended right there.—Buffalo Express.

Well Powdered.

He'd been waltzing with his host's daughter, and was in the corner repairing damages. Here he was espied by his would-be papa-in-law.

"She's the flower of my family, sir," said the latter.

"So it seems," answered the young man. "Pity she comes off so, ain't it?" he continued, as he essayed another vigorous rub at the white spots on his coat sleeve.—Erie Messenger.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

A CHANCE MEETING.

BY THE DUCHESS.

(Copyright, 1895, by Irving Bacheller.)

IV.

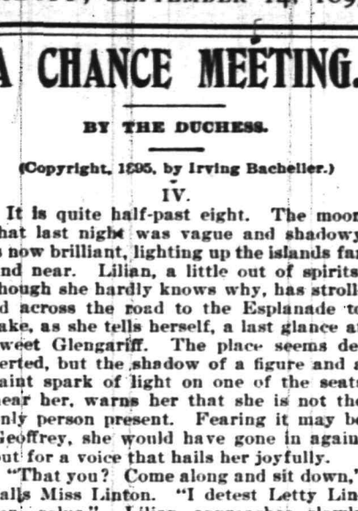
It is quite half-past eight. The moon that last night was vague and shadowy is now brilliant, lighting up the islands far and near. Lilian, a little out of spirits, though she hardly knows why, has strolled across the road to the Esplanade to take, as she tells herself, a last glance at sweet Glengariff. The place seems deserted, but the shadow of a figure and a faint spark of light on one of the seats near her, warns her that she is not the only person present. Fearing it may be Geoffrey, she would have gone in again, but for a voice that hails her joyfully.

"That you? Come along and sit down," calls Miss Linton. "I detest Letty Linton, solus." Lilian approaches slowly and drops into the seat beside her; a strange curiosity has drawn her.

"Well, how are you and old Geoff getting on? What did you do to him when you went out boatin'? He came back like a thundercloud."

Lilian rises, almost speechless with anger, and grief, and the most unconquerable astonishment.

"You don't know what you are saying. You forget yourself," she stammers. She



"I TRIED THAT ON JIM, YOU KNOW."

turns to go, but Miss Linton putting out her hand catches her frock and promptly drags her down beside her again.

"I daresay; Jim says I'm always doing that, but I won't forget again. Not another word about Geoff, honor bright. Only don't vex him. I tried that on Jim, you know, and it didn't pay, not a little bit. I was miserable all the time."

Lilian turns.

"Jim! Captain Westropp? What is he to you?"

"I never answered a riddle in my life," says Miss Linton, genially. "But he's the man I'm going to marry, anyway."

"Captain Westropp?"

"Yes; why not?"

"But you do not love him?"

"Now that's what puzzles me," says Miss Linton, cheerfully. "I've known such lots of girls who said they were head over ears in love with people, and yet they showed it in such a queer way, to my thinking. I don't know if I'm in love with Jim, but I do know that I can't get on without him. I've tried it, you know. Broke it off three times, but always was glad to make it up with him again. Felt sort of lost without him, d'ye see? I don't know if that is being in love, but anyway, it's good enough for me. By the by, here he comes, and Geoff with him. Hi! Jim, here we are."

Jim comes gladly to her call, Geoffrey Lansdale with him.

"Where is Aunt Bessie?" asks Lilian, addressing Geoffrey. Her tone strikes him as being different, a little nervous, a little softer.

"I passed through the reading-room just now; she was writing."

"Indian letters!" says Miss Linton. "All self-respecting chaperons do that. It sounds important; and keeps them out of harm's way. When I'm a chaperon I'm going to add on Australia and the South Sea Islands. I shall take the cake, as a protector of the young. But what a night! Clearer than day. I should like to go boating to-night."

"Will you come?" says Lansdale, turning suddenly, eagerly to Lilian. "Do; it looks perfect out there."

She is not sure ever afterwards if she made him an answer, but at all events she follows him down the slip and into a boat.

"We mustn't go far," said she, still with that new timidity full upon her. "Perhaps to that island over there, and back."

Lansdale nods his head. It is he who has grown silent now; and no word is spoken by either of them as they glide out and away from the lights of the hotel into the paler, clearer, more mystical light of the moon. The scene round them is, indeed, full of mystery—the mystery of night, and a beauty incomparable. Oh, lovely Glengariff! who, that ever has entered your silent kingdom, has left you heart whole?

"What are you thinking of?" asks Lilian, softly. His continued silence in her present new mood has become unbearable. He starts slightly.

"Thinking of? what I should like to give Letty as a wedding present."

"I thought you were going to give her yourself," says Lilian. She hardly knows what prompted the words, but with them comes a hot flush to her brow, and, forgetful that kindly night hides such things within her bosom, she turns aside, and leaning on the boat lets her white fingers trail idly through the water.

"To marry her, you mean? Oh, no; she would bore me," says he, absently; and then, as if suddenly repentant, "Not but that she is one of the best girls in the world, and honest as the sun."

"I suppose most girls are honest," a little resentfully.

"You are not. It is not an honest or straightforward thing to condemn a man unheard, and to make up one's mind beforehand, without the smallest reason, to detest him."

"I don't detest you," says she, faintly.

"It comes to the same thing. Why, you confessed you left home to avoid me."

"Yes. But there were reasons. • • • You know them." Suddenly she turns to him. "Geoffrey!"—she had never called him "Geoffrey" before—"I hope you will change your mind about mamma's invitation. I hope you will come and see—her. It can't make any difference now, and——"

"Not to you, perhaps. But to me it would."

"To you?" She has drawn her small dripping fingers out of the water now, and is looking at him with a strange expression.

"I almost swore I'd never tell you," says he. "But somehow now I should like you to know that I love you."

"Geoffrey!"

"Yes, of course. It is the unexpected that always happens," says he, in a mocking tone that is full of misery. "There is no earthly reason why I should love you—is there? But you are the only girl I ever wanted to marry, all the same. Of course, you, who have never been in love, cannot understand what I feel; but ——"

"You are wrong," interrupts she, in a choked little voice; "I too am in love."

For a moment there is dead silence.

"You, you!" stammers he. "All this time, then," with terrible reproach, "you were thinking of someone else."

"Oh, no," in a vague whisper.

"You should have told me," says he, sternly, not hearing that soft whisper.

"How could I? Oh! you were the very last that I could tell. How could I have told you?"

She burst into tears.

"What is it?" demands he, eagerly, tenderly, utterly disarmed by her tears. "Why are you crying? Don't you care for this other fellow, then?"

"Oh, I do. It isn't that!"

"You love him?"

"Yes," with a fresh sob

"Then why are you so unhappy? If you love him, he must be the luckiest fellow alive, and I only wish to heaven I was in his shoes. Lilian, confide in me. Tell me what is troubling you."

"I can't. I can't, indeed."

"But why?"

"Because——" she covers her face with her hands. "He's—you!"

It is as good an old boat as you could find. Any other old boat might have heeled over on the spot, after Geoffrey's mad spring forward, but this one stands firm.

"You mean it, Lily?"

"I do; I do, indeed. I was never, never happy until now."

"Then what did you mean by your disgraceful behavior all these past days?"

"I don't know," rubbing her cheek softly against his. "Only there was that money, you know, and——"

"Oh! you cruel, wicked, darling girl, as if that was of any consequence. But you do love me, my sweetheart?"

"You know it."

"I don't, indeed; you have never given me one yet!"

It is wonderful how clever a girl gets when once she is in love. This remarkable speech, that has apparently no meaning in it, grows plain to her at once.

She gives him "one" on the spot.

"And you will come home with me to-morrow, Geoffrey?"

"Do you think I could stay away from you?"

This sort of thing might have gone on until now, but that, at this moment, a clear, brisk voice comes to them across the moonlit water.

"IT IS WONDERFUL HOW CLEVER A GIRL GETS WHEN SHE IS IN LOVE."

"Hi, there, spoons! The Indian budget is signed and sealed, and there will be wigs on the green presently."

"That's Letty," says Lilian, starting. "Oh, it must be late. Let us go home at once."

"I suppose we must," says he, reluctantly taking up the oars again.

"Geoff," says Lilian, with a touch of the old mischief in her smile, "I feel somewhat of a traitor towards the Foundlings—don't you?"

"Never mind, we'll send them a big cheque," says Lansdale, laughing.

AN ELEVATOR RACE.

Husband and Wife Would Find Each Other But Missed.

A well-dressed woman walked into the Crocker building the other afternoon and took an elevator. Her husband saw her from across the street and hurrying over took the next elevator. He went to the office where he knew his wife had business and found that she had stepped in and out again, and went down in the next elevator.

In the meantime his wife had gone down, and the elevator dispatcher said:

"Your husband has went up in the elevator. I think he is looking for you."

The lady took the next elevator up. Just then her husband came down. He looked all around and then inquired of the elevator man:

"Have you seen my wife here?"

"Yes, she just went up this minute."

The man took the next elevator and he was no more than out of sight till his wife came down again.

"Your husband has gone up again," said the elevator man.

"I guess he'll wait for me this time, so I'll go up," and up she went.

Down came her husband a second later.

"Did my wife come down again?" he inquired.

"Yes, and just went up again. She thought you would wait for her."

"Well, I'll wait here.

He waited about five minutes, and then, growing impatient, took an elevator upstairs. She had been waiting for him and came down just as he disappeared.

"Well, I will wait for him and catch him this time," said she.

After standing in the corridor several minutes she decided to go upstairs and find him. As she was whisked out of sight he stepped out of another elevator.

"Your wife has just gone up," said the elevator man.

The husband swore a little under his breath and started to leave the building. At the door he hesitated, changed his mind and took the next elevator up. Down came his wife at the same moment.

"He's just gone up again," was the elevator man's answer to her weary look of inquiry, "and he's as mad as a hornet."

"Then I had better go right up and catch him," said she.

Up she went and down he came.

"Just went up," remarked the elevator man.

"I'm demmed if I'm going up again," said he. "I'll wait right here," and he sat down on the stairs. Half an hour later he was still sitting there, and his wife, equally determined, was waiting for him upstairs.

"I hope they'll meet in heaven," remarked the elevator man.—San Francisco Post.

AN INEFFECTIVE CURE.

The Remedy Was Administered All Right but It Did Not Work.

A bachelor clergyman bought a parrot to relieve his silent chambers. The dealer assured him it was a good talking bird, but warned him not to be surprised if it was silent for a few days until it became accustomed to its surroundings.

A week later the clergyman was back at the bird store. He said the man must come and take the parrot away. The night before he had a number of his best parishioners visit him, he explained, and the conversation woke Polly up. It talked all right, but such talk. Oaths and execrations of the most awful kind the bird poured out in torrents. Such a bird he could not keep.

"You can cure him of that," said the dealer. "Parrots often remember stuff they learned early, but you can cure them. Next time Polly swears have a pail of water ready and souse him into it, cage and all, and then shake and kick the cage around. Frighten the bird thoroughly and it will never swear again."

The experiment was duly tried and the next time Polly swore cage and bird were plunged into the water, and then the kicking and shaking began. But in this process the catches which held the cage to its pan were loosened and Polly got out. However, the clergyman, resolved to make the lesson thorough, pelted the unlucky bird with books, slippers and other missiles. Finally, when he was tired, Polly crawled up on the back of a chair and shook out its bedraggled and drenched plumage.

"B-r-r-r-rh!"—and then, catching sight of the clergyman—"Say, where in h——l were you when the cyclone struck us?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Painful Necessity.

Bridget O'Hoolihan, an elderly Irish cook, had been induced to go to a quiet little suburban town to live in a wealthy gentleman's family. Two weeks after her arrival she declared her intention of returning to the city.

"Why do you leave us, Bridget?" asked her mistress, in a grieved tone. "We pay you the very highest wages."

"Ye do, ma'am, an' yer a perfect lady. Oi'm not lavin' troo anny fault av le fam'ly, but this place is such a dead old place, wid no chance to do annything loively in it, that, begorry, Oi have to mek up a pack o' lies iv'ry toime Oi go to confession, or Oi'd have nothing to confesh."—Harper's Magazine.

Too Exacting

"You know that although a wealthy man, I never drink, smoke, gamble or swear—that I am perfectly exemplary. Then why do you refuse me?"

"You certainly couldn't ask me to become the manager of a freak!"—Harper's Bazar.

The fool is always sure that his own way of doing [illegible] best, if [illegible] only way; [illegible] man wonders if there is [illegible] of way [illegible] wrong.

WAR CHIEFS AND HAYMAKERS.

They Meet and Add Several Members to Their Number.

The evening was cool and the braves of the Miantonomah Tribe, No. 118, I. O. of R. M., were glad to gather about their council fire last evening and attend their regular meeting. Four pale faces bravely stood the ordeal and were adopted into the tribe.

While the pipe of peace, in the shape of a box of cigars, was being passed around, the braves took part in a learned discussion on the evolution of man from the earliest ages down to the present day. The arguments for both sides of the deep and intricate question were sharply advanced by Past Sachems Mague, Stiglitz, Allen, Holstein, Ulrich and Young.

After the quenching of the council fire the Haymakers Association met and one candidate was duly initiated in the due and ancient form of making hay.

Under the head of Rule 16, the collation was served and both the Haymakers and Chiefs enjoyed themselves as only they know how to do.

A FAMOUS COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

Rev. Erastus Rowley Made Well by Paine's Celery Compound.

As the school year opens, attention is directed to the oft-repeated advice of leading educators, warning teachers, parents and scholars against the fearful results of exhaustive brain work among young people.

To thousands of girls and boys, unnerved by the strain of school life, Paine's celery compound (which was first prescribed by America's greatest teacher, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth College) has been a blessing, making them well and strong, feeding the brain and nerves and enriching and purifying the blood.

The recent recommendation of Paine's celery compound by Principal Camp of New Haven and the equally outspoken praise of this greatest of remedies by ex-President Cook of the National Teachers' Association, are two of the thousands of such testimonials from parents and teachers throughout the country.

Nothing in the world so strengthens the weak, so readily restores lost nerve force, so surely makes the ailing and peevish young woman or growing boy well and cheerful.

And for the aged and infirm the whole world knows its wonderful curative powers. Rev. Erastus Rowley, president of the famous Kentucky Female College, writing to the proprietors of Paine's celery compound, says:

"I was for several years a sick man. My sickness was attended with constipation, with nervousness and insomnia, and the least excitement would cause palpitation of the heart. I have in the last three or four years used several widely advertised preparations. Finally I took Paine's celery compound, and I regard it as superior to all others, especially if used strictly as you direct. By using this I do not suffer from constipation, inability to sleep, or from palpitation of the heart as formerly. I am still using Paine's celery compound at times, and shall take pleasure in recommending it to others."

PLAINS TEAM WAS NOT IN IT.

THE Y. M. C. A. BALL TEAM WIN THEIR FIRST GAME AFTER A REST.

Burt Pitched a Splended Game, and Had Good Support All the Way Through—Townley Behind the Bat—The Score.

Scotch Plains is not in it with Plainfield when it comes to playing baseball, as the game at Scotch Plains Saturday afternoon showed, when the Y. M. C. A. boys of this city cleaned out their Scotch Plains opponents to the tune of 11 to 2. The game was not a close one as the Plainfield nine took such a lead in the first inning that the home team could not come anywhere near them.

Burt pitched a splendid game, and although he did not strike out as many as the other pitcher, only four hits were made off of his delivery and his cool head saved his team many a run. There were several new men on the team and all played well. Symons, at first, being a great success. Townley played his old game behind the bat, and taught the players from Scotch Plains that it was no easy task to steal second, Billy Lee being the only one to steal it safely.

There was one very novel feature of the game, which was probably never seen at a ball game before, and that was when Umpire Quereau appeared at his position near firstbase on horseback.

The Y. M. C. A boys were first at the bat. Corey took his first on balls, then a wild throw caught Townley on the hip and sent him limping to first, forcing Corey to second, while Symons hit one safe for first which filled the bases, and then Schenck put one over the centrefielder's head, bringing in the three runs and sending him to second. The next three went out in the one, two, three order.

In the next inning Burt was struck in the side and made the circuit on an error by the pitcher and a sacrifice by Corey. Singles by Burt, Thiers, Corey and Townley in the sixth inning netted three more runs, and in the next inning four more runs resulted from a base on balls to McKelvey and hits by Schenck, Bolsterle, Mulford, Burt, Thiers and Corey. That kind of batting was too much and in the next inning Johnson pitched for the Scotch Plains.

The Scotch Plains nine made their runs in the first and last innings.

The score by innings was:

Y. M. C. A.	3	1	0	0	0	3	4	0	0	—11
Scotch Plains	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	—2

He says: "I have used it for the past five years and consider it the best preparation of the kind in the market. It is as staple as sugar and coffee in this section. It is an article of merit and should be used in every household. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, corner Park and North avenues, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HIS WIND WAS ALMOST GONE

BOROUGH PRISONER TRIES TO ESCAPE BUT DOES NOT SUCCEED.

Louis Teller, Awaiting Trial, Endeavors to Escape By the Ventilator Shaft and Gets Stuck—Was Rescued Just in Time.

The borough lockup came very near being the scene of a death by hanging this noon, but the victim was saved just in time. The hanging was not done by the authorities, however, but in an attempt to escape by Louis C. Teller, who was locked up there last evening for being drunk and disorderly. Only last Saturday he was released from the lockup after a five days visit on the same charge.

At twelve o'clock Chief Marshal VanHorn locked up the jail and went home to dinner. About fifteen minutes later Mrs. William Sharkey, whose husband's blacksmith shop is next door, heard loud cries issuing from the jail. She called her husband and H. E. Cramer, who was in the shop on business, to come and see what was the matter.

Mr. Sharkey and Wm. Smalley, who heard the cries, thought that the prisoner inside was faking, but Cramer got a ladder and climbing up, looked in a window.

"What's the matter?" he called out.

There was a loud groan from the inside and then the prisoner screamed:

"I'm hung! For God's sake, help me, I'm hung!"

"Where?" Mr. Cramer queried.

"Over the partition between the cells," came the answer.

Those outside did not exactly see how that was possible, and most of the crowd, which had gathered in the meantime, thought that there was nothing the matter with the man. But the loud cries for help continued and a boy was sent to tell Marshal Doud to come and investigate the affair.

The Marshal started to come slowly, but when he heard what was the matter he soon appeared on the scene. When the jail was unlocked, they found that Teller had crawled halfway through the ventilator shaft between two cells, an opening six inches high by fourteen inches broad, and was hanging there, resting on his stomach on a two-inch strip. The poor man was in an exhausted condition, while his clothes were badly torn in his effort to pass through the small opening. He was finally released from his awkward position at about quarter of one.

Dr. D. C. Adams was sent for and examined the prisoner. His face was badly cut as was also his breast and he was so weak that he could hardly stand.

He told Chief Van Horn that he had only tried to get out to get a drink of water, but the general opinion is that Teller was trying to escape.

He had placed his chair on the bunk and in this way climbed into the opening, but as there was nothing in the opposite cell to catch hold of, he was unable to pull himself through.

As it was, when his rescuers arrived, they had to pull him back into his own cell.

He was brought before Judge Crosley this afternoon to answer to the charge of being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. He owned up that he was drunk but said that he had behaved himself. He received ten days in the county jail.

A Former Plainfielder Dead.

Somerville lost a prominent citizen this morning in the death of George W. Samborn, who was, at one time, a resident of this city. Mr. Samborn has recently been engaged in the sash and blind business, but about fifteen years ago served very efficiently as manager of Hope's Express in this city. He was very active in all public affairs and will be greatly missed by a host of friends that he leaves behind. He leave a wife. He returned only a short time ago from the Honeyman excursion to the Adirondacks.
